Bern, Switzerland (Thursday), Dec. 4.—A special bulletin from Moscow early today announced that the Soviet forces had launched a very heavy attack along the entire northern line from Kalinin to Leningrad in a terrific effort to crush the Reichswehr's threat against the capital before its preparations for a "final" attack had been completed.

Though few geographical details were given, first reports appear to indicate that the main fighting is in the Lake Ilmen district, where Russian forces are reported to be breaking through the German lines on the Volochok River.

Immediately north of Kalinin, several heavy cavalry charges are claimed to have enabled the Russians to swing out two long "arms" of a pincers to threaten the German spearhead directed against the town of Mjednoje, which has been in fixed positions for nearly six weeks. The spokesman stated that "first indications showed that at this point" the enemy had been forced to retreat after suffering particularly heavy losses.

Weather Favors Russians

At the Leningrad end of the line operations consisted mainly of counterattacks in the neighborhood of Tikhvin, where Soviet troops were claimed to have broken the German lines at two points. Weather along the entire length of this new offensive is stated to be favoring the Russians, with heavy snowfalls blocking almost all German mechanized operations.

Another powerful Red army offensive on the Moscow front was said to have hurled back Germany's ace panzer army 12 to 31 miles in the Tula sector anchoring the southern end of the defense arc before the capital, a United Press dispatch said.

In the Stalinogorsk sector southeast of Tula, where a German drive to flank the Moscow fortifications was turned back, mounted guards supported by tanks occupied a dozen villages as they pursued the retreating enemy southward, the Tass news

Wife, Baby in Alexandria

Churchill's Nephew Reported Missing in R.C.A.F. Operations

MR. AND MRS. ESMOND ROMILLY

Adventure-loving Esmond Romilly, 22-year-old nephew of Prime Minister Churchill, who eloped and brought his bride to Alexandria to live, has been reported missing in overseas operations of the Royal Canadian Air Force, it was learned here last night.

His wife, mother of a 9-month-old baby, received word from the Canadian air ministry at her Seminary Hill home yesterday that Pilot Officer Romilly has been missing since R. C. A. F. action last Sunday. The information did not tell where the action took place, nor what the operations were.

Romilly, who fought with the Loyalists in the Spanish civil war, joined the R. C. A. F. a year ago July. He last visited his home and friends here early last summer, just before leaving for England with a Canadian contingent.

Despite his youth, red-headed Romilly has had a long and tempestuous career.

At 15, Uncle Winston's nephew—on Mrs. Churchill's side—was expelled from a fashionable prep school for editing a magazine which proposed to expose the English public school system. At 16, he and his brother, Giles, published an autobiographical book dealing with all that can

President Roosevelt yesterday ordered that Turkey be supplied with American weapons of war under the Lend-Lease Act.

He thereby moved openly to strengthen a rampart that lies between Adolf Hitler and the oil fields of Iraq, Iran and the southern Caucasus, not to mention strategic Alexandria and the Suez Canal.

Mr. Roosevelt, in a White House statement, said the defense of Turkey was "vital" to the defense of the United States, and he directed Lend-Lease Administrator E. R. Stettinius, jr., to see that Turkey's defense needs were filled "as fast as possible."

Nonbelligerent Ally

The President's action formalized an arrangement, heretofore secret, whereby Great Britain had been transferring American lend-lease material—guns, trucks and the like—to Turkey since last May. Britain granted Turkey a huge credit for armaments some time ago, but has never been able to supply Turkey's needs from her own arsenals.

Turkey has been a nonbelligerent ally of Great Britain since the outbreak of the war. However, she also has a ten-year pact of friendship with Germany, signed last June just before Hitler violated his friendship pact with Soviet Russia and launched the "greatest battle in history."

First Noncombatant

American officials, apparently anxious lest Germany assume that Turkish neutrality had been compromised, emphasized that no new agreement had been entered into between the United States and Turkey. They emphasized also that Turkey had not asked for lend-lease aid. Shipments of American weapons to Turkey, it was said, will continue to be made through the British as in the past.

Here and in London, however, it was taken for granted that President Roosevelt must have received assurances that the Turks would not submit to Nazi pressure; that they would use the American-made wea-

Sharp Statement Indicates Talks With Kurusu Near Collapse

Japanese Press Vague

JAPANESE PRESS vaguely informs the public that President Roosevelt had asked certain questions about "Japan's intentions regarding current problems." Page 2.

A Barren Field

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

Secretary of State Hull yesterday charged Japan with pursuing a policy of conquest and military despotism and stated that seven months of negotiation have done nothing to bridge the broad gap between the Japanese position and that of the United States.

The Secretary's statement, the sharpest any American official has directed at Japan since the Pacific crisis reached its height, indicated that his conversations with Saburo Kurusu, Tokyo's "peace emissary" to Washington, are near collapse.

Hull made his denunciation of Japanese policy less than 24 hours after President Roosevelt had demanded of Tokyo a prompt explanation for the heavy concentration of Japanese troops in French Indo-China, which has aroused fear of an attack on Thailand, Burma or the Dutch East Indies.

Negotiations Barren, Hull Says

No reply to Mr. Roosevelt's strongly-worded request had been received last night. Also unanswered was the firm statement of America's position handed to Kurusu and Ambassador Nomura by Hull a week ago.

It was announced, meanwhile, that President Roosevelt has summoned Congressional leaders and experts on foreign policy to confer with him this morning.

Participating in the session will be Vice President Wallace, Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, ranking member of the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee; Senator Hill (Democrat), of Alabama, Senate majority whip; House Speaker Sam Rayburn, House Majority Leader McCormack, and Senator Sol Bloom, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Identical With Nazi Technique

At his press conference yesterday, Hull said that his frequent conversations with Ambassador Nomura, beginning last spring, and the more intensive discussions with Nomura and Kurusu in the last fortnight,

Highlights of Measure

Defense Labor Bill Requires Notice of Intention to Strike

Highlights of the drastic Smith defense labor bill passed by the House:

Requires an initial 30 days' notice of intention of defense plant employes to strike or of defense contractors to conduct a lockout.

Provides for a secret ballot of employes in a plant under Government supervision before a strike can be called.

Freezes closed and open shop conditions as they now exist in a defense plant.

Prohibits violence or intimidation of workers on defense contracts, interference with those desiring to work or use of nonemployes to picket or break strikes.

Outlaws jurisdictional walkouts, labor boycotts or sympathy strikes.

Violation of any of these restrictions were made subject to the injunctive power of the courts, and violation of injunctions would be subject to contempt of court action.

Violators further lose status under the National Labor Relations Act, and forfeit the right to Federal relief money or benefits under the Social Security Act, including unemployment compensation.

Unions which knowingly permitted felons, members of the Communist Party, the Young Communist League or the German-American Bund to serve as officers lose Wagner Act status.

Labor unions compelled to register with the NLRB with a full statement of membership, officers, dues, fees and finances, under penalty for failure of losing Wagner and Norris-LaGuardia act rights.

Ramspeck bill features retained give the National Defense Mediation Board statutory powers, with the right to take jurisdiction in disputes without certification, and authority to stay strikes 60 days during mediation.

House Clamps Down

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

In a surprise upheaval against defense-program delays, the House yesterday by a 252-to-136 vote approved rigid controls on defense labor and comprehensive regulation of unions.

The unexpected action swept the Smith bill to passage without so much as a vote on other pending and more moderate plans.

In the stampede to clamp down on defense labor disputes, the already drastic Smith bill was further tightened with amendments slapping at subversive elements in labor and use of "outsiders" to picket a plant.

Carried along in the sweep were "cooling-off" and "compulsory-mediation" provisions of the leadership-supported Ramspeck bill, embraced in his own successful bill by Representative Smith (Democrat) of Virginia.

But on the Ramspeck bill alone, with its plant seizure penalty for failure to settle disputes peacefully, the House never had a chance to vote. The Smith bill was the first plan up, and the House took it virtually intact except for the two strengthening amendments.

G. O. P. Almost Solid

An eleventh-hour maneuver by Smith paved the way for the G. O. P. swing that put over the measure. The Virginian dropped the plant-seizure provisions from his own bill as a concession to Republicans who solidly opposed "federalization."

On the final count, 123 Republicans joined with 129 Democrats in support of the bill. Only 24 Republicans voted with 108 Democrats, 3 Progressives and 1 American Laborite against passage.

House action a day ahead of schedule carried to the doorstep of the Senate probably the most far reaching restrictions on organized labor in legislative history, in the face of C. I. O. canvassing of members

Viereck Hinted As Witness Against Hill

Fish's Aide Seeks Hearing Prior to Nazi Agent's Trial

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Lawyers for George Hill—alleged Nazi propaganda keyman and secretary of Representative Hamilton Fish—yesterday said they looked for George Sylvester Viereck to be the star witness against Hill when he is tried on two perjury charges January 7.

The special grand jury on German agents accused Hill of swearing falsely that he had no contact with Viereck, when, it is alleged, the fact was Hill helped circulate propaganda material under Congressional frank.

Viereck also has been indicted on charges of failing to reveal when he registered as a German agent, that he was having his propaganda placed in the Congressional Record and mailed postage free under the franks of anti-interventionist Congressmen.

Hill's lawyers yesterday demanded that their client be placed on trial in the District Court before the case against Viereck is heard.

"We want this trial before the Viereck case," explained former Representative John O'Connor, also counsel for Fish when the grand jury summoned the Congressman, who has not yet appeared. "We apprehend that Viereck might be called as a witness against Mr. Hill. When Viereck is tried, he might be acquitted. Inquiry Told Of 30% Arms Subletting Fees

Remington Subcontracts Nets 'Defense Broker' Big Profit, Quiz Hears

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

A House subcommittee investigating profit-making techniques of the defense program's "middlemen" learned through witnesses yesterday that commissions of approximately 30 per cent were skimmed off subcontracts let in the last 12 months by the Remington Arms Co., Inc.

The subcontracts were for the manufacture of dies for the production of .30 and .50-caliber ammunition for the War Department, an operation for which the Government agreed to pay Remington $303,800 in fixed fees in addition to a royalty on every delivery of 1000 cartridges.

The subcommittee's investigators produced at the hearing a young ordnance officer who declared that if the subcontracts were approved by the commanding officer at the arms plant, and it appeared that such approval had been given, commissions paid to the middleman ultimately were charged to the Government.

The middleman, one of a class of operators subcommittee members have come to know as "defense brokers," was identified as Leon K. Shanack of New York City.

Shanack, accordnig to Representative Faddis (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, subcommittee chairman, started in the "brokerage" business with a bank balance of $1.25 and in a relatively short time accumulated

Currier's Home in Detroit Damaged by Explosion

Detroit, Dec. 3 (AP).—A terrific explosion, apparently caused by a black powder bomb, late tonight damaged the home of P. J. Currier, president of the C. I. O.-organized Currier Lumber Co., who recently was refused a Government contract to build defense homes in Wayne.

Mr. and Mrs. Currier were not at home at the time. In the house were Mrs. Currier's brother, Michael O'Conner, and his wife, their two children, Colette, 15, and Clara, 4, and Miss Mae Williams, a domestic. None was injured. The explosion, heard for blocks, broke windows in nearby homes.

D. C. May Get Cross-Town Bus Line Soon

Utilities Commission To Receive Concrete Plans in 2 Weeks

Concrete plans for at least one cross-town bus line, and possibly two, will be submitted within two weeks to the Public Utilities Commission, Chairman Gregory Hankin announced last night.

The surprise announcement was made by Hankin at a forum of citizens association delegates in the District Building. For years the cross-town bus issue has dominated demands of local citizens groups.

Hankin also told the gathering of neighborhood leaders that the public would be given an increased voice in the affairs of the Public Utilities Commission, moribund for almost a year because of two vacancies on the three-man board. Hankin's appointment was recently approved by the Senate.

One cross-town bus will start at Catholic University and travel westward, part of the way over Porter Street, Hankin told reporters.

A second line, which will be instituted if the first one succeeds, will probably run over Military Road.

Institution of the two lines is but a small part of a comprehensive Unlimited establishment of broading and rooming houses in Washington's residential areas will be permitted by the end of this week as an emergency measure to relieve the acute housing problem.

Over strong protests at public hearings yesterday, the District Zoning Commission voted unanimously to amend regulations and allow this type of commercial activity in "A" restricted and "A" semirestricted sections.

Only two minor changes were made in the original proposal—the maximum number of lodgers or boarders in each place was set at four and the expiration date of the new policy was extended from December 31, 1943, to December 31, 1945.

The latter change, it was explained, was made to conform with

An Arsenal of Democracy

Vine-Covered Cottage Is Real Menace to Hitler's Power

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 3.—A frame house on the banks of the smooth-flowing Olentangy River is one of America's answers to Hitler—perhaps a better and more menacing answer than the newest gun factory of the Nation's gigantic defense program.

The vine-covered, old-fashioned cottage at 115 West Dodridge Street, in the quiet residential section of this Midwestern city, doesn't look much like an arsenal of democracy.

But it is—a real arsenal, operated with all the drive, resourcefulness and downright efficiency of American industrial democracy.

It has all the refinements, meets all the objectives toward which the OPM has laboriously been driving big industry—three-shift, seven-day-a-week operation, "in-service" training, social and vocational rehabilitation, and production-plus from hand-me-down, even homemade, machine tools.

It stems from the idea and mechanical skill of Mr. and Mrs. Homer C. Price and five former convicts from the Ohio State Penitentiary, whom Price knew, trusted and wanted to help. Its end products every week are 350 finely machined, vital pump parts for Glenn L. Martin Co. B-26 bombers, destined for the American and British air forces.

The first public inkling of Homer Price's heart warming encounter with national defense came last summer, when a friend of Walter P. Rieter, vice president of the City National Bank in Columbus, sought to interest him in making a $6000 loan to a machine shop with a defense subcontract.

Rieter was dubious and asked for a balance sheet. The friend produced it, but it simply failed to make sense. The bank turned its corporate thumbs down.

The friend was insistent.

"Take a look," he pleaded.

Rieter and another vice president, Leo G. Donovan, finally agreed, and drove to the given address. There was no machine shop, just a house. Inside, however, there was an astounding picture.

On the ground floor, in a place which an architect once conceived as a dining room, tools had replaced the silverware. There was a bench lathe on the sideboard, and nearby were a punch press, a vertical milling machine, a drill press and two grinders.

In the breakfast nook there were two more grinders. In the kitchen

A 'Caroling Christmas'

Mass Singing to Accompany White House Tree Lighting

It was at President Roosevelt's own suggestion that the Christmas Eve community tree lighting exercises are being held in the White House grounds this year.

To stimulate and encourage that spirit of neighborliness which the Chief Executive had in mind when he proposed shifting the program to his own south lawn, The Post is going a step further—and hopes you will follow.

The plan is based on the fact that music is the universal language; that a song can bring folks together as nothing else can. It is hoped to make this a "caroling Christmas," a Christmas when the season's traditional melodies put that feeling of camaraderie which is only too acutely needed now.

"If we are all here" on Christmas Eve, 1941, the national tree will be illuminated in the White House grounds, President Roosevelt said at last year's program, held on the Ellipse. He and Mrs. Roosevelt would like to have it that way, he explained, because it would be more "homey."

The ceremonies will be held there two weeks from next Wednesday evening. Thousands of persons will attend, some of them because it is seldom nowadays that the grounds of the Executive Mansion are opened to the public.

Carols sung by that great choir of voices can make the event one never to be forgotten. Maybe they won't be sung with too great precision, and maybe they will be sung too loudly, but they will bring folks together, spiritually as well as physically.

At least, that is what many of the Capital's choral leaders have observed on being informed of The Post's plan to stimulate carol sing-

Husband Protests

Mother Gets Back Two Babies Father Brought From Georgia

Junior and John Michael Wise, tow-headed youngsters who have lately been residing in the District Receiving Home for Children, were yesterday returned to their attractive 24-year-old mother by Justice David A. Pine in District Court.

When custody of the baby boys, aged 23 and nine months respectively, was awarded to Mrs. Margaret Wise after an all-day court battle, her estranged young husband, Hudson Wise, jumped to his feet in chagrin at the court's verdict. He protested that he could give the judge a lot more evidence, but was assured that he would have another opportunity if he wanted a new hearing.

Mrs. Wise was previously given custody of the children by a Savannah, Georgia, Superior Court, but her husband brought them with him when he came to Washington a month ago. For this action, Wise was placed under arrest for kidnaping on November 28 and a hearing on this case is pending.

The 27-year-old father contended that he had taken his sons because their mother was no longer giving them proper care, but Justice Pine ruled that Wise was providing no material change for the better.

"It is an unfortunate and unhappy situation," the justice asserted, "and I suppose I could use even stronger language, that these two children can't have the love and care of both parents—but that is impossible as long as they refuse to come together.

"This young man saw fit to take the law into his own hands in bringing them to this city, but unless a substantial change in their condition could be shown this court should not interfere with the decision of the Savannah court awarding them to their mother."

Tokyo News 'Vague' On Roosevelt Query

But Troops Mass

Japanese Deny Threat To Thailand

By the United Press

Bangkok, Dec. 2 (Delayed)—The Japanese Embassy spokesman here insisted today that the growing Japanese forces in French Indo-China are no threat to Thailand but said war is possible in East Asia unless the United States accepts Japan's conception of the "new order."

Japan does not want war, he said, and its "outbreak depends on Washington."

The spokesman, inaugurating weekly conferences for representatives of Bangkok newspapers, reiterated that the concentration of Japanese troops in southern Indo-China is "intended for other purposes" than a threat to Thailand.

He did not explain what other purpose Japan might have in mind. Thailand is the only foreign territory adjoining the southern part of the Vichy French colony. To strike into China without crossing Thailand, the Japanese forces there would have to move to northern Indo-China. To attack British Malaya, they would have to be transported across the Gulf of Siam.

Japan has no aggressive intentions toward Thailand, the spokesman said. On the contrary, it "has definite intentions to assist Thailand in regaining her lost territories.

Observers speculated on what territories he had in mind. Ancient Thailand extended far beyond the present frontiers into Cambodia, now a French protectorate, other parts of Indo-China and British Malaya. Though Thailand was not entirely satisfied, the French ceded large areas in the Japanese-sponsored treaty of last spring.

Thailand ceded to Britain in 1909 Suzerain rights over the four dependencies of Kodah, Kelantan, Trengganu and Perlis, now unfederated Malay States.

The Japanese Embassy spokesman warned that "should Thailand misunderstand Japan's attitude, Japanese assistance might not be forthcoming."

Refers Obliquely To Questioning of Indo-China Move

By the Associated Press

Tokyo, Dec. 3.—Japanese newspapers vaguely informed the public today that President Roosevelt had asked certain questions about "Japan's intentions regarding current problems," and displayed reports that Australia was offering the United States bases for the alleged ABCD encirclement of this nation.

"United States asks explanation of the recent situation," one headline writer said over a dispatch which did not disclose the exact nature or tenor of questions put by the President to the Japanese envoys in Washington.

(The President asked for an explanation of Japan's movement of large new armed forces into Indo-China).

The Japan Times and Advertiser, controlled by the foreign office, republished an article from the newspaper Miyako entitled "Australia has nightmares about Japan—offers itself to United States for strategic bases.

Miyako charged Australia with an "increasingly aggressive" attitude which it was said the United States instigated.

Workmen wielding sledge-hammers continued to knock off ornamental fixtures from the city's light posts, removed traffic lane buttons and tore down iron fence railings in the campaign to gather scrap metal for Japanese war industries.

Besides the oblique comments on the President's personal intervention in the Japanese negotiations, the press criticized French Indo-Chinese officials for preventing native Annamites from contacting "the incoming touch of Japanese science, fine arts and thought."

The Times and Advertiser said that in view of a treaty calling for exchange of information and consultation between Thailand and Japan on matters of mutual interest, it was hoped that "aggressive or penetrating ambitions of third-power intrigue would be frustrated and Thailand left at liberty to decide her own policy and future."

The paper said further that "the allied press is trying to put the onus on Japan regarding the Thailand crisis, but it is quite clear that Japanese troops have been in Indo-China for months, that no aggression has taken place, and that the Thai premier himself has repudiated any reports of danger from Japan through Indo-China."

It contended that the truth of the matter was this:

"Third powers are covering their own military operations behind baseless allegations directed against Japan. By accusing Japan, other powers seek to excuse themselves of any responsibility."

In the same vein, the paper Hochi declared, "if anything ruptures in the Pacific, the Anglo-American powers should take the responsibility."

For the third successive day the papers emphasized widespread military preparations in southeastern Asia, and described these as the strategy of ABCD encirclement.

Yomiuri's naval editor ironically remarked that while the United States thinks she is restraining Japan, Japan has "immobilized" 80 per cent of the American fleet in the Pacific and thus given Germany a golden opportunity to conduct Atlantic naval offensives.

The Americans and British are casting "covetous eyes" on Soviet Russia's Pacific naval forces of more than 100 vessels, he declared.

Hull Denounces Japanese Policy

had never gone beyond the exploratory stage.

The negotiations have been barren, he made it plain, because the Japanese government has shown no disposition to modify its basic policies, which he described as being at complete variance with those of the United States.

Hull said Japanese policy rested on the use of force as an instrument of policy in every way—political, economic, social and moral—at home and in conquered territories.

The policy of force carries with it a doctrine of conquest of territory that belongs to others, subjugation of other peoples and the establishment of a military despotism for the most arbitrary control over the lives of the conquered people, he said.

He said this doctrine of conquest, as practiced by Japan in China, was identical with the Nazi technique in Europe.

Contrasted with the policy of force, he said the United States Government stands for basic doctrines of justice and equality of treatment among nations, especially in relation to commercial opportunities, and the peaceful settlement of international disputes.

All the conversations with the Japanese envoys have revolved around these two divergent conceptions, Hull said, and the gulf between the two has been so wide that the negotiations have never reached a stage where specific issues could be fruitfully discussed.

The other ABCD powers—Britain, China and the Dutch East Indies—were kept fully informed of the conversations and understood that general negotiations for a peaceful settlement throughout the Pacific would be initiated if the Japanese-American talks ever developed any sort of basic agreement, it was explained.

Without referring directly to the Japanese military activity in Indo-China, the Secretary said that utterances and actions of various governments during the conversations had made the outlook for a Japanese-American settlement even more difficult.

Contributing to the confusion, he continued, were the various suggestions for a partial settlement with Tokyo, instead of the broad, basic Pacific agreement the United States has been seeking.

Because of the months of discussion and increasing confusion, it was only logical that this Government should restate its position, Hull explained, and this was done in the broad, comprehensive document he handed the Japanese envoys a week ago last night.

When the Secretary was asked if Japan would have to stop bolstering its garrisons in Indo-China if the conversations with Kurusu are to continue, he replied that his outline of the American position and his account of the course of the conversations should furnish a fairly illuminating answer.

There was no information, the Secretary said, as to how soon a Japanese reply to his statement of a week ago or the President's request of Tuesday might be expected.

Hull was asked at his conference yesterday about a Japanese radio anouncement that the United States had leased three islands in the Indian Ocean from Great Britain and was preparing to establish air bases on them.

The Secretary, who ordinarily declines comment on foreign press and radio reports, said he was sure there was not a vestige of truth in the story and added that this was doubtless known by those who circulated the report.

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough said he did not believe he ought to consider this, but yielded to O'Connor's claim that he could not possibly be ready to try Hill next week, as urged by Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and Edward J. Hickey, Jr., of the Department of Justice propaganda squad.

Viereck's trial is already definitely set before Justice F. Dickinson Letts, over the opposition of Viereck's lawyers, who tried to have it heard by Justice Goldsborough. The date was changed yesterday from January 5 to som etime after the Hill case.

Justice Goldsborough indicated that the Hill case would be assigned to Justice James W. Morris, with whom he said he would consult. Justice Goldsborough himself presides in Criminal Court No. 1, but served nearly 20 years in Congress with Hill's employer, Fish, who is "backing up" his secretary, and 18 years with Hill's lawyer, O'Connor.

Grand Jury in Recess

Meanwhile, the special grand jury was in recess yesterday until Friday, when Fish has an appointment to tell what he knows about his relations with persons linked to the Nazi propaganda machine, the part of Nazi sympathizers in his Presidential nomination race last year, collection of money for an anti-interventionist committee he headed and about the mailbag affair which led to Hill's indictment.

Fish has been scheduled to testify yesterday, but delayed his appearance two days so he could attend a House Rules Committee meeting on the inter-American highway bill. The meeting was not held, because the rules chairman, Representative Adolph J. Sabath (Democrat), of Illinois, decided on a postponement.

Sabath told The Post last night that he probably would call the meeting for Friday, but that it would be in the afternoon and not in the morning. No meeting of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, to which Fish belongs, is set for Friday.

The President's Day

By International News Service

AH, MYSTERIOUS CONGRESS: Officially the President's day at his desk set a new record, provided an unprecedented mystery. Congressmen zipped in and out of his office all morning on this and that matter—not one of them would give so much as an inkling of what he said to the President, what the President said to him.

LATE FOR LEND-LEASE: While Senator Walter F. George, warmed the bench in Military Aide "Pa" Watson's office for a half-hour, Mr. Roosevelt was busy as a family of beavers at the White House. For a half-hour Mr. Roosevelt worked out the details, final arrangements and agreements of a new lend-lease angle for Turkey, to be announced to a startled world in the afternoon. Senator George, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, revealed only that he saw the President on "public business."

HUSH-HUSH: Representative Wright Patton, Texas Democrat, slipped in and out quietly, would barely admit that he had been there.

MAN WITHOUT A DISTRICT: Representative Thomas H. Eliot, ardent New Dealer, of the Harvard family, came in to tell the President what happened to him shouldn't happen to a Republican. When the districts were reapportioned after the census, Massachusetts lost the right to one Congressman, Eliot lost his district. Without a district to run in, Congressman Eliot will be returned to the 5-foot shelf unless he decides to compete with equally old Harvard Henry Cabot Lodge for the Senate seat.

House Group Votes 8 Billions For Army of 2 Million Men

8-Billion-Dollar Bill Would Also Double Arms Output

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

An additional defense outlay of more than 8 billion dollars, including funds to raise the Army to more than two million men and more than double arms production, was put before the House yesterday.

Recommended appropriations totaling $8,243,839,031—of which $8,109,945,898 would go directly to the Army, Navy or lend-lease program—were made public by the House Appropriations Committee. The supplemental supply bill will be taken up on the floor at noon and passed late today or tomorrow.

Marshall Testified

In approving the huge new expenditures, the committee turned down an Administration request, backed by the War Department, that Army and lend-lease funds form one large pool. Officials told the committee that of $4,439,574,646 proposed for arms, ammunition and other war equipment, $1,536,491,650 was slated for the American Army, $1,556,496,246 for lend-lease and the remainder was not allocated.

Instead, the committee voted that the $1,556,496,246 intended for Britain, Russia and other powers fighting the Axis be appropriated directly to the Lend-Lease Administration, and that arms totaling not more than a half billion dollars could be transferred by the Army to foreign governments via lend-lease.

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, advised the committee that the heavy arms outlay is necessary to build up and maintain a munitions industry that can produce the weapons to "defeat the Axis powers."

For "A Long-Time War"

"The question of the nationality of those who use the weapons," he said, in requesting that lend-lease and Army munitions production form one pool, "seems of relatively lesser importance than is the imperious requirement that they be immediately produced for such use."

The huge arms program, described by a naval official as "based on a long-time war," would expand the Army and the Navy as follows:

Add 27,095 commissioned officers, 5785 warrant officers and 277,026 enlisted men to the Army. This would raise the total strength by next June to about 200,000 officers and 1,840,000 men, officials said.

Create a mobile aircraft warning service, equipped with radio plane detectors, and completely staff fixed aircraft warning units at overseas bases.

Build seven complete and seven skeletonized new air bases in continental United States, and four complete and seven incomplete such bases at American overseas possessions. Sites for bases, to handle combat units to be organized under the expansion of the air force from 54 to 84 groups, have not yet been selected.

More Arms Plants

Mobilize the Philippine Commonwealth Army, which will consist of ten motorized divisions and a total of 160,000 troops, not counting strong units of the American Army stationed in the islands.

Provide 388 million dollars for construction of 20 to 30 new munitions plants and otherwise expand arms production. The program, according to Undersecretary of War Patterson, will more than double previously planned production rates.

Add 2020 planes to the naval air force, including 24 giant, four-engined marine-carrying transport planes costing $758,000 each.

Provide the money for building plants to construct big 60-ton tanks and funds for turning out such monsters. The pilot model of the tank will be unveiled Monday at Eddystone, Pa., the War Department announced yesterday.

President's Requests Cut

As reported by the House Committee, the bill is $57,485,525 below the amount recommended by President Roosevelt. Most of the cuts were taken from indirect defense estimates. They include the elimination of 15 million dollars for building Douglas Dam in Tennessee to expand power facilities for aluminum production; halving a proposed ten-million-dollar outlay for building so-called "flight-strip" emergency landing fields adjoining highways, and a reduction of $7,865,300 in funds for building airports.

The amount recommended for direct national defense expenditures will bring the total cash and contract authorizations provided for defense since July, 1940, to the vast sum of $6,990,254,096.

Publication yesterday of the secret hearings taken by the committee, censored when released, contained an official admission that the Navy is converting large merchant ships into aircraft carriers. Rear Admiral John H. Towers, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, said that the additional 2020 planes requested were partially to equip such carriers.

Testimony by OPM Director William Knudsen included estimates that 49 per cent of the Nation's manufacturing capacity will be devoted to defense production next year, compared with 7 per cent in 1940 and 25 per cent this year. He said that defense needs will take up at least 54 per cent of American production in 1943.

Gen. Marshall disclosed in his testimony that although Congress has provided funds for 25,800 combat planes for the Army, the Air Corps is now operating but 3600 such craft.

Rail Men Weigh Rises in Freight, Passenger Rates

Chicago, Dec. 3 (AP).—Railroad traffic executives today discussed the question of seeking higher freight rates and passenger fares to offset payroll increases expected to total about 300 million dollars a year.

The officials met behind closed doors in the wake of an agreement announced yesterday in Washington providing wage increases for 1,250,000 organized employes of the carriers. It was estimated that the upward revision of the pay scales would add between 300 million dollars and 325 million dollars to the railroads annual operating expenses.

Commons Grumbling Over Libya

By the Associated Press

London, Dec. 3.—The first grumbling about the inconclusive British offensive in Libya was heard in Parliament today and the ministry of information countered with a statement acknowledging stiff Axis opposition but declaring that R. A. F. superiority overhead "augurs well for the future."

Capt. L. D. Gammans, a Conservative, said he intended to ask War Secretary H. D. Margesson in Commons "if he is aware that optimistic statements made by military spokesmen in Cairo in the first days of the Libyan campaign regarding destruction of the Axis armored force did harm both at home and abroad."

The ministry's War Review said that fragments of three armored divisions were standing between the British forces inside Libya and the Port of Tobruk to the north, but acknowledged that these were "substantial" and that "operations are far from having reached a conclusion."

But one of the primary objectives had been to weaken Axis defenses along the Egyptian border between Salum and Sidi Omar, and this had been done by the southern British sweep which turned north once it was well inside Libya, the ministry said.

"Most of the strong enemy posts between Salum and Sidi Omar have been reduced and the remaining coastal defenses are isolated. The enemy has lost his advanced supply bases.

"We have still to deal with substantial enemy forces south and west of Tobruk and remnants of his armored divisions may still give trouble.

"Local air superiority, which the R. A. F. working in close cooperation with the army has achieved, augurs well for the future."

Of the present lull, the Review said "naturally after virtually a fortnight's intensive fighting the attacking British forces which have covered long distances across the western desert require a brief interval in which to refit tanks and regroup formations whose dispositions have become confused in the fluid battle in which contending forces frequently have been interwoven."

British Hold 'Important Card' at Gulf of Sirte

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Dec. 3.—Britain's desert army, which still has an important card to play in the battle for Libya, reorganized its battered tank units tonight for another push against Gen. Erwin Rommel's re-formed armored divisions blocking the way to besieged Tobruk.

Both sides were reported undergoing a refitting period, and this lull was broken only by the heavy explosives dropped on Axis lines by the R. A. F.

Here is the military picture as presented by the British:

The "important card" is a British imperial force now standing on the Libya-Tripoli coastal road somewhere south of Bengasi to cut Axis reinforcements from Tripoli while the interior units whittle down the Germans and Italians.

This unit raced 300 miles to the Gulf of Sirte, far to the west of the tangled Libyan armies, and the British are not saying much about it. Nor have they given a hint of its strength.

In the Libyan interior, two Nazi divisions sit in a triangle formed by Rezegh, Bir El Hamed and Zaaran astride the corridor to Tobruk which the British established November 25 only to lose it a few days later. The Germans thus have west-east communications from Bengasi to the Salum-Halfaya sector on the Egyptian border.

Infantry Gets Rest

The men of Tobruk hold Ed Duda, 10 miles outside their own fortifications and only about 5 miles west of the Nazi positions at Zaarran.

To the south, an irregular British line stretches down to El Gobi, then turns eastward to the Egyptian border near Sidi Omar. An Associated Press front correspondent said the British infantry was getting a badly needed rest behind its tanks on this long line.

British salients driven north and east of the El Gobi line apparently have been withdrawn for a rest and a general military inventory.

These scattered detachments had been reported either in or about Gambut and Bardia during the first stages of the offensive, but the very nature of the swift desert fight saw these positions constantly changing hands. Both sides recaptured prison camps and field hospitals, where their own men were interned, only to lose them again.

The British have not disclosed their casualties in this roving two-week-old fight, but a spokesman said they were not as heavy as had been feared.

Since the offensive began, November 18, the British said they had captured more than 7000 prisoners. Many arrived in Egypt today, including a senior German field officer and many Nazi airmen. They were taken out of Libya by sea, truck and plane.

(The Germans said yesterday that 9000 British prisoners had been taken by the Axis forces and also reported the destruction or capture of 814 tanks and 127 planes. Berlin claimed today that a New Zealand division had been wiped out.)

Axis positions on the Salum-Halfaya area of the Egyptian border admittedly were very strong, but the British said they still were "mopping up" in that area and were counting on reestablishment of the junction with Tobruk to the west to aid that operation.

Despite bad weather the R. A. F. reported its planes scored direct hits on Axis motor columns and supply dumps throughout Libya, including Bardia which the British once claimed they had captured. Other objectives in the El Gobi, El Adem and Derna areas were attacked.

Bengasi and other targets in the Gulf of Sirte area where the long-range British desert column was operating also were bombed. Five Axis tankers were set on fire in the Gulf of Sirte, the communique said.

Out in the Mediterranean four direct hits were observed on a 7000-ton Axis tanker which was being escorted by a destroyer, the R. A. F. reported.

'I Saw Tanks Disappear In Clouds of Smoke'

Cairo, Dec. 3.—The effectiveness of R. A. F. attacks on armored forces in the Libyan desert was told today by observers who have been permitted to accompany the raiders. One told this story:

"There it was. A little more than 1500 feet below we could see hundreds of men running to lorries, tanks and armored cars, which already were beginning to move and scatter. They were too late. We were upon them. As they started to move, spreading for all the world like a herd in stampede, our observer pulled the bomb release.

"For perhaps five seconds nothing happened. Then the Blenheim shook violently and rocked like a small boat in the sea. Craning my neck, I saw the tanks disappear in clouds of dust and smoke. Shells were bursting all around, and light flak (antiaircraft fire) was coming up so near you felt you could reach out to the little purple flames and puffs of smoke. But it all stopped abruptly, and the next moment we were gone.

"Climbing steeply as we were, I was able to look from the upper windows of the cockpit and see our formation all in precise position, and the background and endless expanse of desert, with a great area of smoke and flame where there had been an enemy 'pocket of resistance.'"

Inquiry Told Of 30% Arms Subletting Fees

The technique of the defense broker was revealed to the subcommittee by Mario A. Besozzi and Carl Gitzendanner. Besozzi is secretary-treasurer of the Transcontinental Machine & Tool Co. Gitzendanner holds a similar position with the Greenwich Machine & Tool Co. The factories are located in New York, exactly a block apart.

Both firms figured in the subcontracts. Besozzi's company received 5 per cent of the value of purchase orders from Remington without having to go to the trouble of making dies. The job of manufacturing was accomplished by Gitzendanner's company.

This, said the witnesses, is how it worked:

Shanack brought Remington checks to Transcontinental. Besozzi said at first he thought the work was to be done ir his shop. Later he learned it was not necessary for him to do any manufacturing. He was required merely to indorse Remington checks and make out Transcontinental checks in the amount of Remington checks, less 5 per cent.

Shanack then went down the street one block to the Greenwich company. There he and officials of the firm agreed on a price for manufacture of the dies. Payment was made with Transcontinental checks For his trouble, Shanack was given checks on the Greenwich concern.

These checks to Shanack generally were in small sums. There were ten of them. According to the subcommittee's records, they added up to $5037. The Transcontinental Co.'s 5 per cent totaled $1126, while for manufacturing dies, Greenwich was paid $15,899.

In one hour's public hearing yesterday, the subcommittee was able to cover only a part of Shanack's operations. H. Ralph Burton, the chief investigator, produced for the record photostatic copies of 17 sets of other checks, relating to further triple-play transactions.

What defense broker profits these documents support and what methods were used to secure "commissions" are scheduled to be revealed today and at subsequent hearings. Burton yesterday hinted at more substantial sums and more far-reaching brokerage operations when he told reporters:

"We've just begun. We've only scratched the surface."

The total of Remington checks thus far in the subcommittee's record is $65,000, an inconsiderable sum in comparison with the tremendous amounts involved in the arms company's contracts with the War Department in connection with the construction and operation of plants at Lake City, near Independence, Mo., and at Denver, for which the dies were made.

Subcommittee members, however, view the Shanack deals as representative of operations of defense brokers in industrial centers in the East and Middle West.

Defense officials, it was reported last night, are to be called by the subcommittee to explain why "prime" contractors and subcontractors could not have been brought together without the agency of defense brokers.

The subcommittee launched its hearing yesterday with the testimony of Leon Simon, owner-manager of the Hydramatic Machine Corporation, New York, that a representative of the Remington company had suggested increasing the bid it contemplated making for manufacture of ammundition dies. Under a previous contract with the arms firm, Simon said, his company had produced 3200 dies at $3 each for a "good 25 per cent profit."

Burton asked the witness if it were not true that Rene Erkins, Remington field representative, urged "you to raise the price of the die you made for $3 to $5.75."

"He didn't urge us," replied Simon, "he wanted to help us out on a previous loss."

"Answer yes or no," demanded Burton.

"Yes," Simon responded, but explained later that while the second die was more expensive to produce than the first the expense "wouldn't warrant a price of $5.75."

Lieut. Rex Howard, who acted as legal adviser in the negotiation of several Remington contracts, replied "yes" when Burton asked him if the higher price paid to Simon's firm and Shanack's commission had ultimately to be paid by the Government "over and above" the munition firm's fees.

One of three Remington contracts copied from War Department records and submitted by Burton provided for a fixed fee of $100,000 for procurement of manufacturing equipment, plus fees of $2 and $3.60 for each delivery of 1000 cartridges. The contract also carried lump sums of $400,000 and $1,100,000 for "management service" and the "training of key personnel." Estimates of the costs of procuring equipment and operation totaled $95,109,000.

In the two other contracts, fixed fees per 1000 cartridges ranged from $2 to $11. Operations and other costs covered in these contracts were over 150 million dollars. One of the contracts contained a clause intended to facilitate advance payments to "third parties."

Rigid Labor Bill Passed by House

Before the final vote, Majority Leader McCormack admonished members "not to do anything in haste you might repent later."

"You are not out for a kill," he said. "I am for legislation but not for punitive legislation."

Heedlessly the House pushed on, approving on voice, division and teller votes and two roll calls a more sweeping bill than any committee considered.

Speaker Rayburn announced: "The ayes are 252 and the nayes are 136." There was some applause but no demonstration. In a few minutes the House was cleared.

One Administration lieutenant said he felt reasonably certain the President would veto the bill if it passed the Senate in the same sweeping form.

Leaders said privately yesterday's House action was influenced by flood-tide resentment against John L. Lewis and unwillingness of labor leaders to support any of the more moderate legislative proposals.

Fate of the Smith bill in the Senate was confused by two other defense labor bills already reported by the Senate Judiciary and Labor Committees, tentatively scheduled for Senate action beginning Monday.

Both far less stringent than the Smith bill, they are: The Connally bill, empowering the President to take over strike-bound defense facilities and freeze labor relations, except wages, therein. The Ball bill, relying on bargaining, conciliation, mediation and voluntary arbitration similar to the Railway Mediation Act, to settle defense strikes.

The Senate in the past has been more alergic to defense strikes than the House, whose action yesterday assured at the minimum a strong conference bill.

The Smith bill, in addition to more severe curbs, provides a grand total of 90 days' "cooling off"—an 'nitial 30 days' notice and 60 days while the dispute is in mediation.

The House obviously was in a mood to adopt any defense labor restrictions offered as the Smith bill moved before the House and amendments were offered to "perfect" it.

The first amendment, by Representative Hobbs (Democrat), of Alabama, prohibited importation of nonemployes either as pickets or strikebreakers in a dispute. This was approved by a 105-to-68 teller vote.

Next Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, offered his amendment to withdraw Wagner act benefits from unions having Communists, Bundists or felons among their officers. This was adopted viva voce.

'Good' Foreigners Won't Be Interned, First Lady Says

New York, Dec. 3 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said today she had been assured by the State Department and the Department of Justice that no foreigner with a good record would be placed in a concentration camp if the United States declared war.

She told a symposium on "recent immigrants and national defense" that she had been moved to check the two Governmental departments on the possibility when two Japanese, one a resident of the United States for 50 years and another a native of this country, queried her about it.

"I hope that here in the United States, we will never see a concentration camp," she said. "I know it is needed some times. But I hope that we here do not get hysterical enough to take people who love liberty dearly and place them in such camps."

I'm STUMPED!
Look, Boss—if you expect me to tell the world all about Bond overcoats in one short headline, here's my pencil—you write it. Yes, I know folks don't read details. If they did, this job would be a cinch.
Go ahead, tell 'em we've got a selection so large it'll make their eyes pop. Tell 'em every coat is Rochester styled and tailored in our own workrooms. Tell 'em how much this means in smooth fit—that "top-hat" air which always distinguishes Rochester-made overcoats. Tell 'em about all those richly woven woolens—so luxuriously warm, and how lightly they rest on a fellow's shoulders. And the huge line-up of sizes and models. Tell 'em how they collect cash dividends because we cut out all wasteful, in-between costs—by making Bond clothes in our own plants.
There it is, Boss. If you can squeeze that corking story into a few words up at the top, we ought to be swamped. Oh! yes—and don't forget to make it plenty strong that Bond prices have not been raised!

Vine-Covered Cottage Becomes Menace to Hitler

the sink was full of wrenches and the drain board was graced by a lathe. Standing at the old, cast-iron coal stove was Mrs. Price, cooking up something for Hitler that wasn't being made in a stew-pot.

Clothed in white overhall jumpers, she was working at another lathe, anchored to the stove top. The Prices and the bankers went upstairs to what was once the living room, but is now the office. It opened onto what used to be a bedroom, but which was now filled with two lathes, one perched on the dresser.

Tools Made at Home

Rieter and Donovan looked for the makers' plates on the machine tools. On most of them, however, the names were absent. The bankers asked where the tools came from.

"We made most of them ourselves," said Homer Price.

They were made either from scratch, he explained, or were built up out of old parts, from worn-out, broken down and discarded machines.

The bankers sat down and Price told his story.

Last spring, he explained, he was rounding out his twenty-second year as superintendent of the machine shop at the Ohio State Penitentiary. He was approached by an agent of the Pump Engineering Co., of Cleveland, who asked him to take a subcontract. On March 10 he signed a $30,000 contract for a pump end fitting and secured a leave of absence from his supervisory position in the prison.

He Borrowed $3000

He had a few hundred dollars as a nest egg. With this and $3000 borrowed from a friend he started his shop, building it from a bench drill press and bench lathe which he had bought in 1923 to make outboard motors for his wife and daughter's hobby of boat racing. He had sold a few motors on the side and his work had thus come to the attention of the Cleveland concern.

With this as a starter, Price began looking around for more machine tools. They were not to be found. Instead of begging OPM for a priority rating, Price began building and converting his own from second-hand stuff that he was able to pick up.

After some weeks of work, he found he could double his original $30,000 contract, provided he could borrow $000 for equipment. Hence the request to the City National Bank.

For employes, Price hired five former convicts whose work he knew at the State Penitentiary. He supplemented his force with several engineering students at Ohio State University.

And He Got the Loan

The bankers were impressed. They helped draw up a balance sheet, then promptly effected the loan.

In the few months that have intervened, Price has increased his subcontract to $60,000, paid back half the loan. He expects to pay back the rest by the middle of this month.

At present, the Homer Price Machine Shop employs 22 persons. Only two of the former prisoners are left. The other three, to Price's great satisfaction, have found better jobs.

Living up to the spirit and letter of President Roosevelt's request that no machine tool be left idle for even an hour, Price works his small force seven days a week, on three eight-hour shifts a day.

In all, he has 17 machine tools, including two drill presses and two milling machines under a tarpaulin outside the kitchen door.

Assembly Line Job

The assembly line begins at this point, where the rough forgings are dropped by trucks from the Columbus Forge and Iron Co.

The rough spots are knocked off by the machines outside. Then the production lines goes through the kitchen, where other employes and Mrs. Price, who works a full shift besides running the "office," take a crack at them on the lathes, and then send them on for further machining in the erstwhile dining room.

The line then winds upstairs to the bedroom where the final polishing is done.

Price, happiest when he is at the machines, is reluctant to talk of what he has done or even to admit that he has accomplished something unusual. Orphaned at 11, he was brought up in an Odd Fellows home in Springfield, Ohio. At 16 he went to work here as a machinist and seven years later became a tool maker. During the World War I he made tools and guages for the Navy. He took the job of superintendent of the prison machine shop in 1919.

Ohio is filled with great factories proudly flying a blue pennant with the letter "E" on it, the Navy's award for "Excellence" in production.

The Homer Price Machine Shop doesn't have one of these pennents. But perhaps there is another flag for it that is even more appropriate. It has red and white alternating stripes, and white stars on a blue field.

Carols to Be Sung At White House

ing this Christmas.

In order to do its part The Post will print a leaflet containing the words of the four carols that will be sung on the White House program, as well as several more of the better known ones. These will be for general distribution among all organizations and individuals who wish them.

It expects to print news of the activities of church, business, professional, citizens', children's and other groups that plan to sing carols throughout Washington neighborhoods on Christmas Eve, following the hite House celebration.

Plan Is Warmly Indorsed

Among those who have warmly indorsed the plan and are cooperating are Mrs. Eva Whitford Lovette, music chairman of the committee on arrangements for the National Community Christmas Tree; R. Deane Shure, president of the D. C. Choirmasters' Association, and Mrs. Edmund Green, choral director of the Takoma Park Women's Club.

As tentatively drawn up, the program for Christmas Eve in the White House grounds including the following carols: "Joy to the World." "O Come, All Ye Faithful" (Adeste Fidelis), "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear," and "Silent Night." The program will begin at 5 p. m.

Notice of publication of the carol leaflet, and instructions for obtaining it, will be given later.

Churchill Nephew Reported Missing

happen to two youths between the ages of 16 and 18.

The next year he joined the foreign brigade in Spain, and after five months of fighting Franco, returned to London and fell in love with Jessica Freeman-Mitford, sister of Unity, described by Hitler as the perfect Aryan girl, and of Diana, wife of Britain's Fascist leader, Oswald Mosely. Jessica's own sympathies were allied with Esmond's.

The couple decided to meet in Spain and get married. Her father, Lord Redesdale, however, objected rather strenuously. All the facilities of Scotland Yard and the consular service were brought into service to block the wedding, and even a British destroyer was called to carry Jessica safely home.

But all the lord's horses and all the lord's men were to no avail. Jessica became Mrs. Romilly in Barcelona, and they sailed to America to start life anew.

They came to New York, and Esmond quickly landed a high-salaried post writing advertising slogans, except that one was punny without being funny and he was fired. So they came to Washington, and knocked on Capital doors trying to sell silk hosiery, without much success.

Well, Romilly took a $35 course in mixing drinks, passed with high honors, and got himself a job in a Florida smart spot as bartender. Jessica, called "Decca" by her friends, went along as bookkeeper.

The winter season over, the couple came back to Washington, where they made a host of friends, and took up permanent residence in Seminary Hill, Alexandria. Shortly afterward, Romilly enrolled in the R. C. A. F.

Foundation to Study "Human Problems"

Vichy, Dec. 3 (AP).—The government has announced establishment of the "Alexis Carrel Foundation for Study of Human Problems," which will be headed by the well-known French scientist, who now is in occupied France.

New Funds Bill Would Aid D.C. In Four Ways

By Charles Mercer
Post Staff Writer

Provision of the eight-billion-dollar third supplemental defense appropriation bill, as reported by the House Appropriations Committee yesterday, would benefit District government employes and make improvements in the metropolitan area in these ways:

1. A total of 3158 District municipal employes would receive salary increases totaling $116,015 during the 1942 fiscal year.

2. Potomac bridges and the new War Department building in Arlington County would be linked by a system of roads and approaches designed to facilitate the flow of traffic.

3. St. Elizabeths Hospital would receive new equipment valued at $40,000, and $8900 would go for increased personnel in the tubercular unit of Freedmen's Hospital.

4. For additional guards and janitors at the Washington National Airport $86,280 would be appropriated.

District government employes, included in a group with 223,332 Federal workers, would receive salary increases under a $11,612,894 amount appropriated to meet the costs of the Mead-Ramspeck Uniform Pay Promotion bill. Carrying out of the terms of the Mead-Ramspeck bill have been held up since its passage due to a lack of funds.

Most Raises Retroactive

A majority of the pay increases would be retroactive from last October 1, the committee report pointed out. Thus 2,798 District government employes would receive immediate salary increases upon enactment of the measure.

The bill specifies that of the total $116,015 in local government pay increases $108,755 would be drawn from the District's general fund; $4185 from the water fund, and $3075 from the highway fund.

It was revealed that Thomas H. MacDonald, commissioner of the Public Roads Administration told the committee in closed hearings:

"There will be a very large expenditure from the access road fund that will be required to provide access roads for the new War Department Building.

"A very elaborate system will be necessary to serve the new building. It is almost like providing highways for a city of 100,000 people."

He declared that a serious traffic situation already exists in the District approaches to Virginia and that the new War Department Building—largest in the world—will aggravate the problem.

No Specific Earmarking

While the bill earmarks no specific amount for the War Department roads construction, it carries an appropriation of 74 million dollars in cash and contracts of 50 million dollars additional for access roads to Federal defense areas.

The need of increasing the mechanical facilities of St. Elizabeths Hospital was described to the committee by Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of the institution. A request for 12 additional employes to enable increased use of the tuberculosis ward at Freedmen's Hospital was advanced by the hospital's director in chief, Dr. E. Edward Jones.

John Groves, manager of the Washington National Airport, requested the committee for $86,280 to hire 36 additional guards and janitors.

In an unusual request the committee report asked the House to reconsider the case of David Lasser, former president of the Workers Alliance, who was by name eliminated from the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act approved by the House last July 1.

Lasser told the committee during its hearings that due to the discrimination he has had difficulty in securing employment. The report stated that the Dies Committee had cleared him of all charges of affiliation with the Communist Party. Lasser resigned his presidency when the Workers Alliance "became "Communist dominated," the report said he told the committee.

Rooming House Move Approved

Only Few Attend

In spite of widespread interest in the plan—proposed several weeks ago—fewer than 20 persons appeared at yesterday's morning.

Immediately after assembling testimony—the bulk of which was in opposition to the idea—the commission went into executive session and reached its decision in record time.

In addition to individual and civic group protests—answered on almost every occasion by Commissioner Guy Mason with: "Where are you going to put all these new people—on the roofs?"—the commission received an opposition vote from the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

The park agency contended the move would be unwise unless a "great majority" of property owners in the affected communities were in favor.

License Not Required

In every instance, objectors to the plan claimed that property values in their respective neighborhoods would suffer if rooming establishments were allowed to open and "take in anybody."

In limiting the number of roomers, the commission avoided placing the prospective new establishments in the "typical" boarding house class.

Operators of the residential rooming houses will not be required to take out the $5 annual license fee required of places housing ten or more persons. They also will not come under the fire escape regulation, which applies only to houses accommodating ten or more persons above the first floor.

Home owners who plan to take in boarders under the new setup, however, must apply to the District building inspector for a special certificate of occupancy before they can qualify. There is no charge for this permit.

A one-day public notice must be published before the change becomes effective. This, it was announced, will be done today or tomorrow.

Delano Signs Protest

Views of the Park and Planning Commission were expressed in a letter received by the zoning officials and signed by Chairman Frederic A. Delano. He said the park group concurred with a statement by Harland Bartholomew, zoning consultant, which read:

"Certainly there are many, many dwelling structures in other districts that could well be used for boarding and lodging houses with benefit to owners, as well as to the city as a whole. Passage of this amendment would greatly hasten the creation of blighted districts in Washington."

There were only six persons who voiced approval of the program.

Ringgold Hart, local attorney, said he favored the change as an individual and cited the case of a widow who has met adverses because she has been unable to either sell a large dwelling nor open it as a boarding house because of its location in a fashionable residential area.

Other spokesen for the change were Albert Hamilton, representing the Washington Socialist Party; Lawrence Koenigsberger, an attorney who lives in Chevy Chase; Harold Clum, a Government worker, who cited the "crying need" for housing facilities here; Michael Kane, an attorney, who recalled that the Government is now condemning land under law for housing purposes, and Miss Rose Johnston, a War Department worker, who said Federal employes away from home "liked to find comfortable, nice quarters."

Opponents Listed

Among those appearing in opposition were:

Joseph Sanders, of the Federation of Citizens Associations; Edward Springer, of the Forest Hills Citizens Association; J. M. Heiser, of the Citizens Association of Chevy Chase, D. C.; Frank P. Leetch, Georgetown Citizens Association; M. R. Wilkes, American University Park Citizens Association, who spoke also for the Wesley Heights group.

The Zoning Commission also ruled that public hearings will be necessary before establishment of proposed off-street parking facilities in the so-called "fringe" districts.

Heretofore, to establish such facilities—in districts just beyond the downtown business area—only approval of the commission was necessary, without public hearings.

Wholesale establishment of "fringe" parking lots or garages is proposed in the 44-million-dollar Whitehurst highway planning survey.

Pitcher Convicted Of Draft Violation

Athens, Ga., Dec. 3 (AP).—William Austin (Cy) Moore, former big league baseball pitcher, was convicted today of striking a Selective Service Board chairman in violation of the act.

Federal Judge Bascow S. Deaver imposed a $500 fine and Moore posted a $1000 appeal bond.

Moore admitted striking Fred W. Auld, Elbert County chairman, in an argument over his classification, but declared his action was prompted by insinuations that his father and mother had falsified records as to their dependency on their son for support.

Moore pitched for the Brooklyn Dodgers and other major league clubs.

All Paris Warned To Expect Reprisals

German General Demands Surrender Of Soldiers' Slayers

By the Associated Press

Paris, Dec. 3.—Lt. Gen. Ernst Von Schaumburg, German military commander of Paris, tonight threatened the entire population with "the most rigorous of reprisal measures" if they fail to deliver within a week the persons guilty of recent attacks on German soldiers.

The order was issued after an attack last night, in which a German medical corps officer was shot while walking on the Boulevard Magenta.

[The German medical officer was shot while Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering was playing host to a Franco-German collaboration banquet, a United Press dispatch said.

[The officer was only slightly wounded. His assailants shot him with a pistol and escaped. Police chased them several blocks and said some Communist tracts and a hat dropped by the assailants might provide some clues to their identity.]

Von Schaumburg demanded surrender of the perpetrators of this attack and of a bombing Saturday night in the Montmartre, in which two Nazi artillerymen were killed and a number of others injured. The blast was in an establishment requisitioned by German soldiers.

Earlier Von Schaumburg had taken repressive measures against a fourth Paris district, ordering a 6:30 p. m. curfew for the Tenth Arrondissement, a working class ward. It was here that the medico was shot. Streets were ordered cleared, stores and public places closed and subway stations were locked up.

Similar action had been taken previously against Montparnesse, the Latin Quarter and Montmartre.

The recent attacks on the German soldiers were made in defiance of a previous warning that such incidents would "cause grave consequences for Paris population."

Gen. Von Schaumburg's warning to the population said:

"Parisians: Following announcement of the immediate measures I have taken today, I grant the population of Paris a respite expiring December 10, 1941, to discover the authors of the attack committed November 29 in the Rue Championnet with the aid of an explosive bomb and the aggression with a revolver in the Boulevard Magenta the night of December 2-3, 1941, to which a German officer of the medical corps was the victim.

"If this deadline expires without any result being obtained, the military commander in France will take the most rigorous of reprisal measures.

"Paris, December 3, 1941.

"Commander of Greater Paris.

"Schaumburg, Generalleutnant."

Meanwhile, French Vice Premier Admiral Jean Darlan left Vichy for Paris. In Paris his mission was described as being one of a series of French-German interviews in the wake of the conference which Darlan and Marshal Petain had two days ago with Marshal Goering.

Wilson's Ship Nearly Went Ashore in Fog

MAURICE A. BABCOCK

By the Associated Press

Marion, Mass., Dec. 3.—"I don't think it ever got in the papers," drawled white-haired Maurice A. Babcock, recently retired keeper of historic Boston Light, "but when President Wilson was returning from Europe in 1918, his ship nearly went ashore at Thatcher's Island, off Gloucester, where not my first job in the lighthouse service."

Dressed in soiled dungarees and a green plaid shirt, the one-time chief of the oldest beacon in the Western Hemisphere was fixing an old stove in a weather-beaten house by the sea.

"It was a nasty night," he recalled, as he poked about the first on-shore living quarters he has had in almost a quarter century. "A southeast storm was howling. I was the third assistant at Thatcher's Light, and I was standing watch in the signal house, keeping the old fog horn going.

"Through the rain, I made out the outline of a big ship with what seemed to be a convoy ahead—and they were heading right for the island. We could hear signals from them as though they were trying to get an answer from someone.

"Our horn was going like mad all the time, and I guess they must have heard us finally, because suddenly they backed up. It wasn't until dawn, when we could see the big ship off shore, that we knew it was the President's boat, bound for Boston."

That was a long speech for 53-year-old Babcock, one of the last of the civilian lighthouse keepers, who was retired on disability soon after the old lighthouse service was consolidated with the United States Coast Guard.

Usually he dismisses questions about his experiences in four New England lighthouses—including 15 years as keeper of Boston Light—with a twinkle of his brown eyes and a noncommittal "there was nothing much—just routine."

Navy Takes Over Hotel at Old Point Comfort

Plans to take over the Chamberlin Hotel at Old Point Comfort, Va., for housing transient officers and families of officers of the Army and Navy were disclosed yesterday by the Navy Department.

Because of housing conditions around Norfolk, the department said it was proposed to operate the hotel by contract with a hotel company or on a cooperative basis with rates to be fixed to cover all maintenance costs.

Acquisition of the hotel, built in 1928 and used since principally as a resort hotel, will aid considerably in relieving the housing situation for families of officers by providing 250 double rooms, 18 apartments and domitory space, the department said.

The department said the plan would not interfere with civilian traffic across the Fort Monroe Reservation, on which the hotel stands, or with boat and ferry services at Old Point.

Nazi Raider Scored Direct Hit On Anzac Ship, Survivors Say

By the Associated Press

Melbourne, Australia, Dec. 3.—The 9400-ton German surface raider Steiermark scored a direct hit on the 6650-ton Australian cruiser Sydney in an engagement November 19, and then was set fatally ablaze by a broadside of the sinking warship, German survivors said today.

Two boatloads of men from the crew of the raider, also known as the No. 41 and the Kormorran, were landed last week at Carnarvon, West Australia, authorities reported. They were said to total 320, some of them wounded. All were made prisoners.

No survivors of the Sydney have been reported.

The mystery surrounding the missing Australian cargo steamer Mareeba, of 3472 tons, was solved by an announcement that she had been sunk by the Steiermark. Relatives were advised that 48 members of the crew were missing.

Prime Minister John Curtin gave this story of the Sydney's sinking after questioning of German prisoners:

"The Sydney was on patrol duty some 300 miles west of Carnarvon when she encountered the Kormoran.

"The initial advantage lay with the German raider, since she was disguised as a merchantman and her identity had to be established before she could be attacked.

"The encounter took place shortly before dusk.

"In the absence of direct evidence, it can only be assumed that some factor prevented the Sydney from making use of her aircraft for reconnaissance from a distance.

"The Sydney closed on the suspect, cleared for action.

"As soon as the Kormoran was convinced that her identity was known she opened simultaneously with the first salvo from the Sydney.

"She struck the Sydney on the bridge, damaging the central control and starting a fire.

"The Sydney closed the range, crippling and setting the enemy on fire.

"The enemy abandoned ship and she blew up.

"German survivors saw the Sydney disappear over the horizon with her fire blazing amidships.

Capital Veterans to Present United Front for Defense

Declaration of a united defense front among the "old soldiers" of Washington will be presented to the Commissioners Monday by representatives from District veteran groups.

Answering the call to come back to the colors and be civilian volunteers for defense, veterans throughout the city have been "marshaling their strength." Yesterday three of their leaders—Donald G. Stanley, in charge of defense for the American Legion of the District; O. W. Hollingsworth, past department commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Nat Silverberg, department commander of the Jewish War Veterans—called on Col. Lemuel Bolles, executive director of the District Defense Council, and arranged for the Monday meeting.

The three will supervise drawing up of the declaration, in which other veteran organizations will join.

Disciplined Aid Sought

Col. Bolles, who has been particularly interested in getting the "disciplined aid" of veterans, said 2500 more volunteers are needed in the auxiliary fire division, 6000 more auxiliary policemen, about 4000 more air raid wardens.

"In addition, we will need an unestimated number of fire watchers and many volunteers to help with the emergency housing program. If veterans wish to form their own rescue, demolition and bomb squads to work as separate units within the volunteer set-up, that will be fine.

"At any rate, we want them all working. We need them. This is not a call without work to back it up. There are specific jobs open."

Citizens of the Columbia Heights area have pitched in and set up an air-raid office for their civilian defense volunteers, Sparrel A. Wood, deputy warden for the area, reported yesterday.

The office, at 1378 Park Road, was donated by J. F. Sager. Desk and chairs were loaned by Prof. L. T. Wilson and moved by Rudie Cole. W. F. Dismer provided a new lock and key for the door.

"And there we are," Wood said, "needing only a permanent telephone. We have a temporary one."

There are 26 defense zones in the Columbia Heights area, and between 500 and 600 air-raid warden volunteers to be trained. A first-aid class for a group of them is being conducted now at Powell Junior High School. More classes will be started soon.

British Return 17 More Tankers

Secretary of Interior Harold Ickes announced yesterday that in addition to the 18 American tankers released by the British during October, 17 were returned to their owners last month, leaving five in the "shuttle service" of which three will be turned over this week and the other two later this month on completion of present voyages.

Old Yugoslavia Blamed in Plot On Duce's Life

By International News Service

Rome, Dec. 3.—Old Yugoslavia, the realm of exiled young King Peter, today was charged with responsibility for the revolutionary conspiracy and attempt on the life of Premier Mussolini for which 60 persons are on trial in Trieste.

The alleged plotters, it was said at the trial, aimed to unite all northwestern Italy and parts of Austrian Carinthia with a "Soviet Yugoslavia."

Slovene elements, backed by Yugoslavia, largely were responsible for the conspiracy which reportedly cost at least 137 Italian lives and blasted munitions plants in three cities, according to testimony at the trial.

Chief witness today was 25-year-old Antonio Skuka, who said he has been a "beacon of the Slovene Irredentist movement" since 1933—when he was only 17 years old.

Skuka, however, repudiated a long confession of schemes which allegedly involved the destruction of munitions plants in Piacenza, Bologna and Clana.

The witness at first was said to have admitted plans for widespread sabotage at the moment when Italy entered the war. His chief objective, according to Italian accounts of the trial before a special court at Trieste, was to put corrosive material inside Italian railway cars.

The official Rome radio announced that "it has been proved that the majority of accused men were in the pay of the former Yugoslav state."

In addition to the 60 accused, 11 others are on trial in absentia. It was confirmed that they have made good their escape abroad.

Besides the asserted attempt on the life of Mussolini at Caporetto in 1938—from which he escaped "miraculously"—it was charged that the group killed 42 persons in a powder magazine explosion at Piacenza and 95 in a similar blast at Bologna. Extensive damage was caused in an explosion at Clana, but no casualties resulted. All the explosions occurred in 1940.

The accused persons were charged further with "dissemination of seditious literature, incitement to desertion by Slovene recruits in the Italian army, and preparing an armed uprising."

Lindbergh to Speak At Boston Dec. 12

Chicago, Dec. 3 (INS).—Gen. Robert E. Wood, national chairman of the American First Committee, said tonight that Charles A. Lindbergh will address an anti-war rally to be sponsored by the committee in the Boston Garden, Boston, December 12.

General Wood said numerous meetings would be held this month, with Lindbergh, Senator Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota, and John Cudahy, former Ambassador to Belgium, among the speakers. Senator Nye will speak at an anti-war rally in Rockford, Ill., December 15.

Serbs, Nazis Lock in Battle 'On 3d Front'

By the United Press

Cairo, Dec. 3.—The Yugoslav Middle East Headquarters announced tonight that three German divisions launched what appeared to be a major offensive against Yugoslav positions in the valley of Western Morava River Tuesday morning, opening a "third front" in the war.

Serbian troops, under Gen. Draja Mikhailovitch, are "successfully resisting the enemy's onslaughts" in the main sector, but south of Uzice, German tank attacks forced the Serbs to withdraw, the communique said.

Military experts referred to the campaign as the opening of a "third front," which compelled the Germans to fight again in the Balkans at a time when they were hard pressed both in Russia and Libya.

The communique was the first from the Yugoslav headquarters here regarding the Serbs' campaign of resistance to German occupation troops.

Fighting, which began in guerrilla fashion, has steadily increased in tempo since the Russian war started.

Fully organized Serb troop units, commanded by former Yugoslav army officers, were known to be operating over most of the occupied country, but the communique put the campaign in the category of a full-scale war.

Serbian Plant Blast Kills 1,500

Bern, Switzerland (Thursday), Dec. 4 (AP).—The Havas News Agency reported early today that 1500 persons were killed in the explosion of a munitions dump at Oujitza, Serbia.

Scarcely a building in the vicinity was left intact, the agency said. The munitions were said to have been stored in the vaults of the Oujitza Bank, and were reported to have been exploded during a fight between Communists and Serbian government troops.

Strike Halts $22,600,000 Shipbuilding

By the Associated Press

Wilmington, Del., Dec. 3.—Production of $22,600,000 in cargo ships for the Nation's rapidly expanding merchant marine was halted at the Pusey & Jones Shipbuilding Corporation today after C. I. O. unionists called a strike to back up demands for a union shop and wage adjustments.

While leaders of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America claimed more than half of the yard's 2000 employes had joined the strike, a company spokesman announced the firm had decided not to open the yards today. Only maintenance workers were on the job, he said.

George M. Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, yesterday called the union's general chairmen to meet in Chicago Monday to plan a Nation-wide strike against the Railway Express Agency. He said the company refused to accept the recommendations of the President's emergency board which settled the general railroad wage dispute.

The union says it has 42,000 members who are employes of the Railway Express Agency.

The President's emergency board recommended that the employes be given increases of 10 cents an hour over undisclosed present scales, but informed the President in its report that spokesmen for the express agency had refused to accept the increases.

The board said that the express agency believed it could reach a more satisfactory settlement through direct negotiations, even at the risk of a strike.

Strike at Ordnance Plant

Ravenna, Ohio, Dec. 3 (AP).—A four-union strike hampered shell and bomb making at the Ravenna Arsenal today, but construction work on uncompleted portions of the 137-million-dollar project continued without interruption.

Army spokesmen said only 10 per cent of the approximately 1250 production, transportation and maintenance employes left their jobs and that work was not seriously interrupted. R. R. Walker, president of the Independent Arsenal Workers of America, declared the strike 80 per cent effective and predicted that "it will be 100 per cent tomorrow."

Only scattered pickets appeared at the 22,000-acre plant today. Walker announced a line would be established tomorrow, but said no attempt to halt workers would be made.

Friends of Clergy and Laity Pay Tribute to Dr. Cartwright

By Robert Tate Allen

Post Church Editor

Nearly 1000 Catholics—from small parochial scholars of his own Immaculate Conception Parish to high-ranking monsignori and other fellow priests—yesterday saluted the Rev. Dr. John K. Cartwright on the twenty-fifth anniversary of his ordination.

They honored the beloved rector at services of low mass and solemn benediction afterward in the church at Eighth and N Streets Northwest—a parish that recently celebrated 75 years of service to the community.

His mother, Mrs. Catherine Cartwright; a sister, Genevieve, and a brother, the Rev. Mitchell Cartwright, rector of St. Ambrose's Church in Baltimore, were among the worshipers who participated in the mass and benediction which Dr. Cartwright celebrated.

In a brief message during the mass the rector called the anniversary occasion one of "great happiness" and praised the devotion, cooperation and loyalty of his parishioners and the helpful spirit of his brother priests.

Scholars of the Immaculate Conception Girls' and Boys' Schools presented Father Cartwright with a large congratulatory card and "spiritual bonquets" during the services, and then formed a procession around the church aisles.

At a program later in the rectory, greetings came from representatives of the Catholic Daughters of America, Court 212, of which Father Cartwright is chaplain; the Critics Forum, which the priest founded; the Sodality and Holy Name groups of the Immaculate Conceptino parish; the Newman Club and Newman Club Alumni of George Washington University; the school of pastoral theology of Catholic University, a class which Dr. Cartwright teaches, and members of the household of Immaculate Conception parish.

Seated in the sanctuary during the services were the Very Rev. Monsignor Lawrence J. Shehan, rector of St. Patrick's Church; the Rev. Dr. Francis Cassidy, of Catholic University's religious department; the Rev. Dr. John Tracy Ellis, of that university's history department; the Rev. Joseph E. Gedra, deacon of the mass; the Rev. Joseph P. Bradley, sub-deacon, both of Immaculate Conception parish; the Rev. Mitchell Cartwright; the Rev. Dennis Mooney, O. F. M., of the Franciscan Monastery; the Rev. Arteme Dutilly, noted Arctic priest, who is residing at the rectory during his teaching duties at Catholic University, and the Rev. Edwin Lee, rector of St. Thomas More Catholic Church, in Arlington, Va.

Native of Baltimore, where he received his parochial school education, Father Cartwright was educated at St. Charles and Loyola Colleges in Maryland and at the North American College in Rome. From 1918 to 1933 he was assistant pastor of St. Patrick's Church here, and then went to his present post as successor to the late Rev. Francis J. Hurney.

Father Cartwright had carried on with marked success the Washington Catholic Radio Hour which Father Hurney started. He also has been active in the work of the Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital, and in many other religious and civic organizations. He is a member of the Rotary Club and chaplain of the Variety Club.

Compromise Arranged in Loan Firm Case

After three days of complex wrangling over the finances of the Southeastern Industrial Bankers, Inc., Justice Oscar R. Luhring and a brigade of attorneys yesterday succeeded in arranging a compromise agreement which will save the loan firm from a receivership suit at the hands of its stockholders.

The intricate hearing was closed after the justice had ratified a compromise which in substance will transfer control of the company and its subsidiaries from Clifton and Lewis Eisele to E. Reed Willis, new president of Southeastern and head of the General Acceptance Corporation of Pennsylvania.

A group of stockholders had previously started receivership action against the company, which the court was told is operating under a considerable deficit, seeking new management and reorganization. This action is to be dropped in favor of the compromise.

The settlement is based on the understanding that the Eiseles will sell their controlling stock to Wills and then turn back a proportion of the purchase price to the company. Most grievous bone of contention before the court was how much the brothers would be allowed to keep.

Eiseles to Sell Stock

The complicating factor was an agreement that the worth of their shares be computed at 12 per cent of the firm's assets. Nobody knows just what the assets are worth, estimates ranging between $400,000 and a million dollars.

The final compromise provides that they will gross at least $50,000 from Wills for the shares and give half of it to the corporation. If the assets turn out to be worth more than the minimum estimate, they will gross more. And if they gross more, a system of staggered percentages has been set up to govern the percentages that they keep and hand over to the firm.

In any event, the Eiseles are to sever their connections with Southeastern, which they founded 10 years ago.

The staggered percentages, governing the brothers' final share in the indefinite purchase price of their stock, are as follows:

Of the first $40,000, they will turn back 62½ per cent and keep 37½ per cent.

Of a potential next $40,000, they will turn back 65 per cent and keep 35 per cent.

If there is a next $40,000, they will split 75 and 25, with the company on the long end, and should there be anything above that, they keep only 10 per cent.

Kann's Employes Get Yule Bonus

The S. Kann Sons Co. yesterday announced a Christmas bonus for more than 1000 employes.

Amount of the bonus was based on the term of service, and ranged up to $50 to workers of more than ten years.

Club Hears Hecht Officer On Advertising

Use of such methods as exaggeration and bad taste in advertising was criticized yesterday by Bert M. Sarazan, publicity advertising director of the Hecht Co., as "bad merchandising."

Speaking on "The Case Against Advertising," Sarazan described advertising as an important contributor to the American standard of living, as he spoke before the Advertising Club at the Raleigh Hotel.

Despite its early misuse, he said, "advertising has given a good account of itself and insofar as it gave American business its initial impetus, it shared directly and indirectly in molding the great American mind.

"The golden age of advertising has not passed. It is really just beginning to dawn."

Sarazan listed weaknesses sometimes found in advertising: "Ignorance of what an ordinary advertiser may expect to buy with his dollar, the wrong attitude toward advertising, the frivolous attitude toward advertising, and exaggeration, bad taste and untruthfulness in copy."

"Lying in an advertisement," Sarazen said, "is always gross waste because suckers will not take the same bait twice. Advertising tricks and treacheries are practiced only by fools who haven't got brains enough to be honest."

Criminal Justice Unit's Directors Meet Tomorrow

The board of directors of the Washington Criminal Justice Association will hold its regular quarterly meeting at a luncheon in the Willard Hotel tomorrow at 12:30 p. m.

Superintendent of Metropolitan Police Edward J. Kelly will be the guest speaker. Inspector Harvey Callahan, assistant superintendedent of police, also will be a guest.

Dr. James A. Uolan, managing director, will report on the activities of the association since the last quarterly meeting.

The directors signifying their intentions to attend are Francis G. Addison, jr., Mrs. Frederick Altemus, Mrs. Anne Archbold, Fontaine C. Bradley, Edward Burling, jr., Lee D. Butler, Morris Cafritz, George C. Clarke, Miss Beatrice Clephane, James A. Cobb, Sefton Darr, Charles B. Dulcan, sr., Waldron Faulkner, Minor Hudson, Edward G. Kemp, Milton W. Werner and Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley.

Spiritual Peace Vital to World, Speaker Says

America and England must strive toward lifting civilization from an intellectual to a spiritual plane to effect a just and lasting peace, Dr. A. Maude Royden said here last night.

The world-eminent English preacher and writer addressed more than 1000 people at a city-wide service at Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, Eighteenth and N Streets Northwest.

Warning that man has developed his intellect—but neglected his spiritual side—until he is in danger of destroying himself, Dr. Royden said that if the human race goes into darkness, it will be because of man's intelligence and not in spite of it.

Dr. Royden deplored the fact that civilization's material achievements had made people—especially young men and women—comfortable, yet disillusioned and frustrated.

The 65-year-old woman preacher, supported by a cane, walked in the opening procession with the Covenant-First choir, and Dr. Albert J. McCartney, pastor; Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, president of the Washington Federation of Churches, and Dr. Worth M. Tippy, acting federation executive secretary. Dr. Tippy read the Scripture and Dr. Blackwelder offered a prayer. Dr. McCartney presided, and presented Dr. Royden, who wore a black cassock and red and white academic hood.

Earlier in the day, Dr. Royden was a guest at a luncheon at the British Embassy with Lord and Lady Halifax, Sir Thomas Beecham, English conductor; Dr. and Mrs. McCartney, and others. She was a house guest of the McCartneys. She spoke here under the auspices of the Federal Council of Churches and the World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches.

Grand Jury Asks For Disbarment Of Al Smith, Jr.

New York, Dec. 3 (AP).—A special grand jury today handed up a presentment to the appellate division calling for disbarment of Alfred E. Smith, jr., son of the former governor, on 11 specific charges of malpractice.

"From the evidence," the grand jury said it was of the "opinion that Alfred E. Smith, jr. has commited acts of professional misconduct, fraud, deceit, crime and misdemeanor, and conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice which renders him unfit to remain an attorney and counselor-at-law in the State of New York."

The presentment charged Smith accepted money in 11 instances to obstruct enforcement of the State alcoholic beverage control law. The special grand jury has been investigating charges of corruption in Kings County.

Cox and Ballou Come a Cropper In Rotary Club Quiz Contest

Washington Rotarians yesterday staged their own information-please program in the Willard, and left two of their prize scholars with intellectual defenses sadly battered.

George Howland Cox, director of the Inter-American Center of the George Washington University, clinched a spot at the foot of the class by missing four out of five questions, and District School Supt. Ballou was his closest competitor for lowest place, with 3½ questions wrong.

Ballou was awarded full score for naming all President Roosevelt's Supreme appointments except Justice Murphy, but missed these questions:

In taking off, what part of the plane leaves the ground first? (Correct answer: the tail.)

What man prominent in baseball was named after a famous mountain? (Correct answer: Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis.)

What is a bread-and-butter letlet? (Correct answer: A letter of thanks for hospitality.)

Ballou got half score by identifying two defense agencies out of four by their initials, and shone on the Supreme Court question.

Cox missed these questions:

How often do twins occur? Cox's answer: Whenever two children are born. Correct answer: Once in every 87 births.

If a 10-round prizefight starts at 10 p. m., what time does it end? Cox's answer: 10:40 p. m. Correct answer: 10:39 p. m.

Why do the English drive on the left side of the road? Cox's answer: To miss the cars coming on the right. Correct answer: The custom dates back to the days of horses and highwaymen, when any rider, approaching another, pulled to the left to have his sword or pistol arm ready for action.

In 1930, Washington was in fourteenth place among the largest cities; where was it in 1940? Cox's answer: Eighth place. Correct answer: Eleventh place.

Cox was correct in naming California as the State which has yielded the greatest amount of gold.

Ballou's four-man team, headed by Charles Drayton, lawyer and a member of the Board of Education, lost the match to the team of Howard Leroy, after a fifth-round tie. With the score 100 to 100, the team leaders took the match into overtime, until Leroy clinched first prize by naming the original size of the District.

Supporting Drayton and Ballou were Wilson Nairn, attorney, and Col. Albert Atwood, writer. Leroy's team included Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander of the Washington Provisional Brigade; George Howland Cox and Harold Brooks, of Pepco.

A. P. Reeves, Rotary president, was chairman of the luncheon quiz meeting.

Guard Goes On Trial in 3 Boys' Shooting

Harry Rithman, 57-year-old night watchman of 608 H Street Northwest, went on trial in District Court yesterday charged with shooting and wounding three Northeast youths while the boys were allegedly trying to crash a party last July.

Rithman has claimed that he fired his revolver in self defense, after he had tried to keep the boys out of an employes' crab feast being held on the roof of the Ourisman Chevrolet Sales Co., 610 H Street Northeast, where he was employed. He told police that the boys attacked him.

Assistant United States Attorney John Laskey closed the Government's case against Rithman after a number of witnesses, including the three wounded youths, testified that Rithman had fired while the boys were walking away from him. They asserted that the gunplay was unprovoked.

Rithman is charged with assault with a dangerous weapon on Peter Catucci, 18, of 1024 Fifth Street Northeast, shot in the back; George Kalavitinos, 18, of 1003½ Third Street Northeast, shot in the leg.

Defense Attorneys William Lichtenberg and Samuel Barker will present Rithman's case this morning.

29th Will Ride Into Richmond Next Week

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Morven, N. C., Dec. 3.—Bronzed troops of the famous Twenty-ninth "Blue and Gray" Division will ride in triumph through Richmond, Va., to the music of three of their own bands early next week en route North from their Southern maneuvers.

The bands will be those of the three Virginia regiments in the division. Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord said today they will precede the columns, 16,000 men strong, to the Virginia capital and play their buddies through the city.

What hour the main columns will reach Richmond was not known. The movement will start from here at 1 a. m. Sunday, with the Eighty-eighth Brigade and Fifty-fourth Brigade on the eastern route. The Fifty-eighth Brigade, followed by the division troops, will take the route to the west.

No Ceremony in Washington

A ceremony in Washington, similar to that planned in Richmond, will be prevented by the fact that the convoys will pass through the District between midnight and dawn, Tuesday.

Maj. Sidney Morgan, of Washington, division intelligence officer, will leave here tomorrow morning to arrange with civil authorities of cities enroute for the most convenient passage of the columns.

Today the men of the Twenty-ninth spent their last half-holiday in the Carolinas, with payday only three days behind them.

Crowded With Troops

Towns in the maneuver area were crowded with troops for the last time, free-spending soldiers who bought out soda fountains and candy counters, cleaned shelves of toilet articles and trinkets for the folks back home and stood in long queues at telephone booths and telegraph counters. For the third time in three months, all money order records at postoffices were shattered.

Tomorrow the division's men will start the job of placing their equipment in shape for the three-day trip home when two columns, each more than 100 miles long, will roll northward to Fort George G. Meade, Md. Big pyramidal tents will be struck and the men will move into shelter tents where they will live until they mount the trucks that will take them home.

Texas Widow Falls 15 Floors in N. Y., Lives

New York, Dec. 3 (AP).—Mrs. Erin Long, 43, widow of a Fort Worth (Tex.) oil operator, lived through a 15-floor fall from an apartment window today.

She crashed through a double skylight into a tailor shop, knocked a tailor unconscious, and was sent to a hospital with injuries which physicians said probably would not be fatal. Police said she either "fell or jumped."

Flash Bulbs Aid Paralytics To Use Hands

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 3.—Flash bulbs which are lighted by a person's own muscles are aiding infantile paralysis victims to regain movement of inert limbs.

The bulbs are used with muscles transplanted surgically.

This new advance was reported to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis today by Drs. Dallas B. Phemister, Paul A. Weiss, C. Howard Hatcher and Paul Brown, University of Chicago.

The lights train the mind in cases where the old muscular pathway from the brain has been lost, and a new one has to be developed. They have been used on leg muscle transplants.

In this operation the detoured muscle not only is in a new and unfamiliar location, but has to do quite a different sort of job. The muscle under the upper leg, which bends the knee, is transferred to the top of the leg. There its new job is just the opposite. It straightens the knee and extends the lower leg.

After the operation the transplanted muscle is at first apparently lifeless. Then it slowly begins to work.

Billion-Dollar Peril Confronts Utility Giant

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 3.—Albert Osborn, internationally known handwriting expert, gave testimony in Federal Court today which court observers said might, if sustained, result in the setting aside of the one billion dollars Associated Gas system's 1933 recapitalization plan and the return of the assets of the system to the parent Associated Gas & Electric Co.

Osborn testified that minutes of directors' meetings of subsidiary companies which made possible the creation of the Associated Gas & Electric Corporation and the transfer of the corporation's stock were fictitious and written several years after the meetings supposedly were held.

Claims Later Date

Osborn testified that minutes of certain subsidiaries of Associated Gas & Electric Co., which were dated 1927 and 1928, actually were not written until late in 1931.

It was pursuant to these alleged minutes which Osborn said were of meetings never held and which were inserted in the minute books between the pages of other minutes, that the convertible obligations were ostensibly issued to Associated Gas & Electric Corporation, a subsidiary of the company, converted into corporation stock.

Osborn's testimony, supported by photographs of the allegedly inserted minutes and of other minutes in which the dates allegedly had been removed and new dates substituted, provided one of the most dramatic developments in the affairs of the utility giant since the sentencing of its founder, Howard C. Hopson, to the penitentiary for mail fraud.

Jury Frees Benefactor in Girl's Death

By International News Service

Farmington, Me., Dec. 3.—To the cheers of his friends, Fred G. Wheeler, 50, walked arm-in-arm with his loyal wife from Franklin County courthouse today, acquitted of the charge he killed Florence Buzzell, the 20-year-old blond secretarial school graduate, whose education he financed.

The jury of 11 men and one woman returned the verdict after deliberating only one hour and 44 minutes.

As the foreman announced the finding, spectators started a cheer which was abruptly halted by court attaches. Wheeler's wife, Edith, pressed forward and the couple embraced and kissed.

"He's been a good husband and a good father," Mrs. Wheeler said. "We are so happy to have him with us again."

"I never doubted the verdict would be 'not guilty'," the wealthy cattle dealer told friends.

Wheeler was charged with the pistol-shooting of Miss Buzzell last June 7 following an alleged drinking party at the Chesterville farm of the victim's brother, John. The State contended the crime was committed because the middle-aged Wheeler was jealous of the attentions paid Florence by other, younger men.

Wheeler contended Miss Buzzell died by her own hand during a fit of despondency because her benefactor had refused to finance her education further.

Interest in the nine-day trial was heightened because of a diary in which Florence purportedly kept data on gay parties. Names of 122 men friends, some of them said to be prominent, were contained in the notes.

Germans Hurl Crack Troops Into Rostov Area Caldron

By The Associated Press

Berlin, (Thursday) Dec. 4.—German and Russian forces are grappling man-to-man in unbelievably furious fighting for the Rostov and Donets basin area, acknowledged key to the oil-rich Caucasus, German military dispatches declared today.

Evidence that the German high command was throwing some crack troops into the fray was seen in the publication of newspaper obituaries of SS (Elite Guard) men attached to Adolf Hitler's bodyguards.

Details of the struggle were scant, and even the high command omitted mention of Rostov from its communique, although that front, along with Moscow and North Africa, has been called one of the three current major operations.

Authorized German sources, however, ridiculed reports that the Germans had destroyed Rostov in reprisal for alleged guerrilla warfare. Informed sources quoted Russian prisoners as saying Soviet mines planted earlier in Rostov had exploded, destroying many blocks in the heart of the city.

(NBC reported in New York it had heard a German radio broadcast, for foreign consumption, stating that German artillery and bombers now had completely destroyed Rostov as "an unavoidable and logical reprisal for the fiendish and treacherous participation of armed Russian civilians in the battle behind the German lines.)

As an instance of the fury of the fighting in the southern area, the Berlin press carried this report:

One German company found its ammunition exhausted and its artillery useless because of the terrain while the Russian infantry under artillery protection attacked the German flank.

The company commander ordered an attack with fixed bayonets, which broke the Russian advance but brought death to the officer and part of his command.

D. N. B. called the Rostov operation an "inconceivable expenditure of war materials" and described it as a wearing-down process which would tell soon whether Germany or Russia can last longer.

The Moscow front was called more active than the southern flank and newspaper dispatches said the Soviet capital's position was becoming increasingly hopeless.

The high command reported new progress by German tank and infantry forces before Moscow in the face of admitted tough Russian resistance and counterthrusts. It said 20 Red army tanks were destroyed Tuesday.

Moscow's original defense line was described by the high command magazine, Wehrmacht, as a 10-mile-thick belt of intricate, highly modern fortifications stretching from Kalinin, 90 miles to the northwest, to Kaluga, 90 miles to the southwest.

Map-pictures illustrating the article showed seven layers of defensive devices including a front line of automatic flame-throwers whose fuel tanks were buried with just the nozzles protruding from hidden casemates.

The second line was said to be a zigzag trench system, thoroughly mined and studded with "asparagus"—spikes to halt tanks—tracing the edges of rivers and swamps.

Behind this, the article said, were still more tank traps, barriers of heavy steel rails welded together, strong casemates, field positions and heavy artillery emplacements—these last described as the backbone of the outer defense belt.

Wehrmacht said it was first penetrated on the Smolensk-Moscow highway about six weeks ago.

German dispatches from the African desert battle said tonight that Axis land operations were being concentrated southeast of Tobruk after wiping out the bulk of a New Zealand division in that area.

This force, the high command tersely reported, was "partly destroyed and partly captured."

CAN'T KEEP GRANDMA IN HER CHAIR

She's as Lively as a Youngster—Now her Backache is better

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Reds Leaving Devastated Hango Forts

By the Associated Press

Helsinki, Finland, Dec. 3.—The Russians are pulling out of the powerful Hango Peninsula naval base at the southwest tip of Finland, devastating the entire region and setting all sorts of explosive traps for the advancing Finns, an official announcement said late tonight.

A communique said the Russians were quitting that stronghold, which they took from Finland by lease in the peace treaty of March, 1940, "because of the arrival of winter and pressure by our troops.

"Occupation operations are now under way," it continued.

"Destructive explosions mentioned in earlier reports continue. The recaptured region is on a whole utterly devastated, and there are mines and traps everywhere."

The Hango Peninsula is at the entrance to the Gulf of Finland, west of Helsinki, and was Soviet Russia's last stronghold in that area.

The base lies near the southwestern top of Finland about 250 miles west of the big Soviet naval base of Kronstadt.

In March, 1940, Finland leased Hango and a number of small islands nearby to the Soviets for 30 years with an annual Russian payment of eight million Finnish marks.

The treaty expressly stated the Russians needed the base to "defend the entrance to the Gulf of Finland against aggression."

Since the new war began Russian long-range artillery mounted on Hango has swept the Finnish mainland consistently but the Finns and Germans continued to pound it by air.

Finnish land troops began reducing the outlying islands leading up to Hango, and the peninsula's defenses suffered an indirect blow when the Germans captured two Estonian islands across the gulf and rapidly converted them into air bases for attacks on the Soviet positions.

Evacuation Seen As Aid to Peace

New York, Dec. 3 (AP).—The Vichy-controlled Martinique radio, in a broadcast heard by N. B. C., said tonight that the evacuation of Russian forces from the Hango Peninsula would remove the main obstacles to the conclusion of a separate peace between Finland and Russia.

Russians Capture 2 Italian Divisions

By the Associated Press

London, (Thursday,) Dec. 4.—Russian troops were reported early today to have captured two Italian divisions which the Germans, falling back west of Rostov, had thrown into the path of the Soviet steamroller.

A Moscow radio announcement said Field Marshal Ewald von Kleist's rear guard meanwhile was attempting a desperate delayed action in the suburbs of Taganrog, 40 miles west of Rostov, while the main Nazi retreat steamed on toward Mariupol, 60 miles beyond.

[An International News Service disptach said a late British broadcast picked up by C. B. S., of New York, quoted reports from unidentified sources that "the Germans have already evacuated Taganrog and are being pursued 5 miles beyond it."]

The Italians, identified as members of the Union and Tuscano divisions, "hardly reached the battle lines before they began giving themselves up as prisoners," Moscow said.

"They complained of absence of warm clothing and food," the radio related.

Bark at Nazis' Heels

Von Kleist himself already has fled to Mariupol, it was added, and 40 more villages have fallen to the great Red counteroffensive. The Germans captured Mariupol, then Taganrog, in their October offensive.

"We continue the pursuit, launching fierce attacks right onto the backs of the fleeing enemy," the Soviet announcement said. "Tanks, lorries and carts litter the road to Mariupol.

"All attempts of the enemy to halt the advance of our troops have failed. . . .

"The intense pressure of our units prevents the enemy from fortifying himself.

"At every cross road the Germans are putting up signposts labeled 'To Mariupol.' The enemy is unable to take his equipment or tanks with him. Abandoning his equipment he tries to set fire to it all. All along the roads are burning tanks, lorries and carts.

". . . The enemy is now attempting to bypass the town of E to the southwest. Our artillery and mortar batteries are very active.

"The enemy is suffering enormous losses in men and equipment. Our gunners are literally smoking the Germans out of one village."

Illustrative of the massive damage which is being inflicted, the Soviet communique tonight said Red planes Tuesday put out of action 154 tanks and destroyed 1114 motor vehicles carrying troops and supplies, in addition to 50 field and antiaircraft guns, 259 carts and 50 gasoline trucks.

U. S. to Arm Turkey as Fast as Possible

The Lend-Lease Act requires that materials be supplied only to nations determined to fight "aggression." Turkey is the first noncombatant nation overseas that has been brought within its scope.

For months—ever since the German-Italian conquest of Greece and the islands near Turkey—there have been fears in Allied quarters that Hitler would attempt a drive through Turkey, with Turkey's consent if possible, without it if necessary. If he could take this route, it might spare him the necessity of going over the terrifying heights of the Caucasus to get at oil and Wavell's army.

The Turks have a reputation of being fierce fighters, but the Turkish army of today, believed to number something like one million men, is not well equipped to withstand Hitler's Luftwaffe and panzer divisions.

The White House statement on Turkey consisted of only one sentence, as follows:

"The President announced that he had found the defense of Turkey vital to the defense of the United States and had directed Lend-Lease Administrator E. R. Stettinius, jr., to see that the defense needs of the government of Turkey were filled a fast as possible."

Mehmet Munir Ertegun, Turkish Ambassador to the United States, told The Washington Post that he was without any information in connection with the arrangement.

"I know nothing about the matter," he said. "I had nothing to do with any negotiations leading up to it. I would suppose that it was a spontaneous act by President Roosevelt."

At the time this seemed to be an incredible statement. High officials, however, made this explanation: For some time, President Roosevelt has been authorizing the retransfer through the British to Turkey of lend-lease materials. Under the law the President can in each case authorize such a transfer, but Lend-Lease Administrator Stettinius has no such authority.

The President, by saying in a formal statement that Turkey's defense is vital to the defense of the United States, has now made it possible for Stettinius to do what only he himself was authorized to do heretofore.

In the last year the British have taken over Syria from the French. They have moved into Iraq and Iran, and Gen. Wavell has been preparing to move into the Caucasus to aid the Russians if that be necessary. American supplies and armaments are flowing to this region by way of the Red Sea, and, as is now disclosed, are reaching the Turks as well as others.

Take a tip from the Old-Timers

TRAVELING around town here, all unnoticed among newer, brighter, sleeker models, you'll find a lot of faithful old Buicks that are still in service after six, eight, ten or even more years of use.

They may look sort of funny next to trim 1942 models, and they undoubtedly don't get off as fast on the lights.

But it's worth noting that these sturdy old Buicks are still running, still serving faithfully and well.

Because they have the same basic type of engine as the sleek 1942 Buick—a rugged, long-lived, extra-efficient valve-in-head, though it is now made better by FIREBALL combustion.

They have the same dependable drive—a stout torque tube encasing a sturdy steel shaft stretching its unbroken length from transmission to rear axle.

Frames are fundamentally the same now as then; brakes, though hydraulic now, use the same, efficient, self-energizing action. These Old-Timers even used the same piston material.

All the factors that make for strength and long life are present today as in the past—plus such further advances as all-coil springs that never lose their comfort, Domite pistons that squeeze more good from gasoline, Compound Carburetion† that spells peak economy with unmatched reserve power.

There's more comfort, more convenience, more beauty, more power in these '42 models—dollar for dollar there's far more value than the old-timers had.

But what counts most, in view of what seems ahead, is that they're still Buicks—tough, rugged, dependable—good to the last mile.

Take a look at what your next car is likely to be up against and ask yourself if it isn't smart to get a car right now that you'll some day know as "old faithful."

16,000 Americans Fight for Canada

The second of several articles by a member of the New York Herald Tribune staff who has returned after investigating conditions in Canada.

By Joseph Driscoll

More than 16,000 young Americans, enough for a small army in Revolutionary War days, are serving with the armed forces of Canada. Moreover, the percentage of Americans is steadily increasing. The influx is particularly notable in the R. C. A. F. These initials stand for the Royal Canadian Air Force, but lately, in friendly acknowledgement of the American contribution, the R. C. A. F. has been nicknamed, by the flyers themselves, the Royal California Air Force. Every State in the Union, with California and New York leading the procession, has contributed flyers to the Canadian force.

Before the outbreak of the war the R. C. A. F. numbered only 4,300 officers and men, as compared with more than 90,000 today. Of these, 6,000 are Americans. At first they merely dribbled over the border. A month ago Americans made up 8 per cent of the R. C. A. F. personnel; today they are 10 per cent, and next month they may be 12 or 15 per cent. If the increase continues, Americans eventually may represent a fifth or perhaps a fourth of the total personnel. There is no doubt that Canadian authorities welcome the Americans as a safeguard against the day when Canada, with her relatively limited population, may be scraping the bottom of her manpower reserves.

600 Americans Instructing

The 90,000 men of the R. C. A. F. have been trained largely in American planes and by American instructors. The original plan was to bring over English instructors and planes, but the Nazi aerial blitz on the British Isles made it necessary for Great Britain to keep her planes and flyers at home. At one big training school in Ontario, 55 of the 70 instructors are from south of the border, mostly from California. Altogether there are 600 American instructors in Canada.

In the Royal Canadian Army there are 10,000 American volunteers out of a total of 230,000 volunteers, but one hears little about them, since modern army work is routine and unspectacular as compared with life in the air force. The Royal Canadian Navy has a small number of American volunteers.

United States authorities do nothing to interfere with the northward migration of young Americans. On the contrary, men of draft age have generally been excused by their draft boards if they volunteered for active service in Canada.

Motoring out from the capital city of Ottawa the other day, I stopped at Uplands, which, in addition to being Ottawa's airport for trans-Canada civilian transports, is one of the best known training fields in the country. Uplands will be even better known soon, for a Hollywood film company has just made a James Cagney picture there, with the cooperation of Air Marshal "Billy" Bishop, the World War ace. "Captains of the Clouds" is the title, and "directors' chairs" bearing that inscription are found in all the offices at Uplands. Canadians will forgive the Hollywood touch if it aids recruiting.

Walks Right Into One

"Are there any Americans here?" I inquired, dropping into the "ready room" at Uplands, where air crews assemble before taking off.

"Well, I'm one," spoke up the youth nearest me, a good-looking, muscular fellow who identified himself as Elmer J. Powell, R. F. D. 9, Bethel Church Road, South Hills, Pittsburgh.

The news that an American newspaper man was on the scene spread quickly, and I was surrounded by a group of healthy, playful young Americans, eager to talk about things back home and to identify themselves for the home folk. There was a Bronx boy, Dennis Patrick O'Connor, of 2312 Loring Place, near Fordham Road, he specified; a Brooklyn boy, William Combrinck-Graham, of 9 Joralemon Street, and "don't forget the hyphen," he added; and a Manhattan boy, Paul Nones, of 51 East Eighty-second Street. There were also Lloyd Kennedy, of La Grange, Ind., and Jerry Jackson, of Albion, N. Y., near Rochester.

"You must wait and see the Black Ace," they all begged. Outside it was raining and misty. The "ceiling" was a mere 100 feet, but even so the student pilots and their instructors were up in their Harvards, flying blind. Presently a dark-haired youth, Malcolm Hormats, of Troy, N. Y., came in with dew on his forehead, wearing a parachute.

Friend of Peter Lehman

"There's the Black Ace," I was told. When I suggested that the original Black Ace was the celebrated Hubert Julian, of Harlem and Ethiopia, Hormats compromised with a smile.

"Call me the Purple Ace," he said. In every group of lively Americans there is at least one comedian, and Hormats was it. He said he was a good friend of a son of Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York, Peter Lehman, who has been flying at another Canadian school.

"Pete and I are good friends; he got me out of a jam once," Hormats said, without elucidation.

Slightly older and slightly more serious were the American instructors, among whom were encountered Pilot Officers E. B. Tipton, of Sonora, Tex., and Frank Gallagher, of Tulsa, Okla., and Flying Officer J. E. Johansen, of San Francisco. Tipton, a tall, rangy, soft-spoken fellow, said he had been in Canada a year and was hoping for a leave so he and his wife could visit New York for the first time.

The student pilots were looking forward to their graduation from school when they will receive their wings, be promoted from the rank of L. A. C. (leading air craftsman) to sergeant pilot or pilot officer and probably be sent to Britain for combat service. They were not concerned over the fact that Canadian papers have printed many obituary notices of R. C. A. F. men—close to 900 casualties to date.

Can You Tie This . . .?

PLAIN TO SEE—A hat holds no secrets from mankind when it's such an openwork trick as this. It was made by John Fredericks out of natural bedspread crochet cord and has a chin tie. Black grosgrain flutters through the air holes.

In Chicago

By a Staff Correspondent

Chicago.—If you're fond of figures, you'll just love Chicago!

Back in the East, they say here, we have got in the habit of calculating things in round numbers. A nickel this, 15 cents there. A quarter here, 65 cents yonder.

Out here it's different.

Hamburger 12 cents.

Coffee 6 cents.

Pie 11 cents.

Sweet roll 7 cents.

That's how the rates go, for instance, in a string of little lunchrooms (ten of 'em here, the counterman said), which purvey the "hamburger glorified." It is, too. All the places have prices like that.

And the hotels. It seems they all got together and agreed on a flat 10 per cent boost, for the duration of something or other. So the rooms now run $3.30, $3.85, $4.40 and the like.

Some of the funny prices grow out of the State sales tax, 1 cent on the 12-cent hamburgers, for example. So the hamburger glorified is really 11 cents plus tax. The rise, people say, is on account of the war.

'Can't for Life of Me' Understand How Strikes Can Go On, Knudsen Tells Manufacturers

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 3.—America's leading industrialists, meeting in the forty-sixth annual convention of the National Association of Manufacturers, pledged today the placing of patriotism above personal gains and voted unanimously in favor of Federal legislation to bar antidefense strikes.

They acted after William S. Knudsen, codirector general of the Office of Production Management, declared:

"Let's by the Almighty God, see to it that the boys, if they have to go, go with a gun in their hands, and not with a broom handle."

They heard Knudsen declare that he "can't for the life of me understand how, in a declared unlimited national emergency such folishness" as strikes "can go on."

Remarks Applauded

An applauding audience, packed into the grand ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria, heard the OPM chieftain declare:

"As to labor we have been through another rather difficult period. With production generally on the upgrade, we have been subject to a test of strikes which culminated in the coal strikes in November, not in most cases for wages or working conditions, but the usual demands for closed shops, union shops, preferential shops, or whatnot. . . .

"Here we are in a very good position on wages and working conditions in practically every field of industry.

"We have all kinds of work to do and then we have to stop and argue about jurisdfetional disputes, organizational disputes, and God knows what."

Knudsen also told the manufacturers that "we have got to have more help from industry, from you gentlemen."

From their president, Walter D. Fuller, came the assertion: "It is time for the Administration's compromise with labor and its afraid-to-act attitude to cease. . . . Compulsory unionism in unpopular with the workers."

Leon Henderson, director of the Office of Price Control, described the efforts of his office, "with insufficient authority," to hold down prices and warned: "If we don't enact an adequate price bill we will have at least a 10 per cent rise in living costs by late spring."

Floyd Odlum, director of the contract distribution department of the OPM, disclosed that a plan was nearing decision in Washington to give small industrial plants sufficient scarce materials to continue in production of civilian goods until they could be geared to the defense effort.

The association, which ordinarily expresses its opinions on national affairs on the last day of its conventions, departed from this procedure today, the opening session of the three-day meeting, to adopt the antistrike resolution.

Strike Ban Urged

The manufacturers' delegates called for a Federal law prohibiting strikes except when approved by secret vote of the workers affected and then only after attempts at conciliation and a cooling-off period.

Reporting on the status of the Government's defense program, Knudsen stated:

"Production is on the way on every item in the defense program.

"You know I cannot quote these quantities to you, but I will try to give you an idea this way: Contracts are placed on a total value of 43 billion dollars; deliveries as measured by disbursements will amount to $12,700,000,000 to January 1; the calendar year 1942 should show 26 billions of products shipped; in 1943 we hope to produce 36 billions of products." Knudsen did not explain these figures further. His hearers assumed the mention of 43 billion dollars referred to money now available for contracts.

Knudsen predicted plant capacity for the production of 800 heavy bombers a month by the end of next year and capacity to turn out 2800 tanks a month by that time.

The OPM consul said defense production was being stepped up rapidly through subcontracting operations.

Odlum, enlarging on the subcontracts and small business in general, said that there were 133,300 plants in the country each employing 20 persons or less.

"While in the midst of the greatest production job in history, the Nation cannot afford the loss of these small plants. It cannot afford the loss of their output of needed civilian goods. It cannot afford the loss of facilities that may be needed badly, by the time we can reach them and make a proper decision, to produce 'bits and pieces' for defense.

"It cannot afford, either now or in the years after this emergency, to see the economic death of thousands of small business men who are the pillars of their home towns, the supporters of churches and schools and the employers of careful craftsmen who have worked years for their jobs and homes."

"Compromise With Inflation"

He declared that "2 per cent of the scarce material supply would keep them all alive for six months, 4 per cent for a year."

Henderson told the manufacturers that the price control bill passed by the House was "an ineffective compromise, and I do not think you can compromise with inflation."

He reiterated a previously stated warning that the cost of living, already 11 per cent above prewar levels, would continue to rise 1½ per cent a month between now and next spring.

He scored failure of Congress to provide a licensing system for the handling of strategic commodities.

War Sidelights

French Build Nazi Planes, Briton Says

London, Dec. 3.—Four out of five planes manufactured in occupied and unoccupied France are given to Germany, an official British spokesman charged today.

He said that French factories still are producing French type aircraft, but when the parts are exhausted the factories produce standard German types of bombers and fighter planes.

The French also are repairing damaged Nazi planes and repairing German parachutes, the spokesman said.

Mine Blasts Lighthouse

Dublin, Dec. 3 (AP).—Tuskar Light is a 110-foot structure on a pinpoint of rock in St. Georges Channel, 6 miles off the southeast tip of Eire.

As the beams of the light swept the dark seas Tuesday night, one of the three keepers spied a stray mine. With each toss of the waves it drifted nearer to Tuskar Rock.

For two hours they watched as it washed closer and closer. As is the custom with lighthouse keepers, they were marooned in their tower. They could only wait and stare—and tend the light.

Ashore at Rosslare, harbormen saw a blinding flash out at sea and heard a rumbling explosion. They put out in a lifeboat.

In the kitchen of Tuskar Light they found Keeper Patrick Scanlon dying of injuries, Keeper William Cahill covered by the debris of walls, ceiling and furniture, but otherwise unhurt.

Upstairs, beside the light lay Keeper Peter Roddy, knocked out by the great stones and torrent of water hurled up by the explosion. Tuskar Light still shone.

Marine Rates Up

New York, Dec. 3 (AP).—Marine underwriters today drastically increased cargo war risk rates between the Americas and the East and Far East and substantially reduced rates applying to shipments across the South Atlantic.

War risk rates on shipments via the Pacific Ocean route were increased three-quarters of 1 per cent to 1¾ per cent, or $1.75 on each $100 of declared value. On shipments to and from Africa, the underwriters made a reduction of one-quarter of 1 per cent or from 2 per cent to 1¾ for shipments in American flag vessels and reduced the rate to 2 per cent from 3 per cent for other than American flag ships.

The changes were regarded as indicating the underwriters regarded the situation in the South Atlantic as greatly improved and at the same time viewed with increasing anxiety conditions in the Pacific.

Senator Wheeler Renews Attack On Foreign Policy

By the Associated Press

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, renewed his attacks on President Roosevelt's foreign policy yesterday with an assertion that ultimately it was liable to mean "the plowing under of every fourth American boy."

"Some months ago," Wheeler said in a statement to reporters, "I said the President's foreign policy meant the plowing under of every fourth American boy.

"That statement was denounced by the President, but certainly if we continue to pursue the policy that has been outlined to the President by the war makers within and without the Administration, my former prediction will come true and we will be plowing them under not only in Europe and in Africa, but in India and China."

"The only time the Administration had intimated that we should go to war with Japan is when the British Empire is threatened," the Montana Senator declared. "Japan has not threatened us. She has not even threatened to cut us off from any of our supplies."

Laborite Split Near in Britain On Draft Bill

By the Associated Press

London, Dec. 3.—A split in the Labor Party was threatened tonight because Winston Churchill's new conscription measures apply only to men and women and not to wealth, and the possibility arose the official party and form an actual opposition to the government.

A large bloc of Labor members held a heated meeting today to discuss the bill, which the party as a whole dislikes. Considerable support developed for an amendment, sponsored by 30 M. P.'s, to force parallel nationalization of private property.

The bill itself, which widens conscript age limits to take in men from 18½ to 50 and provides for compulsory uniformed service by young unmarried women, is expected, however, to be adopted in any event.

Laborites to Meet Again

The Laborites will meet again tomorrow, with the prospect that there will be a considerable vote against supporting the government bill. This in turn might lead to a heavy "no" vote when the bill comes up in Commons, or even a permanent break by some Laborites from the party leadership, which participates in the wartime cabinet and is committed to its general support.

In Commons itself, Lady Astor heckled the bill for not going far enough in conscription of woman power. The government, through Sir John Anderson, lord president of the council, hastened to defend itself against the more serious charge that it was refusing to conscript wealth.

Sir John said the government already controlled production, distribution, prices and profits; had requisitioned private financial assets and business properties, and had put out of business "whole sections of the population who were handling private property." He contrasted what he said was a 43 per cent increase in "earnings of the wage-earning community" with business profits "at least 20 per cent less than before the war."

Lady Astor Attacks Churchill

The Virginia-born Lady Astor accused Churchill of having "a blind eye where women are concerned" and said:

"If you don't conscript married women there will be great discontent."

Pending Parliamentary approval for the entire conscription measure, the King issued a proclamation today giving effect to the first step in the program, calling up of some 70,000 youths 18½ years old. This action was taken under existing powers which permit registration of all men from 18 to 41. Previously, no one under 19 had been summoned. Under the projected measure, raising the upper age limit to 50, nearly three million additional conscripts will come under review.

Lehar, Merry Widow Composer, Going Strong as Ever at 71

By Louis P. Lochner
Associated Press Staff Writer

Vienna—Franz Lehar, world-famed composer of "The Merry Widow" and other operettas, is going strong as ever at 71.

His kindly eyes still are fired with youthful enthusiasm, his round, shubby face still beams happiness.

"This may be a very lucky day for me," he said in a rather confidential mood. "A friend whom I trust implicitly has been writing a libretto for me, and today I received word he had finished.

Doesn't Know Subject

"I don't kn. what subject he has chosen nor how he has treated his subject. I merely told him I wanted something intensely human." He wouldn't disclose the friend's name.

"At the opening of the exposition of Mozart's manuscripts, letters and other documents," I suggested, "it was pointed out how Mozart practically had his compositions finished in his head before writing them down, while Beethoven made innumerable changes. How is it with you, Master Lehar?"

Lehar seemed to like this question.

"You see," he said, "I've invented a musical shorthand system of my own which nobody else can read but which I understand.

"When an idea for a melody comes to me, I jot it down in shorthand, and thus nothing is lost.

"The pity with many composers is that they have ideas and then forget to put them down immediately."

Wrote Three at Once

He recalled that in 1909-1910 he worked at three scores simultaneously.

"This is how it happened:

"My operetta, 'Three Wives,' was a complete flop. It's good for a composer if once in a while his works are a failure, for then he re-examines himself and his work and doesn't get swell-headed.

"As though to compensate for this failure, I received three splendid librettos at the same time—'Gypsy Love,' with Hungarian; 'Count of Luxembourg,' with French, and 'Fuerstenkind,' with German milieu. I couldn't decide which I liked best, so I took on all three.

"Up in Ischl, where I have my home, I had three tables set up, at each of which one score was developed.

"Sometimes I found myself getting tired and rather groggy working over one score. Then I'd go to the next table, and somehow I could take a fresh start and work at that score without feeling a bit tired.

"By autumn of 1910 all three operettas went on the stage."

Six Latin-American Beauties to Visit Here

Six senoritas, each representing a different coffee growing Latin-American country, will arrive in Washington today on a good-will mission.

The young woman, from Brazil, Colombia, Cuba, El Salvador, Mexico and Costa Rica, will be guests of Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House tomorrow afternoon. After a two-day visit here they will take a flying tour of the United States.

The senoritas are in the United States as guests of the Pan-American Coffee Bureau.

Miss Kelling Writer, Dies In Gas Blast

VESTA KELLING

Vesta Kelling, 40, widely-known feature writer of the Associated Press and former secretary of the Women's National Press Club in Washington, was killed early yesterday morning in an accidental gas explosion in her East Side apartment in New York.

Miss Kelling was a member of the Washington Star staff for three years, writing under her married name of Vesta Cummings.

Her death followed closely that in Lisbon on Monday of Lieut. Col. Charles M. Cummings, to whom she had been twice married and from whom she was divorced the second time last year. Col. Cummings was returning to the United States from an official mission in London when he died of a heart attack.

The fatal explosion resulted when a pot in which Miss Kelling was cooking eggs boiled over and extinguished the gas flames while she was answering the telephone. Another flame under a coffee pot, according to the report of Fire Marshal Thomas P. Brophy, of New York, ignited the accumulated gas just as she returned to the kitchen.

Miss Kelling was born in Nome, Alaska, the daughter of a gold-mining prospector. Her newspaper career had taken her to many parts of the world. She was married first to Col. Cummings in Honolulu 15 years ago while she was working for the Honolulu Star-Bulletin.

She came to Washington from the Nevada State Journal in 1936 and in 1937 was married to Maj. Lawrence W. Carr, of the United States Air Force. They were divorced two years later and she left Washington to remarry Col. Cummings.

She resumed her maiden name after her second divorce and in February of this year went to work with the Wide World service of the Associated Press in New York. Survivors include her father and mother, who now live in San Francisco.

Col. Cummings was a native of Ohio and received his commission in the Regular Army in 1920.

Two Girls, Boy Face Jury in Roadside Killing

By the Associated Press

Bel Air, Md., Dec. 3.—Three Alexandria (Va.) High School students from a mixed background of trailer camp life and religious fervor go on trial tomorrow at 10 a. m. for the roadside slaying of Grainger G. Browning.

Circuit Court Judge Frederick Lee Cobourn will hear the State's case against Herbert H. Cox, jr., 16; Ida May Price, 15, and Leona Ellen Cunningham, arrested in Portland, Me., after Browning's bloodstained car was found in their possession.

All were indicted last month by a Harford County grand jury with shooting the 38-year-old North Carolina carpenter. The two girls also were charged as accessories after the fact.

State's Attorney D. Paul McNabb, who will prosecute, said today there was possibility of an agreement on the spot where Browning was shot through the head and upon the spot several miles north where his body was dumped from the car. If the defense agreed, he said, considerable time would be saved.

One of the key witnesses is expected to be Gerald Ray, sheet metal worker who lived at the Alexandria trailer camp, home of the three children and their parents. It was Ray, according to police, to whom the trio confided their desire to run away, and who urged Browning to "help the kids out."

Sings Tonight

Roxy's Advice Put Peerce In Opera

Nine years ago this month, a black-haired, barrel-chested young man stood backstage in the Radio City Music Hall. He held a violin limply in one hand, and wiped his tears away with the other.

He had just sung and played a short piece in a Weber and Fields' fiftieth anniversary performance, and the late and great Roxy had just told him, "I'm sorry, son, but you're out."

Last Saturday night, the same young man, Jan Peerce, made his debut in the Metropolitan Opera, playing the role of Alfredo in La Traviata. He had no violin, and he did not weep after the performance. Instead, he was a great success.

"A lot of things happened between those two performances," the tenor reminisced last night, a few hours after arriving in Washington for tonight's concert at Constitution Hall.

"Roxy—and I'll always love the man," he said, "finally got me an audition with Erno Rapee. First I sang in the pit, and then on the stage—and then came radio performances, and concerts, and finally—well, finally last week came."

His eyes crinkling as he talked, and his cheeks bulging in smiles, Jan Peerce admitted that he gave up his violin when Roxy told him to.

"But to this day, I know he took me out of that first performance because the finale was too long," the singer said. "But that didn't help what I felt then. I couldn't run out in the street and tell everybody what happened."

Jan Peerce is an "all-American." He is one of the few opera singers who have not studied abroad. Born in New York City, he started his musical career singing popular songs and playing the violin in settlement houses when he was a school boy.

Tonight, Jan Peerce sings a varied program, including selections from Handel, Liszt, Schubert, Strauss and Ravel.

Unusual Weather Held Reason for Cold 'Epidemic'

Washington's unseasonable weather has brought on a mild epidemic of colds and the Health Department last night warned all persons with "sniffle" symptoms to stay home and "doctor up."

"Don't be indifferent about colds," the Health Department said, "because they can lead to all sorts of complications of the nose, throat and lungs."

Reports from Federal and private office buildings, it was announced, indicate an increase in respiratory infections and workers were urged not to endanger others by coughing and sneezing in public.

On the other hand, health authorities had considerably brighter information to impart. They reported that pneumonia deaths here have dropped from 145 per 100,000 in 1936 to 80.2 in 1940 and records thus far this year indicate an all-time low record.

2 D. C. Men Complete Course at Arsenal

Two Washingtonians have completed a special course of training at the United States Army Chemical Welfare School, Edgewood Arsenal, Md., it was announced last night.

The two men, members of the Tenth Civilian Defense Course, are Fred Litteral, 1449 Harvard Street Northwest, and Howard S. Anderson, 1353 Euclid Street Northwest.

Also completing the course were Ole Jacobsen, of Arlington, Va., and Edgar L. Warden, of Woodbridge, Va.

Legal Officials To Meet Today

More than 200 city and town legal officials from 40 States will convene today at the annual three-day meeting of the National Institute of Municipal Law Officers at the Mayflower Hotel.

The keynote address will be delivered this morning by William C. Chanler, corporation counsel of New York City and president of the institute. Mr. Chanler will also file a printed report covering the activities of the institute in the national defense picture.

Other speakers listed for today's session are General Counsel Oscar S. Cox, of the Office for Emergency Management; General Counsel David Ginsburg, of the Office of Price Administration, and Assistant General Counsel David Cobb and Brunson MacChesney.

Horace H. Edwards, city attorney of Richmond; Paul E. Krouse, corporation counsel of Detroit; Louis B. Burke, city attorney of Montebello, Calif., and Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, of New York City, are scheduled to speak during the convention.

Have You Taken a Stab at Fencing...?

Absolute perfection in fencing, like the moon, has never been reached, and that's half the fun of it, according to its devotees.

Sword play is said to have developed as a science after the use of gunpowder caused knights to discard their heavy armor. Today, with all its nuances and niceties of form, it is, as Henry Breckinridge, famous American fencer, once wrote, "based upon those inevitable principles of practical perfection which emerge when life or death may be decided by the movements of a blade."

The fencers pictured here are typical of several hundred amateur enthusiasts in Washington who find fascination in the matching of wits and whirring blades. They are, Ruth Rubin, c stenographer in the Railroad Retirement Board, and George E. Blanc, an employe of the Office of Emergency Management.

Three weapons are used in the local fencing clubs. The foil, which Miss Rubin demonstrates, is used most generally. The epee, which employs the point alone, can score a "hit" on almost any part of the opponent's anatomy. And the saber, in its light Italian form, shown by Blanc, combines the beauties of both point and edge.

Although there are intricacies of each type of fencing, according to Blanc, the principal distinctions are in the portion of the opponent's body counted valid as a "touch." For example, he says, with the foil, the target is limited to the chest, which is divided by four imaginary lines.

The "attack" is the ensemble of movements by which the fencer tries to touch an opponent by bringing the point of the weapon squarely on his body as shown. No conventions are held in fighting with the epee, considered the most delicate weapon, and touches are valid on any part of the target.

Far more spectacular to the onlooker is saber fighting, in which the movements are wider, using not only the point but also the blade of the weapon. Blanc demonstrates several of these actions. Touches may be made almost anywhere on the body, head or arms.

The Washington Fencers' Club, of which Blanc is a member, meets every Wednesday night at 8 p. m. in Pierce Hall, Sixteenth and Harvard Streets Northwest. Miss Rubin attends the Y. W. C. A. fencing club, meeting every Tuesday night at 8 p. m. in their building, Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest.

Dancing studios also are interested in the fencing art. For example, it was announced recently that Gen. G. D. Ivitzky, a winner of the first Imperial Russian Olympics and formerly fencing master of the Militaire Academy of His Imperial Highness Grand Duke Constantine of Russia, has been engaged to teach at the Phil Hayden Studios of Dance, 6 Dupont Circle.

TOUCHE—Blanc scores a "hit" on his opponent. Fencing is an inexpensive pastime. The beginner needs only a foil, wire mesh mask, and leather gauntlet. The mask costs approximately $4.50, the French foil, $3, glove, $2

In fencing parlance, thrusts and parrys are named according to the section of the body attacked or defended

Yule Cards for Defense

Santa Claus and Uncle Sam have teamed their resources this year to bolster national defens. The greeting card industry, cooperating with the Treasury Department, has distributed throughout the Nation Christmas cards incorporating a regulation Defense Stamp Album for 50 stamps. The cards sell for 5 cents each. Covers of three are shown above

Mr. Morrison Dies at 78 In Baltimore

Hugh Alexander Morrison, retired custodian of the Representatives' reading room in the Library of Congress, died yesterday in Baltimore, Md., of a heart attack after attending his sister's funeral there. He was 78 years old.

Mr. Morrison was stricken with a heart attack last Saturday and was removed to Union Memorial Hospital, Baltimore. His sister, Miss Kate Morrison, died November 30.

Funeral services will be held from his home, 2806 Thirty-ninth Street Northwest, at 2 p. m. tomorrow. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

A native of Baltimore, Mr. Morrison came here in 1890 and served with the Library of Congress when it was still in the Capitol. When the present building was completed in 1897, he was appointed chief assistant to the superintendent of the reading room. He retired as custodian in 1937.

Mr. Morrison was author of several books, including "Inter-Oceanic Canals," and "The Bibliography of Alaska." He was an active worker of the Metropolitan Methodist Church.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Clar L. Morrison; three daughters, Mrs. Ben A. Harlan, of Silver Spring, Md.; Mrs. James R. Lowry, of this city, and Mrs. Willis E. Melvin, of Baltimore, and ten grandchildren.

program to revamp the whole mass-transportation set-up in the District, Hankin stated. Established routes will be altered and new routes established on an "experimental plan" which will permit the P. U. C. to try out ideas suggested by competent traffic engineers, and then reject the bad ones.

Larger PUC Staff

To give meaning to the experimental program, the P. U. C. staff will have to be increased to permit the gathering of necessary data, he declared. Hankin disclosed that he sent a request to the District Commissioners yesterday for an additional appropriation of $30,000 to permit him to hire seven or eight new men.

The cross-town lines have been studied by District and Capital Transit engineers with a final report expected within two weeks, Hankin said.

When the routes of the lines are finally determined, they will be submitted to the PUC for immediate action through a "consent" procedure approved by the Capital Transit Co., he said. This play will avoid the delay that a protracted set of hearings would create, he said.

Mass Transportation Problem

"Our No. 1 problem in this city is mass transportation," Hankin asserted.

"I do not think the street-car service is rotten, but I think it falls far short of being the best possible service that we ought to have in the District. Important changes have taken place. Whether they could have or should have been emphasized, I do not know.

"But there is room for improvement."

Objectives of a revised transportation program as outlined by Hankin are as follows:

1. Transportation to and from work in the shortest possible time.
2. Passengers to be provided with the most comfort available.
3. Service to be for the lowest possible rate.
4. A reasonable return compatible with adequate service should be guaranteed.

Favors Express Buses

Another improvement which Hankin viewed with favor is the institution of a system of express buses during rush hours all over the city.

"I am not satisfied with the present limited extent of express lines," he said.

Hankin declared that he approved of making surveys to see if subways or commuter trains from outlying areas were needed, but added that he favored utilizing existing facilities to the fullest possible extent before new services are added.

He made clear that mass transportation problems would take precedence over accomodating individual automobiles and even taxicabs. However, he stated that other arms of the District government including the traffic and highway divisions must be considered.

Among the surveys favored by Hankin is one to determine the destinations and routes of travel to and from work of Government employes and workers in private industry.

"Unless we know where rides start and end, we cannot know what service to provide," he said.

Hankin's announcements were greeted with bursts of applause.

The District Building board room, where the meeting was held, was filled to capacity by 150 delegates and transport officials.

Redcap Loss At D. C. Station Put at $30,000

The redcap account at Union Station suffered a $30,000 loss during the year ended October 31 because of the porters' failure to turn in enough baggage checks to pay their minimum wages, F. J. Bresnahan, chief clerk, testified at a Wage-Hour Division hearing yesterday.

Prior to enactment of the wage-hour law, the terminal did not maintain any redcap account because the redcaps were treated as free lances, rather than terminal employes, he said. A portion of the $30,000 deficit provided each man with $58.50 worth of redcap uniforms, he said.

Lovie Crawford, Negro redcap foreman, of 1329 First Street Northwest, told of troubles encountered when he was assigned to follow redcaps around to determine their earnings.

The redcaps refused to cooperate, he said, often dropping tips into their pockets before he could check on them, and then apologizing by saying "they forgot." He cited one case where he saw a redcap receive a tip of 50 cents, consisting of two quarters, one of which was reported, with the other slipped into the porter's pocket.

Attorneys for redcap and terminal interests throughout the Southeast are expected to sum up the testimony for both sides today or tomorrow

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

'Keep 'Em Flying,' Keith's, Sure Keeps 'Em Laughing!

Abbott and Costello Score Fourth Straight Hit In Wacky Comedy of the Army Air Corps, With Martha Raye and Carol Bruce to Do the Singing

"KEEP 'EM FLYING." Universal picturization of a story by Edmund L. Hartman, adapted to the screen by True Boardman, Nat Perrin and John Grant, starring Abbott and Costello, with Martha Raye, Carol Bruce, William Gargan, Dick Foran, Charles Lang, Truman Bradley, Loring Smith and William B. Davidson. Directed by Arthur Lubin. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

SO ABBOTT AND COSTELLO have gone and done it again. It was only last January that these former burleycue stars—one of them, at least, is burly—stepped into overwhelming popularity on the screen in "Buck Privates." A little later they climbed higher up the rigging "In the Navy" and promptly hoisted themselves still further in "Hold That Ghost." Now, judging from yesterday's first audience at RKO-Keith's, they have topped all of their earlier hits in the matter of sustained laughter in "Keep 'Em Flying," third of their service films, dedicated this time to the Army Air Corps. And they still have the Tank Corps and the Artillery to play around with!

"Keep 'Em Flying" follows the same formula as its predecessors—just enough romantico-patriotic story framework to support a heavy barrage of the old burlesque "gags" that constitute the principal stock in trade of the rotund Mr. Costello and the acid Mr. Abbott. Their laughs are all aimed at the belt line and explode there with about the gentle subtlety of a flight of 2-ton bombs. To take the place of the battleship running wild in "In the Navy," they have a free-wheeling, high-caliber torpedo racing around the air field, with Mr. Costello aboard, in the present waggery and a flight in a plane, supposedly without an engine, that makes his earlier ground adventure on the high explosive seem like a quiet little ride on a kiddie car. But perhaps the funniest "bit" in the picture is the telephone conversation between Costello and William Gargan, in adjoining booths, when the boiling point is reduced in a manner that is extravagantly hilarious. To enumerate all of the comedy devices so efficiently utilized in this antic charade would be practically to carbon copy the script.

The whole mad business gets under way on a carnival lot, when Jinx Roberts, the star stunt flier, gets himself fired and Blackie Beacon and Heathcliff, follow him into his next job, which happens to be as a recruit at the Cal-Aero Training School for Army aviators. Their enlistment is as accidental as it was in "Buck Privates." However, a former rival of Jinx's turns out to be his superior officer; there is a USO gal on the field to supply a touch of romance and sing some songs; two other waitresses—both of them Martha Raye—to do some clowning and warble some more tunes, and no end of stunt flying and heroics among all concerned to give the thing a dash of martial tone and patriotic fervor. The unfailing presence in every scene of the Messrs. Benson and Heathcliff, of course, preludes any of these more saccharine enterprises' ever becoming too sticky.

Costello Expanding as a Comedian

The most notable aspect of "Keep 'Em Flying" is discoverable in Lou Costello's increasing perfection in his pantalooning. Not that he is as yet any polished drawing-room comedian, but the more globular of the goofs is becoming conscious of something called finesse. He now manages with a gesture or a word points that he formerly felt must be driven home with a sledge-hammer. Bud Abbott always has been the best of the contemporary "feeders." Much more congenially cast than in the recent "This Woman Is Mine," Carol Bruce does splendidly with her songs, but still not too well with her "acting," and Martha Raye, in the dual role of the Phelps twins, could have afforded more fun than she does were her opportunities greater. Like her smile, they are pretty expansive as it is. Dick Foran, as the wildcat flier, and William Gargan, in the role of the innocent "menace," not forgetting Charles Lang as the lad afraid to solo, crank up some serious moments to permit the audience to catch its breath and sew on its buttons between the Abbott and Costello hurricane assaults upon its risibilities.

Foremost among the supplementary screen attractions on the new Keith bill is the "Norway in Revolt" issue of the March of Time. Implications of greater Norwegian resentment against the Nazis than the general public has suspected here are given apparently authentic point, with the exploration of national rebellion even extending to the air fields of Canada, where hundreds of Norway's youths are preparing against the day when they will be able to strike back, and to cooperative units of the British navy. Mr. Schickelgruber evidently has something to worry about besides Russia and Libya. "Truant Officer Donald," one of Walt Disney's lesser triumphs in Technicolor, and a brief newsreel further augment the exercise of the diaphragmatic muscles for which the program was assembled.

The Defense Effort Priorities Putting Pinch on Hollywood

By Frederick C. Othman
United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, Dec. 3.—The war and its accompanying priorities are causing shortages in Hollywood in breakway bottles and movie stars. Technicolor dyes and the goo that makes ladies beautiful, and gold braid and high-powered technical men.

There's even a shortage of horses for cow operas, account of the British army buying them up, while the movie makers have given up all hope of scenes at the waterfront. There aren't any boats, in the first place, and, in the second, the Navy has marked most of the harbor district out of bounds for the picture producers.

Among the British actors who went home to carry on the fight were David Niven, Vivien Leigh, Laurence Olivier and Richard Green—who was just beginning to be the idol of the subdebs when he returned to England.

Many an American performer and director likewise has abandoned Hollywood for the duration. Doug Fairbanks, jr., is in Iceland with the Navy. Robert Montgomery is a naval attache, recently in London, and Jimmy Stewart is an Army corporal.

John Ford, one of the best directors in the business, is a naval commander. Garson Kanin, who directed some of the town's sprightliest comedies, is in the Army.

Mechanical Departments Pressed

The OPM now is figuring on using some of the major studios' magnificently equipped machine shops for part-time defense work, while the property, costume and makeup departments are finding it increasingly difficult to put the ideas of the script writers into being.

One studio needed a workable streetcar line, but couldn't find a copper trolley wire. Resins from Europe are nonexistent and scenes involving the tossing of the villain through a plate glass window are no more. Real plate glass is too dangerous; transparent resins aren't.

Beer bottles, vases, and punch bowls for throwing purposes also are made of these resins, while the breakway chairs in the gangster melees are built of balsa wood, which is unobtainable.

Last costume picture wherein all the actresses were dressed in the finest of silks and satins was finished last week by Republic, which had its own troubles finding enough cloth. Hereafter many a dress will be made of synthetics, which is a worry to the dry cleaning departments.

Gold Braid and Cellophane

There is no more gold braid; it all came from France. And what'll the boys use on Nelson Eddy's splendid uniforms now? Cellophane, which makes the fringe for the skirts of the dancing girls, is on the priorities list. So are most of the dyes which make the Technicolor swimming pools, water falls and limpid lakes that beautiful blue.

There seem to be enough silk stockings around to keep the pretty legs prettily covered, though a studio did have serious trouble the other day locating opera-length hose long enough to cover the legs of Eleanor Powell.

HEDDA HOPPER

The Gown Was the Main Idea!

Hollywood, Dec. 3.

A minor upheaval was created in our local sewing circles when Marjorie Main was invited as guest of honor to the Tri Delt banquet, and her studio discovered she didn't have an evening gown. A masculine friend went out, selected one. Then the female contingent threw up hands in holy horror; said it was too old-fashioned. After a week's hustling and bustling, poor Marjorie finally got herself one two hours before the banquet. "And then," says Marjorie, "I made a grand entrance amidst a peculiar clanking. Discovered later it was some danged weights holding down the hem, that dragged like Hamlet's ghost."

MARJORIE MAIN

Marjorie was told that in her next picture she'd get Clark Gable, but gosh! He just turned out to be Wally Berry again . . . And speaking of Beery, I hear he's making plans to retire from the screen a year hence and live on his place at Jackson Hole, Wyo.

Roz Russell is sure one girl who fooled this town. When she arrived, they said she'd never get far—she was too cold. Well, for the past two years, she's been getting choice parts at every studio in town on loan-out. Now she's free-lancing and getting more for one picture than she made on a year's contract. Maybe that coolness was just horse sense.

Since the row Sonja Henie and husband Dan Topping had outside the Stork Club in New York, friends are beginning to wonder if their marriage will last. Seems he resents the fact that she goes home early to practice skating next morning. He's supposed to have said, "Anyone who's skated as long as you have shouldn't need practice."

And I love the remark Gertie Lawrence made to one of the Vanderbilt clan when Marlene Dietrich sent a waiter over to ask if Gertie would join her. The Grade-A Who's Who-er remarked to Gertie that Marlene was so theatrical. Gertie looked her over and said, "Darling, if you had a little bit of that theatricalism, maybe you could have gotten away with some of the things she's done."

I asked Ginger Rogers if she attracted much attention among locals around her Oregon ranch. She said, "No," but they have vague suspicions there's a nuisance in the neighborhood."

Alex Gottlieb, who's produced the Abbott and Costello pictures at Universal, sent the boys this wire the day they started shooting on "Rio Rita" at Metro: "This is your chance to break into pictures. Don't muff it."

And that reminds me, now that Bette Davis is president of our Academy, why don't we change things a little bit and give an Oscar not only to the best actor of the year, but to the best comedian and the best comedienne? In these days it's just as important to laugh as to think.

Since "The Maltese Falcon" John Huston is certainly the fair-haired boy at Warners. They're buying stories for him like mad. Latest one is "Treasure of the Sierra Madre," by B. Tavern, laid in Mexico. It's the story of a man's quest for gold, and how useless it is when he finds it.

Lana Turner is the object of the Army and Navy's adoration these days. Second on the list is Rita Hayworth. Well, who can blame them?

A Scottie in "Arsenic and Old Lace" got so palsy-walsy with Priscilla Lane that he undertook to chaperone her in a love scene with Cary Grant. Script called for some rough stuff on Cary's part, which didn't look good to "Pard," who rushed in and spoiled a good take.

Will Fowler, 20-year-old son of Gene, an office boy at Twentieth Century by day, will have his "Morning in Manhattan" published this winter. His symphony suite "Nocturne and Pastorale" will be played by our Los Angeles symphony orchestra.

Warners just signed Harry Lewis and June Millard to stock contracts. The kids were introduced and its developed into the hottest romance in town.

Crosby Bangtails Racing All Over

Bing Crosby is one of the few American sportsmen having thoroughbred horses racing in his colors on three different continents. Crosby's turf operations in the United States are well known. When he was in South America recently, where he vacationed following the finish of "Birth of the Blues," he purchased "Blackie," one of the best mares in the Argentine. Recently confirmation of a deal in Australia was received whereby Crosby leased from W. J. Smith the top-notch filly "Miss Hua," to be raced in his colors at Melbourne.

Wanted! Kids Who Look Like Cagney

Michael Curtiz, who'll direct James Cagney in "Yankee Doodle Dandy," life story of George M. Cohan, is faced with one of the most unusual casting problems of the year.

He needs two boys and two girls to play Cohan and his sister, Josephine, as children. That sounds simple, but here's the catch:

Curtiz requires a brother and sister aged 8 and 7, respectively, and another brother and sister aged 13 and 12. They must be able to sing and dance, play the violin—and they must look like Cagney, who's going to be George Cohan.

Hollywood agencies have been scoured but have produced nothing even remotely filling the bill. Curtiz says he doesn't demand professional stage or screen experience, but would be delighted if he could discover some total unknowns to work in his picture.

New York Calling!

New York, Dec. 3.

COL. McCORMICK: Marshall Field's Chicago Sun has set up advertising rates on the basis of a daily circulation of 250,000. For its first Sunday issue, a million copies of the comic section are being prepared . . . MRS. HARRY PAYNE WHITNEY: Your ward, Gloria Vanderbilt, phoned friends last week, announcing that she was flying back to New York because "Hollywood is so boring." She'll live at a friend's apartment, in town . . . BRUCE CABOT: It's all right to come back. That man who claims that you hit him is willing to forget and won't sue . . . MAYOR LAGUARDIA: Gov. James of Louisiana gave a cocktail party in your honor, during your visit to New Orleans a few days ago. The Governor's aide, who was supposed to invite you, simply forgot about it.

LINDA DARNELL

MIKE JACOBS: Last week Loy Nilson applied for the role of a prize-fighter, in the new play, "They Should've Stood in Bed." Agent Bill Liebling looked at Nilson, said "You're not the fighter-type," and turned him away. That night, at the Garden, George Abrams fought for the middleweight title. Abrams had been held to a draw by a fighter Nilson defeated . . . MARC CONNELLY: For a long time, we won't be hearing Jack White recite his "Throwing Rocks at the Sun"—an essay which you once described as a classic possessing the true spirit of New York. White, who has been reciting it twice each night for six years, at his 18 Club, suddenly had forgotten it . . . BING CROSBY: Arthur Tracy, "The Street Singer" who once rivaled your radio popularity, returns to the air after January 1.

JESSE JONES: Unless your department's Census Bureau asks Congress for additional funds, with which to compile its statistics, the census advisory committee will make the plea itself. The committee, composed of eminent insurance and advertising met, etc., insists that rich America can afford such expenditure . . . DAVID SELZNICK: Laurence Olivier's superior officer in the air army of the royal navy, is an actor who played a bit-part in a production which starred Olivier . . . LAURENCE STEINHARDT: Adolf A. Berle, jr., said last week that there'll be some delay before your successor is named. "Right now," said Berle, "we don't need an Ambassador to Moscow as much as we need some one to sit there and see that our lend-lease stuff gets through."

COL. FRANK KNOX: The entertainers who toured the Army camps in an Army bomber saw a ship, flying no flag, in the Caribbean. The bomber circled the vessel a dozen times—until it finally displayed a French flag . . . VINTON FREEDLEY: That new club on East Fifty-fourth, on the site of the old 9 o'Clock Club, will be backed by Cole Porter and Dwight Wiman. It will be called "The 1, 2, 3" . . . MARK HELLINGER: Linda Darnell, who plays the feminine lead in your new hit, "Rise and Shine," has been lunching with her mother at Sardi's. Mrs. Darnell won't permit Linda to drink any wine—and so Linda has it served to her in Coca-Cola bottles . . . HARRY BRIDGES: A Broadway playwright met a Supreme Court justice in Washington and asked: "Off the record—how will you vote in the Bridges case?"

WILLIAM GREEN: Congressman Clare Hoffman, of Michigan, who is one of Washington's most outspoken antiunionists, astounded his colleagues by warning that he will vote against legislation banning strikes. Hoffman declared: "That's going too far" . . . A. B. C. BOARD: The "Queen Mary"—the night club you closed last week—did an unusual thing, for such closings. The management gave its help an extra week's wages . . . NIGHT-CLUB OWNERS ASSOCIATION: The Beachcombers tried to sign Diosa Costello, but she wanted too much money. They hired, instead the Batista and Puppy troupe of dancers. They didn't know that Diosa is married to Puppy. And so now, when Diosa calls for her husband every night, she does one dance. Yesterday, Diosa substituted for a sick member of the troupe.

PEARL BUCK: Dr. Leo C. Rosten's new best-seller, "Hollywood," would have been the Book-of-the-Month choice, if it hadn't been for your "Dragon Seed" . . . JIM FARLEY: Ed Flynn and Attorney General Biddle now have an "understanding," to avoid any possibility of dispute. They decided that if they ever disagree on recommendations for jobs, each is to make his own recommendation directly, and unheatedly, to the President . . . JOHN KIERAN: In its next issue, the Encyclopedia Britannica will change the odds quoted therein, concerning dice-games. Wilbert Newgold and Alma Dettinger, who conduct WQXR's question and problem program, discovered the error, regarding the possibilities of hitting a seven.

BILLIE BURKE: Recently the members of the Ziegfeld Club held their annual party at Fefe's Monte Carlo. The membership, composed of all girls who once were glorified by Ziegfeld, held reunion, gossiped, renewed their friendship, etc. . . . There was one, however, who found no acquaintances there. "I saw them all," she sighed, "and couldn't remember any of them" . . . She's Dorothy Mitchell, who was one of Ziegfeld's most famed beauties. Dorothy was at Fefe's yesterday, in a dual capacity. She's a member of the Ziegfeld Club . . . and she works in the powder room of Fefe's night club.

VERA ZORINA,

one of the foremost of the theater's ballerinas, again is pirouetting before the cameras in Paramount's picturization of the musical stage hit, "Louisiana Purchase," in which she scored so decisively on the boards. LOUELLA O. PARSONS

M-G-M Recruits "Soldiers Three"

New York, Dec. 3 (INS).—The telegram that Kipling's "Soldiers Three" will be made by M-G-M with—hold your breath—Clarke Gable, Spencer Tracy and Wallace Beery in the star spots, just beat me to the Waldorf Towers. That is really a cast and really a story assignment, for Kipling enthusiasts list "Soldiers Three," one of the plain tales from the hills collection, as one of his best. It was published at the same time as 'Wee Willie Winkie," "The Story of the Gadsbys," "In Black and White," and others, and curiously enough, was written before the author was 24.

CLARK GABLE

Do I need to add that Metro is really going to town on this production—which won't be made, however, until late in 1942. There are too many pictures already ticketed for Gable, Tracy and Beery to start the Kipling production sooner than the fall of next year.

Leslie Charteris thinks he's found the way to solve the "Saint" casting problem. I hope so, because it seems every other letter I receive has a suggestion for this part now that George Sanders has been unsainted. Chat Charteris has written a play, 'The Saint Must Behave," which he will produce in Hollywood, and here is the idea: He will try out all the various candidates, including self-appointed amateurs who look promising on the stake in one-week runs, and the contestant making the best impression will be handed the saint role on the screen. Among the Hollywood actors, Henry Wilcoxen is very much in the running.

'In you column of November 21 you stated that a certain high-salaried movie star refused to take money for a broadcast and accepted, instead, a gift of expensive Georgian silverware, over 100 years old because it was nontaxable," writes Solomon Gordon on the stationary of the Treasury Department, Internal Revenue Service, N. Y. "I hate to disillusion you, but the so-called gift is subject to tax. Regulation 10,308 reads: "If services are paid for with something other than money, the fair market value of the thing taken in payment is the amount to be included as income." I'm not writing this in my official capacity but merely as an interested reader of your column." Thanks for the information.

Personal to L. O. P. from the gang: A Mr. Seymour Nebenzahl called to say that Richard Oswald had no right to give you the story that he was going to remake "Mayerling." Nebenzahl says he is the sole producer of the picture starring and Danielle Darrieux and controls all rights. . . . Katherine de Mille and Anthony Quinn welcomed a little girl this morning and everyone is so happy for them. It was such a tragedy when they lost their little baby son last year. The new arrival is named Christiana. . . . The entire Paramount lot was in bedlam yesterday when 100 Dachshunds, working on E. H. Griffith's "Out of the Frying Pan" set got loose and scampered all over the lot. Or do you care? . . . Remember how everybody thought Ginny Simms and Kay Kyser had cooled permanently after that "farewell" cocktail party? Well, guess they must have changed their minds about Ginny going her way and Kay going his. They were holding hands as ardently as ever in the Blossom Room at the Roosevelt the other night.

Snapshots of New York and Hollywood collected at random: The Jack Warners leave for the Coast today. Mrs. Warner had a second degree burn received from a lamp while taking a treatment and has been ill for five weeks; my old friend, Bob Taplinger, is tossing a big party at Fefe's Monte Carlo Wednesday for the premiere of Warners' "Monte Carlo Ballet" short. The guest list reads like Who's Who; the President of Venezuela, Gen. E. L. Contreros and Mrs. Contreros, Gladys Swarthout, Doris Duke Cromwell, Mayor LaGuardia, Lady Mendl, Clifton Webb, Fanny Hurst, Lady Decies, Helen Hayes and many others. Deems Taylor will be the master of ceremonies.

Three wires from the Coast about Ann Sheridan and George Brent having their first date in three weeks at the Biarritz; Lana Turner, who has a weakness for swing maestros, stepping out, her first night back in Hollywood, with Tommy Dorsey, at the Palladium.

Columbia

Doing the films' duty by old-musical-favorites week in Washington, Loew's has returned "The Chocolate Soldier" to F Street while "The Student Prince" continues its revival on the E Street stage. The former opened yesterday on the Columbia screen with Nelson Eddy and Rise Stevens to sing the popular Oscar Straus melodies.

Though the blond baritone needs little of the introduction which may be expected for the screen's newest golden-voiced, raven-haired thrush, there are certain new aspects to the Eddy style in "The Chocolate Soldier." Since the film's plot isn't the "The Chocolate Soldier," at all, but, instead "The Guardsman," which reached the screen a decade ago with Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in the leads, Mr. Eddy's role is almost a dual one. Sometimes he's a recognizable Nelson Eddy, at others he's a bearded Cossack and generally he's a chap with a twinkle to his jealousy. It's a new, light touch and a welcome one.

The Stevens gal is a wow—just as she is at the Metropolitan Opera. She's got looks, a wealth of tone in her pipes and the very evident good fortune of having M-G-M's technical resources on her side. Well photographed and excellently recorded, she is an ingratiating singer, even with half a dozen reprises of "My Hero." Florence Bates and Nigel Bruce have the only supporting roles of any importance, though the singers and dancers are legion.

Last Chance

Once more Dr. Goebbels—this time in his speech, Monday, before the German academy—has warned his countrymen that the only peace they can expect without victory is a Punic peace. This war, he said, is not only Germany's greatest opportunity, it is also her last chance. He has asked the Germans to remember that vast as are the sacrifices which are asked of them, these are as nothing in contrast to "the sacrifices which defeated nations must bear." In other words, the Germans are being told that they may expect the treatment their leaders have visited upon Poles, Norwegians, Dutch, Belgians, French, Greeks, and Serbs. Such, said Dr. Goebbels, is "the inferno which would await us if we lost."

It is a shrewdly calculated argument, this of Dr. Goebbels. By this time even those Germans who have not followed the armies into the occupied lands have been afforded the opportunity to observe what it means to be a member of a conquered race. They have seen the slaves brought, after the practice of antiquity, as war booty into Germany to work in the fields, factories and mines. There have been stories of Germans so moved to compassion by the sight of these slaves as to risk the severest punishments to give them scraps of food. Two very young Germans girls are reported to have been sent to prison for the crime of giving a bit of bread to a Pole. The Germans know of the wholesale executions or deportations of hostages. Indeed, of all peoples of the ancient or modern worlds, it is the Germans who know best the meaning of Vae victis!

It is a psychological law that the consciousness of guilt is followed by the fear of retribution. It is on this fear rather than upon any hope of easy world conquest that the Nazis must now work if they are to prevent a progressive deterioration of the internal situation in Germany. The omnipresent Gestapo may preserve the Nazi ascendancy. But not even the Gestapo can preserve the sense of national purpose and the belief in national destiny among the ever-growing number of Germans whose kindred or friends have been slaughtered in battle, thrown into concentration camps, or medically slain in hospitals. Surely in those secret thoughts upon which not even the Gestapo can eavesdrop the Germans must by now have begun to doubt the infallibility of the Fuehrer.

Copper Caches

The controversy over the alleged hoarding of copper by the Rural Electrification Administration has become hopelessly entangled in power politics. In the absence of definite information as to the amount of copper held in storage by the REA and private utilities, the layman is in no position to pass judgment upon the merits of the dispute. Representative Rankin, on the one hand, says the private power industry is "trying to mislead the Congress and the public about the REA and its program in the hope that they can use the defense emergency to stop the progress of this program and to give the power trust a throttlehold on the systems already in existence." Representative Winter maintains, on the other hand, that the REA is hoarding millions upon millions of pounds of copper, in disregard of the needs of national defense, to further nationalization of the electric power industry. The one sure fact that emerges from a barrage of charges and countercharges which are colored by bias is that a good deal of copper is being held by both public and private power groups for their own use.

Secretary Wickard has laid down certain reasonable principles for the general guidance of the power industry. He does not believe, he says, that the REA should undertake construction of new transmission lines unless those lines are needed for defense purposes. Similarly, he objects to the use by private utilities of accumulated copper stores "to sabotage REA and preempt the rural field which they have neglected for so long a time." Of course, it is imperative, as Mr. Wickard realizes, to call a truce to competitive struggles between public and private power interests, at least for the duration of the defense emergency. Since the interested parties cannot be expected to take a wholly objective view of their own needs for defense purposes, an impartial investigation is plainly needed to determine whether copper and other scarce materials are being hoarded by the power industry.

Pacific Preparations

While Washington awaits Japan's reply to President Roosevelt's pointed request for an explanation of recent Japanese troop and plane movements into French Indo-China, the ABCD powers and Thailand are leaving no stone unturned to prepare themselves for any eventuality. It is possible, particularly in view of Germany's failure to capture Moscow and the drubbing which the German armies have received at the hands of the Russians in the Rostov sector, that Japan will refrain from throwing a lighted match into the Far Eastern powder barrel at this time. There is no certainty of this, however. So it is of the utmost significance that throughout the East Asian danger zone defense preparations are being speeded up.

Naturally the Pacific powers would like more time to complete their preparations. But, as we said yesterday, it is the paramount duty of every general staff never to be ready. Paul Reynaud once said, moreover, that time is never neutral while the services are getting ready. The fact is that the Pacific situation today shows a preparedness which a year ago would have been incredible. Of first importance in point of position athwart the sea route from Japan to Indo-China is Hongkong. Hongkong, which a year ago might have been abandoned, has been made into a formidable offensive and defensive base. It is likely to prove as difficult a nut for the Japanese to crack as Malta has turned out to be for the Italians. Then the Dutch East Indies have been placed in a state of alert. The same holds true of the country which many believe to be the next victim of Japan's aggressiveness, namely Thailand. The Philippines are also better prepared to resist attack than was the case some months ago. But of greatest immediate importance is the arrival at Singapore this week of a British naval force led by Britain's new battleship, the Prince of Wales. The presence in Singapore of a powerful British battle fleet may serve to put a spike into any Japanese plans first to attack the outer islands of the Netherlands Indies.

More likely in any renewal of Nipponese aggression is a Japanese drive from Cambodia, in the south of Indo-China, across Thailand, with Bangkok, the Thai capital, as the first objective. The conquest of Thailand would not only bring the Japanese within close striking distance of the Burma Road. It would also bring them within close reach of the Malay Peninsula. Thailand should not be difficult to subdue, for the small and poorly equipped Thai army is hardly capable of putting up much of a fight against the numerically superior and well-equipped forces that the Japanese have now assembled in Indo-China. The occupation of Thailand would make a Japanese lake of the Gulf of Siam, providing the Nipponese with additional sea and air bases from which to launch an attack on the whole of Indonesia. In its own national security it could not be tolerated by any one of the Pacific powers.

All this makes it more essential than ever that a thoroughgoing integration of British, American, Dutch and Chinese defense plans be carried out, if that has not already been done. The best chance of peace in the Pacific consists of making it unmistakably clear to Japan that any new aggressive move by Japan will meet with the joint resistance of all the powers now united in the Pacific antiaggression bloc. That Soviet Russia would join such a bloc would be assured as soon as that country has frozen the German attack in the December cold of European Russia.

Defense Housing Rents

The problem of housing defense workers is not fully solved even when dwellings have been erected and families are ready to move in. There remains the question of what rent they should be charged. At first thought that may appear to be a matter of little importance. Actually, however, the scale of rents will determine who shall occupy these defense houses. The fixing of rentals will also involve the broad issue of fair dealing between the Government and many men who are building weapons to defeat Hitlerism.

Obviously it is impracticable to charge uniform flat rents for defense housing throughout the country. Yet that has been attempted by some agencies. Such rents tend to be so low that they involve subsidies for families who do not need them. Or, if adjusted to the income of the majority, flat rents exclude low-income workers essential to defense industry. A very different system of graded rents which the Alley Dwelling Authority has worked out for defense housing under its management appears to be especially commendable. Employes doing essential defense work and in need of housing are certified to the ADA by the employing agency. The ADA makes arrangements to accommodate them as rapidly as defense housing can be built at rents that each family can pay.

Under this plan the great majority pay an economic rent—a rent which covers all costs but yields no profit. Defense workers who cannot afford to pay an economic rent, however, are granted a subsidy. Their rent in each case is one-fifth of their income. By this means all defense employes in public housing projects are charged fair rentals and none is turned away. For example, the Navy Yard has certified to the ADA enough tenants to fill two projects that will be opened in December and a third project to be ready later in the winter. If flat rents and their accompanying limitations upon the income group to be served were in effect in this instance, only 10 per cent of these essential defense workers would be eligible to live in the third project. Thus the ADA seems to have worked out a formula that is both practicable and flexible enough to meet the requirements of emergency defense housing. That yardstick for measuring the rent that defense workers should pay seems to be worthy of wider application than it has had to date.

Unions Win

The victory of the rail unions underlines the need for a well-defined policy that would ban unjustified wage increases which add to living costs and thus help to bring about the inflationary spiral we are trying so ineffectively to prevent. Either the policy should be incorporated in the emasculated price-control bill or it should be put in the pending labor law. The rail workers won a notable victory even over the fact-finding board that was set up under the Railway Labor Act. They obtained wage increases in excess of those first recommended by that board. And, furthermore, they succeeded in obtaining those increases as additions to basic hourly rates of pay instead of in the form of temporary bonuses as recommended by the same board.

This is what comes of enforced mediation in the interest of labor. These eleventh-hour concessions were obtained after the fact-finding board had been requested by the President to try to effect a mediation settlement that would avert a strike. Obviously all the conditions essential to genuine mediation of the dispute were lacking. The fact-finding board had rendered its first verdict after careful study and its findings had been rejected by the unions. The strike threat—and that alone—brought about a revision of the original findings, for the board had not changed its mind. It is "still of the opinion that all of the major recommendations set forth in its report of November 5, 1941, are amply supported by the official record and flow from an application to that record of the 'preponderance of evidence' test." That is equivalent to saying that the unions' threat to strike proved more potent than the considered opinion of the board in determining what constituted a fair settlement. The lesson will not be lost on union leaders. When next a fact-finding board appointed under the terms of the Railway Labor Act fails to satisfy union demands, labor will know better than to submit meekly to its findings. In short, the victory won by the unions has seriously impaired, maybe destroyed, the efficiency of the procedure set up for bargaining under the Railway Labor Act.

The new wage scales will necessitate increases in freight rates and passenger fares to compensate the roads for the additional 300 million dollars that must be paid out annually to labor. Such upward adjustments of rates are regarded by the fact-finding board as essential to give the carriers relief from otherwise inadequate revenues. Accordingly the roads are now preparing to apply to the ICC for permission to increase their charges. In the end, therefore, the public will pay for the concessions to the rail unions in the form of higher prices for many necessities of life, since transportation outlays constitute an important part of production costs at every stage of production from fields and mines to retail outlets. At least the public should respond by keeping up the pressure for legislation that would lay down a real labor and wage policy for the duration of the emergency.

REED PLAYER

For the grave flower, torn,
And for her stricken stem,
Now bleeding and forlorn—
A note for each of them.
And for the wintered tree,
And the last leaf that fell,
Surely a note should be
For each of them, as well . . .
For loser and for lost,
Since joy is over, soon,
This side of early frost
I play this mortal tune.

(And it will do for me
And for the song I made,
Against the day to be
For player and the played.)

Hopper Fed Turkey

The Thanksgiving season, I observe, is celebrated in these parts by the eating, not merely of turkey, but particularly of roast Maryland turkey. If it isn't Maryland turkey it doesn't count.

Accordingly, I tried some roast turkey (Md.) and beg to report that it seemed rather flat and devoid of taste as compared with its Oklahoma cousin.

This marked superiority in the flavor of the Oklahoma bird I attribute to an unique seasonal dietary advantage (wholly unavailable to the Maryland product) in the form of the Oklahoma grasshopper which, as I suppose everyone knows, is notably rich in vitamin content not to mention tobacco juice.

It is indeed unfortunate that the advantage of this great natural turkey food cannot be shared with turkey growers along the Eastern seaboard. But until some substitute is developed for that crisp, tangy, delicious grasshopper flavor, which is so definitely imparted to Tom Turk, your Maryland gobbler cannot possibly hope to compete with our Oklahoma fowl.

Taste In Adjectives

A few days ago I bought some Christmas seals of the Tuberculosis Association. The seals were in every way attractive, but there was one thing that I disliked about them. The wording seems to me to be very improper for the times we live in now. "Merry Christmas." It may be all right to stick that wish on letters going to friends in America, who are fortunate enough to be able to have a "Merry Christmas." But, we forget that nearly three quarters of the world cannot have a "Merry Christmas" either because they cannot afford a "Merry Christmas" or are in such terrible conditions that it would be impossible for them to have a "Merry Christmas." I should have thought "Happy Christmas" or "Joyful Christmas" would have been more appropriate or any other that expressed the spirit of Christmas in the way that every one in the world could celebrate.

Eligible Selectees

I read with combined interest and resentment a statement made by the president of one of our large women's colleges, concerning the inadvisability of dating soldiers. She claims that the marriageability quotient among the men in the armed forces is much lower than that in civilian life.

In attempting to point out the fallacies in her statement I will use the same coldly analytical reasoning that obviously brought about the conclusion to which she came.

The Selective Service Act, as now interpreted, provides that all men from 21 to 28 years of age, inclusive unless deferred for one reason or another, shall serve a period of from one, to two and one-half years in the Army. The largest number of deferments, by far, are made on the basis of dependency or physical handicap.

Thus it would seem, that to exclude the Army, our young marriage mad" maidens will have to narrow the net a bit, and include only physically unfit and the already burdened on their "date" list. Unless, of course, they are fortunate enough to "land" a defense specialist or a recent R. O. T. C. graduate.

The men in the service are well aware of their limitations, but also of their potentialities. We appreciate very much the efforts that are being made in our behalf, but resent very deeply criticisms that are both untimely and made by those unqualified to judge.

Defense Psychosis

Newspaper editorials and other evidence of public and governmental opinion, indicate that there is grave danger this country may ultimately face defeat as a result of the obsession of a purely defensive psychology. If the present war has reinforced any military lesson, it is that wars are not won by defensive actions but only by seizing the initiative in military operations. Our military writers have stated the case time and again, but evidently not forcefully enough to sway public opinion or influence the course of the Government.

This war can be won, and Hitler decisively defeated, in 1942, if a coordinated plan or offensive action be devised between the United States, Britain, her allies and the Dominions and Russia and China. But as long as any of these are compelled to remain on the defensive, victory is not probable. Defeat may ensue, all being conquered one by one; or at best a stalemate which will entail our being an armed camp for years on end with all the resultant evils. Our actions to date have been purely defensive—the West Indian bases, Iceland, convoying, arming merchantment. Now come Dutch Guiana and lease-lend aid to the Free French in Africa, instead of removing the African danger to this hemisphere at the source and paralyzing Axis action at Dakar before it is given an opportunity to become a greater menace than it already is.

As long as Congress does not come out openly with a declaration of the existence of a state of war with Germany, our Army and Navy are hamstrung. No coordinated plan of action that cannot reckon on the United States as a full belligerent gives promise of success. With the United States in a declared war, however, a grand strategy for victory is feasible. Concerted plans can be thought out, not merely for military operations, out for diplomatic action and propaganda, to impair German morale, to swing neutrals to our side, to uplift the spirit of the occupied territorities and to strengthen the morale of the people and armed forces, including our own, fighting for freedom.

Not mere defense should be our slogan, but Win the War Now.

British Example

When next I hear an American citizen complain that the war must end, the slaughter must stop, that anything is better than war, etc., ad nauseam, I shall calmly tell him of the British Institute of Public Opinion's latest result taken in the British Isles. This reads as follows:

"Would you approve or disapprove if the British government were to discuss peace proposals with Germany now?"

The answer: "85 per cent would disapprove. The rest would either approve or didn't know."

This from the people who have gone through the most shattering air raids Hitler and Goering could give them, who have seen some of their best allies go down, who have been faced with danger on many fronts—not just one.

Truly, these people, who are as religious, as peace-loving and as conservative as Americans, can be entitled to the tribute: "Their heads are bloody but unbowed."

What true American can possibly think of appeasement with Hitler with the example of Britain before him?

V. F. W. Not Eating Own Words

It was with a feeling of nostalgia and sauve qui peut that we read Edward T. Folliard's Sunday story headed "Veterans of Future Wars Are Becoming Just That." He ends his piece, aptly enough, as follows: "All that was a long time ago—two years before Hitler snatched Austria, and three and a half years before he stormed into Poland. A lot of people have had to eat a lot of words since then." True, a lot of people have had to eat their words, but fortunately the Veterans of Future Wars are not among them.

The V. F. W., now defunct, was conceived and operated for one purpose alone—to attack through satire the super-patriotic mumbo-jumbo by which self-interested pressure groups customarily pervert national policy to their own ends. Our particular object of attack was the Harrison Bill, under the terms of which fabulous sums were paid, in an indecent hurry, to the members of just those "bona fide veterans' organizations" who, as Mr. Folliard so accurately reports, "were angry at the droll college boys and used some rather violent language against them." Our droll doings, we may say, were not prompted entirely by the financial aspects of the Harrison bill, but also by the expedients used to secure its passage, which, in their universal use of strong-arm chauvinism bear a striking resemblance to Nazi methods.

It is interesting to see that Monday's Post carries an editorial headed "Pension Grab," in which renewed activity along the same old lines is noted and condemned. The "bona fide veterans' organizations" are at it again. We are delighted to find that the American Veterans' Association, which in 1936 went on record in strong support of the Veterans of Future Wars, is still carrying on its gallant and undiscouraged struggle against the pensioneers and their hired lobbyists.

One closing word. The V. F. W. was never a pacifist group. This mistaken idea can readily be dispelled when it is realized that in 1936 one-third of the members of our National Council were in training for reserve commissions, which they now hold. If the United States goes to war (as the V. F. W. confidently predicted five years ago) we of the V. F. W., commissioned or noncommissioned, will be fighting to prevent the tactics of highly organized and patrioteering minorities from destroying democratic procedure here as they have abroad.

The Post Impressionist

Mr. Brown

There was no denying it, Mr. Brown had done something so astounding as to leave our block limp and incredulous. When he departed for work that morning, walking slowly, very slowly, albeit with more of a swagger and an absence of the frantic desperation which had possessed him of recent months, heads shot out of windows, the milkman nodded to him in unfeigned admiration, and, wonder of wonders, the man at the subway newspaper stand, eyes completely devoid of their usual boredom, hastened to hand Mr. Brown a copy of his Daily News, something he did only for his most important customers.

Mr. Brown, accepting this attention as his rightful due, nodded casually, carefully selected two pennies from the handful of change he had extracted from his vest pocket, and entered the subway.

That morning Mr. Brown did not mind in the least the battering he received in the subway. There was an inner glow of quiet satisfaction and contentment which rendered him oblivious to the mauling. All around him he heard people discussing that "crazy guy, Brown," who, as one man so succinctly phrased it, "scared the pants offa us more than that other wack. Orson What's-his-name." And Mr. Brown felt exactly as that other great emancipator, Abraham Lincoln, must have when he signed the proclamation freeing the slaves.

He was a slight, stooped, unimpressive middle-aged man, was Mr. Brown, with large, horn-rimmed glasses and a nose possessed of the unfortunate ambition to annex territory usually assigned to the mouth and eyes. For years he had methodically attended to his duties as elevator operator in a large office building, never once failing to close the door more than a fraction of a second after the starter had grandiloquently signaled him. Yet, inexplicably, he shut the door in the faces of the tenants with such gentle resignation they could not be affronted. Today, heretofore unnoticed, Mr. Brown was greeted enthusiastically, if a trifle warily, by one and all, and this, too, with admirable dignity and composure, he accepted as his due.

In between trips from the first to the twelfth floor (he had never achieved his unuttered ambition to be transferred from the local to the express run), Mr. Brown recalled the countless pleasant evenings he had spent listening to the radio. His tastes were simple but diversified. One night it might be Orson Welles, the next night Jack Benny, or perhaps a symphony concert, or Bing Crosby. It didn't really matter, as long as it helped him pass the time.

But all this, he remembered, with a sharp pang of nostalgia, came to an abrupt and violent end when, without warning, the quiz craze burst upon an unsuspecting and unprepared world. Every night, on every station, for hours at end, in one form or another, Mr. Brown was subjected to a merciless barrage of questions and answers. There was no escape. No matter in which direction he twisted the dial, always he heard the urbane, irritating voice of an announcer, either posing or answering a subtle, devilish question. Almost from their very inception the programs annoyed him. They caused him to think, aroused his long-slumbering brain in vain, futile attempts to answer every question before the correct solutions were broadcast. Mr. Brown became nervous, jittery.

Mr. Brown suffered in heroic silence for a long time. Turn off his radio for good he could not. Continue listening to the quiz programs without once striking a blow in self-defense was still another impossibility. So, unable to endure it, he conceived of a diabolical plot, the mechanics of which could not have occurred to any other but a desperate, half-crazed man.

Mr. Brown smiled in smug satisfaction as he recalled the finesse with which he had executed his plan. He had selected one particular program and written, requesting a ticket to a broadcast. This program, sponsored by a cigarette company, he had chosen because it employed the studio audience to answer submitted inquiries. Each participant received, in addition to money for correctly answering a question, a carton of cigarettes. So Mr. Brown mailed his letter and patiently awaited a reply.

As he brought the elevator to a smooth stop, the vivid picture of the director of the cigarette program, pointing a stern finger at him and asking if he would care to join in the quiz contest, suddenly, for some unearthly reason, flashed across Mr. Brown's mind. The only possibly flaw in his plan had been overcome! The rest had been mere routine.

"What is your name, sir?" he remembered the announcer saying to him.

"Brown, Harry Brown," he said distinctly into the microphone, to avoid possible confusion.

"And where do you live, Mr. Brown?"

Mr. Brown listened and answered automatically until he heard the announcer say, sharply, "Mr. Brown, Mr. Brown, which movie actress laughed in her latest picture?"

"Garbo," said Mr. Brown, quick as a flash.

"Good, good," said the announcer jovially. "Now tell me, which actor played the part of Tom Joad in what picture?"

Mr. Brown knew the answer to this one, too, but he wasn't going to be a hog and take the whole ten bucks, not when——

"I don't know," he said.

"Well, in that case, I must tell you. Henry Fonda played Tom Joad in "The Grapes of Wrath." Here is $5 and a carton of our slow-smoking-mellow-never-a-cough-in-the carload-fresh-roasted-you-know-what-kind-of-cigarettes."

Mr. Brown carefully and deliberately accepted the money, and just as carefully and deliberately refused the cigarettes.

"I don't want the cigarettes," he declared.

"You what?" The announcer's mouth opened so wide Mr. Brown easily perceived he hadn't paid a visit to his dentist in years. "Why, of course," he continued, with a weak attempt at joviality, "you don't smoke, do you, Mr. Brown? That's the reason you don't want them."

"Sure I smoke," said Mr. Brown, in a voice ringing with ecstatic triumph. "But not your kind!"

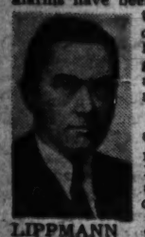
Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

On The Verge Of War



LIPPMANN

FOR THE FIRST TIME the country is now really on the verge of actual, all-out war. The alarms have been sounded many times before, but only by those who have failed to grasp the real situation and our relation to it.

Thus, as late as a month ago the main body of the Republicans and some of the Democrats in Congress were still unable to see that if war came, it would not come as a result of our naval intervention in the North Atlantic, nor as a result of lend-lease aid to Britain and Russia, but as a result of a head-on collision with Japan. Even more recently ex-President Hoover was making a carefully prepared radio broadcast in which he never even mentioned Japan, imagining that the question of war or peace for America depended upon whether we chose or did not choose to send an army to fight Hitler in Europe.

We now see that not one single position taken by the isolationist leaders has had any relation whatever to keeping us out of war. All their calculations have been fundamentally wrong because they have never realized that the direct and immediate threat to the United States was in the Pacific,—from Hitler's Asiatic ally, Japan. They have based their whole case on the erroneous notion that the danger of war lay in our involving ourselves step by step in Europe when, all the time, the real danger has been that Japan would strike from the other side.

IT IS ESSENTIAL to the unity of the American people that they should realize how completely the isolationist leaders have misjudged America's relation to the war. None of their prophecies has come true. They fought the repeal of the arms embargo. They fought conscription. They objected to the transfer of the destroyers. They fought lend-lease. They objected to the occupation of Iceland. They objected to the Atlantic patrol. They fought the amendment of the Neutrality Act. At each step they cried out that to support the measure meant war. Yet, as a matter of fact, none of these "war" measures has had anything to do with the real war in which we are now so likely to become engaged.

The arms embargo, conscription, the destroyers, lend-lease, Iceland, the Atlantic patrol, and the Neutrality Act never had anything to do with Japan. They did not provoke Japan. They did not check Japan. They are not at issue with Japan. Though the isolationists have conducted a tremendous agitation about these measures—always imagining that this was the way to prevent war—the actual war which is now so very nearly upon us is on the other side of the world. In their zeal to avoid a war with Hitler in Europe, they have never managed to realize that the real threat of a fighting war was from Hitler's ally in Asia.

FORTUNATELY for the country the President and his diplomatic and military advisers have always understood this. They understand it even before the war broke out in Europe in 1939. The proof is that they transferred the American fleet—our first line of defense—to the Pacific and have kept virtually all of the fleet there. They understood it in the critical days of 1940 when France collapsed. Though the isolationists have never understood it, the whole policy of "intervention" arose directly out of the fact that with our fleet facing Japan in the Pacific, we simply had by all means at our command to support British sea power in the Atlantic. Everything the isolationists have made such a fuss about—the destroyers, lend-lease, Iceland, the Atlantic patrol—has been a practical, inescapable necessity because we faced war with Japan and could not dare leave our Atlantic frontier without the strong protection that British sea power could give.

THERE HAS never been any truth in the isolationist cry that the President has been slyly conspiring to involve this country in the European war. He has proved himself to be, whatever may be his other failings, a cool and far-sighted judge of the strategy of the war, and every important move he has made has been in preparation—not for the imaginary war which the isolationists said was to duplicate 1917—but for this very real war which is now so nearly upon us.

He has, it is true, often been indirect in his explanations, and he has not stated openly and explicitly to the Nation the whole problem, as he saw it, and his own intentions. That is regrettable, and the effect has been to cause much confusion.

YET THERE are certain things, now obvious, which need to be realized. During this whole period since last spring, when we have been criticizing the President for not taking the people fully into his confidence, he has been in close, continual negotiation with Japan seeking with great patience to find a way to avoid war. Those negotiations have been secret, and while we all dislike secrecy, is there anyone who will say that negotiations with the representatives of the Japanese Emperor could be carried on publicly? If for these eight months, there had to be secret negotiations if there was to be any hope of avoiding war with Japan, then during this time the President could not go to the people and talk to them with complete frankness. He could not tell them that they were faced with a Japanese war, that preparations had to be made for that war, and that a prime consideratoin in our naval action in the Atlantic was to make it possible for Great Britain to send reinforcements to the Pacific. Though he was thinking about Japan, he could not even mention Japan, so delicate was the situation.

It is necessary also to realize that the President has been faced with an opposition at home which was as reckless as it was misinformed. There is no reason why men like Mr. Hoover, Mr. Landon, Mr. Taft, and Mr. Martin could not have sat down with the President, Mr. Hull, Mr. Stimson, Mr. Knox, Admiral Stark and General Marshall, and have managed to understand the fundamental facts of the situation: that we were faced with war in the Pacific and had to take measures in both oceans to be ready for it. But the opposition never informed themselves and on a foundation of total misunderstanding, they conducted an agitation which put every necessary, practical measure in the worst possible light. They placed the President in a position where, if he blurted out the whole truth and confounded them, he jeopardized the chances of avoiding war with Japan; and if he did not blurt out the whole truth, he could be charged with concealment and indirection.

THE EFFECT of this agitation has been enormously costly. For as long as the reputable opposition took the line that the country was being tricked by the President, and that there was no danger of war if only Mr. Roosevelt could be obstructed, the people who look to them for guidance have naturally resented having their sons called into service, and taxes levied, and their normal business interrupted. Nor, while the agitation was being carried on, could there possibly arise that feeling of patriotic dedication which is the one and only real remedy for strikes, for the pressure of special interests, for partisan politics and for all the otherwise normal but now intolerable things, which plague us, weaken us, and will cost us so dearly.

Ford Visions World U. S.

'Parliament Of Man'

By David J. Wilkie

Associated Press Automotive Editor

Detroit, Dec. 3.—Although his company has under way a war implement program contemplating the production of nearly a billion dollars' worth of bomber planes, aviation engines and army tanks, Henry Ford still hates war and has not changed his views concerning its futility.

"I still hate war as I always have," he said today in an interview, "but out of the present conflict in Europe I see emerging a world federation, a union of all peoples in which there will be no customs, monetary or economic barriers—and a developed industry that would have all the world for its market."

It will be a federation, Ford said, such as Tennyson foresaw when he wrote his "Locksley Hall" 100 years ago. In this classic Tennyson foretold the coming of "airy navies grappling in the central blue,"—the airplane of today, Ford said—and finally the silencing of war drums in "the parliament of man, the federation of the world."

If such a federation does not come out of the present war, Ford asserted, the conflict now engulfing most of the world will be "merely a dress rehearsal for another and much more terrible one."

Asked how he reconciled his hatred for war with the fact his plants are pressing toward mass production of military aircraft engines, mammoth bomber planes and Army tanks, the 73-year-old industrialist replied, somewhat cryptically:

"It's the law of the land, isn't it?"

Ford disclosed, incidentally, that although it was confirmed only recently that a contract for Army tank production would be awarded to his firm, parts for the mobile fortresses already are being manufactured at the River Rouge plant, with assembly operations contemplated at the old Highland Park factory, north of Detroit.

He also said his production plans call for welding the tanks instead of riveting them and that he planned to use a liquid-cooled, eight-cylinder supercharged engine of his own design in them. The engine is a modification of the 12-cylinder aircraft engine Ford has been experimenting upon for about a year. It has been said that Ford approved the experimental work on the engine provided his engineers would so design it that it could be installed in a truck if desired.

Ford talked enthusiastically about his expectations of a world federation following the present war. He cited the United States as a "practical example" of federation.

"We are 48 States, some of them larger than whole countries in Europe, but there are not 48 sets of international boundary lines here, nor 48 different currencies, nor 48 armies, nor 48 sets of customs barriers—we are federated," he said.

Occupied Norway

Nazis Find Stiff-Necked Opposition

A RECENT OFFICIAL announcement from London put the slaughter of the innocents in Nazi-controlled Europe at the staggering figure of 100,000 men, women and children, with many tens of thousands more in prisons and concentration camps. The toll falls most heavily on Poland, Greece and Yugoslavia, the three countries which showed the greatest effrontery in opposing the Nazi sweep to world conquest.

In this grisly roll-of-honor, as released by the allied governments in exile in England, Norway does not appear. This cannot be meant as a slight upon the grim resistance and the mounting hardships which the Norwegians have suffered since the moment active hostilities ceased.

For eighteen months the Norwegians have been one of the toughest nuts to crack amongst the conquered countries. From the beginning more German troops, estimated at about 300,000, have been kept busy there than in any other of the provinces of Adolf Hitler's "New Europe." Major Vidkun Quisling, the first and most famous of Hitler's stooges, has been, of all his fellow Quislings, the most complete failure. His local National Socialist Party which, at one time, had a following of many thousands in the cities, has been ridiculed, boycotted and terrorized almost out of active existence. Norway is one of the Nazis' chief headaches, especially as it is one of the most likely sites for a British counter offensive against the European continent.

BUT NORWAY has had to pay a heavy price for her stiff-necked opposition. The morale of her people is not broken, but a systematic Nazi looting has produced a situation which looks very grim for the coming winter. The shortages of food and clothing have reached famine proportions. But if it is any consolation to a bitterly anti-Nazi people, their sufferings are in part a measure of the rapidly deteriorating position in the Third Reich itself, a position which, as it worsens, gives more hope for a speedier Allied victory.

Norway has been used by the Nazis as a provision store and a clothier for the German army. The most startling result of this policy is the fact that in Bergen, the center of the fishing industry, no fish are to be bought in the markets for days at a time. This, in spite of the fact that the Nazis have encouraged the industry and offered wages four to five times pre-war rates to the fishermen. According to the Svenska Dagbladet, the principal conservative paper of Sweden, 95 per cent of the Norwegian "catch" is sent to Germany. This has left little over for the daily consumption of the people and nothing for the drying process which provides the staple winter food for many districts in Norway. With milk it is the same. The enormous shipments of fresh and condensed milk to the Reich have left only sufficient to allow a ration of one litre a day to any family which has a child under the age of twelve.

Meanwhile the whole machinery of Norwegian rural economy has been upset. This has aggravated an already serious situation. The requisitioning of thousands of draft horses for the Russian front and the drafting of tens of thousands of men into work on fortifications and war factories has stripped the countryside of its farm labor population. On September 12 an appeal was made by the occupying authorities to industrialists to release men from the factories to assist the farmers with the harvest. The appeal brought little response since many people felt that any additional agricultural produce would only find its way to feed the Germans. This feeling was particularly strong in Oslo where only a few weeks before evidence of Nazi practices were revealed at the dockside. Some coffins said to contain the bodies of German soldiers who had died on duty in Norway were being shipped for transport to the Fatherland. One of these, as it was being hoisted aboard by crane, slipped from the sling and, crashing down on the stone quay, burst open to disclose closely packed hams, cheeses and bacon. This isolated incident is typical of Nazi practice which frequently uses the hours of darkness and black-out to carry on its systematic pilfering.

But the stripping of the country does not stop with food. The Nazis want warm clothing and are determined to get it. Many of the German troops in Norway are uniformed in cloth made from cellulose, an inadequate protection against the northern winter. The Norwegian military stores have been rifled and Norway army clothing issued to the Nazis.

DURING the months of September and October when it became certain that the German armies would have to fight a winter war in Russia for which the Nazis were unprepared, Norway was called upon to make up for the deficiencies. Everything that could be found serviceable for winter use was requisitioned, in the majority of cases without any compensation; boots, sleeping-bags, heavy clothes, rucksacks, and blankets. According to a Swedish newspaper report by the first week in October a quarter of a million blankets had been collected from rich and poor alike and the process was still continuing. It was said officially that these clothes and blankets were wanted for the Norwegian legion which was fighting its anti-Bolshevik crusade on the Finnish front. But as there were known to be only 2000 of these "volunteers" the real destination for this loot was only too patently obvious.

But what makes these requisitions still more unfortunate for the Norwegian people is the impossibility of buying anything to make up for the loss and the prospect of a long and freezing winter underclad and with little coal for heating.

Imports from Germany have ceased from the end of September; there is no other market from which the Norwegians can buy. With the loss of Spitzbergen the coal stocks have been cut down to the barest minimum and they will not be sufficient to keep the factories, working for Germany, in operation and at the same time provide heat for the population of the cities. Even the peat cutting which was encouraged to make up the coal deficiency has not solved the question as the requisitioning of horses has made cartage to the railroad depots in many places impossible. The same applies to wood, which is already being used to keep the railway services moving at their present reduced schedules.

BUT, HOWEVER drear the prospects for the future, the Norwegians show no signs of losing their spirit or knuckling down to the Nazi overlord. With each new blow their reaction seems to be stronger. So little cooperation could the Germans or the Quisling puppets find in business and industry, that they were forced to appoint their own commissars and to draft Nazi technicians into factories working on arms production for the Reich. They found that sabotage was so rife and so obviously directed centrally from London that all radios have been confiscated and workers are forbidden to hold meetings. Together with sabotage and a simple slowing down of work has gone an increasing industrial inefficiency due to lack of proper nourishment.

Naturally the powerful and well-organized trades unions were the first to feel the weight of oppression. From September 11th, this year, all trades union funds were confiscated and many of the leaders were arrested, especially in the Oslo district. Severe punishments have been threatened for even the smallest incident. But, in spite of everything, the workers continue to boycott the National Socialist "Faggruppeorganization," officially appointed by the Nazis to take charge of all trade union management, by withholding their subscriptions and withdrawing their membership. Many dissident workers have been sent to the slav labor camps in the Arctic area where the Germans are busy building roads, fortifications and improving harbors.

Nevertheless there are signs of an impending trial of strength between the labor and capital in industry as against the Quisling authorities relying on German support. Long lists of functionaries and businessmen removed from their positions and replaced by Nazis or their puppets and the increasing shortage of labor due to the exclusion of recalcitrant workers tell their own story.

FURTHER AFIELD a similar spirit is found in repeated attempts to dislocate railway traffic. Between Oslo and Eidesvoll and Oslo and Kongsvinger and in other sections the sabotage was so persistent that from October 4 the Norwegians were conscripted to guard the railroad tracks. Any refusal to comply with this order would mean arrest; and should any accident occur all guards would be held responsible and handed over for punishment to the Gestapo.

In Norway, the forces fighting against the invader are solid from the highest to the lowest and with the courageous and open backing of the church. A foretaste of Adolf Hitler's "New European Order" has been sufficient to steel a determination to keep on fighting until the victory is won. There is no desperation or pessimism in Norway, only an icy calm and bitter hatred. They have the strength to bide their time while they work with cool calculation to build up an underground organization ready for when the hour of deliverance strikes.

Krebs Prospers In Land Of Uncle Sap

PEGLER

TO THE NUMBER of conspirators, perjurers and murderers who have received special kindness at the hands of the pro-Communist government of the once American State of California in recent weeks, the name of Richard Julius Herman Krebs, alias Jan Valtin, may now be added. Krebs is the international political typhus louse who served both the Muscovites and the Nazis, served a prison term in California for attempting to carry out a political execution by order of the Kremlin and recently wrote a book which became a best seller by virtue of its shocking admissions.

For years he drifted about the world like a disease-laden rat in the service of the Moscow conspiracy, dealing in treachery and always an enemy of the people whose hospitality he enjoyed and of the American people and their peace and safety in particular. He was an agent and spy of the same evil government of Russia which made a solemn treaty of recognition with the United States on a promise to desist from sabotage of the American way but nevertheless continued that stealthy betrayal of the trust of a fool.

He welshed on his Communist friends and betrayed them to take service with the Nazis and now he has betrayed the Nazis and applied for American citizenship, which is likely to be granted merely because he says he has seen the error of his past and wants to be an American.

Gov. Culbert L. Olson, the chief of the pro-Communist administration in California, has given Krebs, or Valtin, an unconditional pardon so that his application for citizenship may be aided. Krebs served a term in San Quentin for beating a man over the head with a pistol in compliance with an assignment from his Russian superiors to dispose of a traitor to the Soviets. He wrote in his book that he faltered because he had scruples against killing in cold blood, although he had not hesitated to promote and participate in Communist street fighting in Germany and therefore merely slugged the man whom he understood to be his subject.

Caught and given ten years, he served three years, was deported and came back to the United States. There is no assurance but his own word that he has reformed and become, in heart, an American, and there is every reason in his own story for believing that he is a liar who takes citizenship with the same mental reservations that are held by every Nazi and every European Communist.

Nevertheless, although it was not necessary for him to do so, Gov. Olson has pardoned Krebs, who is now engaged in lecturing and exploiting his past for profit as a career and soon enough this professional traitor will be an American citizen on equal footing with any American who was born here and has never for a moment wavered in his loyalty.

The pardon follows soon after the parole of three murderers in California who engaged a group of Communists to assault an American sailor and stab him dead because the American had resisted the conspiracies of the Communist members of the ship's company. These murderers were turned out on the strength of Gov. Olson's expressed opinion that in somewhat under five years in prison they had fully expiated their cowardly murder of a man whose life was forfeit because he would not cooperate with or flinch from the Communists.

The California Communists campaigned for their release on the flat proposition that, guilty or not of this murder, they should be freed, and Gov. Olson subscribed to that for there was no contention in the parole order that they were innocent of murder and the victims of injustice. The Communists who demanded the release of the murderers had been encouraged by a San Francisco judge who refused to punish even for an hour Sam Darcy, a Ukrainian Russian perjurer, who had the effrontery to run for the office of Governor of California and swore that he had been born in New York. Darcy is an avowed Communist of the Stalin or Muscovite stripe, an old and persistent conspirator against the established American form of government and a notorious fomenter of Muscovite union strikes in California but, in spite of all this and the difficulty of proving his guilt, the San Francisco judge released him to enjoy the same rights that patriotic, law-abiding Americans deserve but often are unable to exercise because the Darcys and Krebs or Valtins and such men as the three liberated murderers have other ideas.

Krebs or Valtin appears to be doing well financially in the land of Uncle Sap for the saps are eager to hear the story of the perfidy which made him famous, and by its very cynicism and brutality qualified him for a pardon and, eventually, full citizenship.

Desert and Mediterranean Sea Confine Battle for Libya to the Narrow Costal Plain

With the new British drive into Libya, the towns of Bardia, Tobruch, Derna and Bengasi—familiar place names in the year-old seesaw battle for Italy's North African colony—are back in the headlines. A bulletin from the National Geographic Society gives thumbnail sketches of these strategic Mediterranean ports.

"Most of the action in the struggle for Libya has taken place along the shores of Cirenaica," the bulletin points out.

"The Cirenaica region comprises the great hump of Libyan territory that juts into the Mediterranean east of the Gulf of Sidra. Its physical formation is a significant factor in the battle area. The main communication route from east to west lies by way of the coast, along which a thousand-mile motor road was officially opened to traffic from French Tunisia to Egypt about two years before the outbreak of the present war.

"The coastal plain often is hemmed in between the sea and high mountains or inhospitable plateau land. In places the plain narrows to half a mile or less, sometimes disappearing altogether, as steep slopes extend to the blue waters of the Mediterranean. In such spots the motor road turns inland to climb the hills overlooking the sea. Where the road runs close to the sea much of it is open to attack, and reports from time to time have described the bombardment of Italian troops by the British warships.

"Spaced more or less regularly from east to west along the Cirenaica coast are the ports of Bardia, Tobruch, Derna and Bengasi. Bardia, reported recaptured in the current British offensive, is a small city of between two and three thousand inhabitants, situated within 10 miles of the Egyptian frontier. With its excellent harbor it was a haven for German submarines during the early years of the World War, while modern improvements, including an airport, storage facilities and repair shops, made it useful to the Italians as a supply base on their initial drive into Egypt. In the surprise counter-attack by the British in the winter of 1940 Bardia was the first Italian port to fall.

"About 160 miles west of Bardia, Tobruch (Tobruk) has been a British 'island' in eastern Libya since the second Axis advance toward Egypt in the spring of 1941 pushed the rest of the imperial troops back into the Egyptian desert. With a normal population of about 4200 people, it has one of the best natural harbors on the Libyan shore. The port and city had been considerably modernized and improved during Italian rule, begun as a result of the Italo-Turkish War of 1911-12. Tobruch was given an airfield, a hospital, radio station and refrigeration plant, always appreciated in the 'desert colony' of Libya. The city, however, lacks an adequate water supply, which is augmented in peacetime by water shipped from Derna, about 100 miles west.

"Derna is especially significant to Americans as the city over which the United States flag once flew. It was in the early 1800's, during the war between the United States and Tripoli over the activities of the Barbary pirates. With an international 'army' of Arabs, Greeks and Americans, former American Consul General William Eaton pushed across 600 miles of desert from Alexandria. Derna was captured in April, 1805, with the aid of a few ships of the United States Navy, and remained in American hands until peace was made in June of that year. Modern, peacetime Derna is known as the 'pearl of Libya.' Its life-giving springs make it particularly valuable as a military station."

Red Paratroops Rehearse Blasting Munition Dumps

By Eddy Gilmore

Associated Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in Russia, Nov. 25.—(delayed)—Medal-bedecked Col. Dmitri Vysolkosov, commander of the Soviet parachutist school, stood on a snow-covered plain overlooking the Volga River today and pointed to a nearby white hill.

"Those troops may figure in establishing the new western front," he said. "They have all the essentials of modern warfare and they know how to use them."

It sounded fine but we couldn't see any troops.

"Ah," he said proudly, "and it would be hard for others to see them."

We looked closely at the maneuver grounds and saw what he was talking about. Across the snow-covered plain came ghostly, white-covered figures, creeping up on an "ammunition dump." Enemy sentries guarded it. Savagely the parachutists sprang from the snow and overpowered the sentries.

Others planted explosives and dashed away. The dump went up with a tremendous explosion.

"These things happen behind the lines after the parachutists have landed," said the colonel.

He said the Soviets, first to use parachutists on a mass scale, are using such units on the northwestern front. He said Nazis used parachutists against the Soviets on a small scale but have had no real success. He scoffed at Nazi reports that they had captured women parachutists.

As we left, the colonel said:

"Don't forget, the parachutist service is for the brave."

University Women Will Hear Miss Bondfield

Miss Margaret Bondfield, former minister of labor of Great Britain, will speak on "Training and Employment of British Women in Defense Industries" at a dinner of the Washington branch, American Association of University Women December 19, it was announced yesterday.

The dinner, sponsored by the branch's committee on economic and legal status of women, will be given at the clubhouse.

Miss Mary Anderson, director of the women's bureau, Department of labor, will speak on the employment of women in defense industries in the United States.

Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University; Mrs. Laura Puffer Morgan, secretary of the Institute on World Organization, and Miss Ruth Van Deman, chief of the information division, bureau of home economics, Department of Agriculture, have been asked to take part in the discussion.

Miss Mary Craig McGeachy, press officer at the British Embassy for the ministry of economic warfare, will introduce Miss Bondfield.

Women See New Decorations at Columbian House

Columbian House at George Washington University has been redecorated through funds given by Columbian women and by organizations using the building. Its new decorations were seen this week at Columbian Women's first tea of the season.

Repainting, new draperies and slip covers and a rearrangement of rooms on the second floor were designed to make the building more useful to women of the university. The basement has been transformed into a dining room for students who bring lunches from home.

At the opening tea Tuesday, a program of South American music and dancing was arranged by Dalys Escoffery, a student from Panama. A group of Latin-American exchange students in Washington, wearing carnival costumes from their native countries, took part in the program.

Women's Society Arranges Bazaar

The women's society of First Congregational Church, Tenth and G Streets Northwest, will hold its Christmas bazaar today from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Taking Issue With Advice to Jealous Bride, Wife Says She Would Be Mortified if Her Husband Clung to Her Side at Parties; She Likes Change

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I just must disagree with your reply of November 28, to the bride who is "miserable" because her husband pays attention to "single, attractive other women" at parties. You say his behavior is "rude" and "unworthy," and, also, "disloyal and inconsiderate." You suggest that he is lacking in "good sense and innate grace of feeling," and advise his wife to point out to him that he is "misbehaving badly, in a manner that not only reflects great discredit upon himself, but threatens, indeed, to wreck his marriage before it is well begun."

Now, if my husband were to take me to a party and sit by my side all evening, I would be mortified. Our purpose in going to parties is to see and talk with other persons; to enjoy a change of scenery, so to speak. I want my husband to talk intimately with other women, so that they may see how attractive he is! I had the same theory before marriage and several of my friends share this view.

The very idea, Miss Haworth, of telling the bride to inform her husband that she is disappointed in his actions! She should have been told to make her own fun at parties, and stop eyeing her husband so avidly. And, also reminded of how boring newlyweds can be, when they stick together and hold hands. People are not interested in "couples." They are interested in individuals. Sincerely.

L. L.

We See Alike, For Most Part

DEAR L. L.: In general, I believe as you do—that married persons don't need to do a "Siamese twin" act, socially, in order to signify loyalty to each other. I heartily agree that the psychological stimulus of a mental "change of scene"—deriving from contact with personalities and viewpoints beyond the family circle—represents most of the profit that is to be found in party-going. And I share your sentiment that every husband and wife should possess not only the ability but the disposition to "make his own fun" at parties.

However, it is one thing for a husband or wife to be a "good guest" at parties, by blithely operating as a more or less "independent agent" in contributing to the conviviality of the occasion—and another thing altogether for a married person to behave, in public, in a manner which implies that the "also-present" partner of his bosom is, for the time being, the least of his concerns; or the least magnetic member of the company to him. And the bride aforementioned reports that, "when we are out with other people my husband completely ignores me . . ." She further reports that "this action of his makes me miserable." And concludes by asking "Why would he want to act in this manner, when he knows it hurts me?"

In my opinion, her husband's gallantry to other women, his neglect of her, and her involuntary resentment of this state of affairs do not constitute the crux of the problem. The really threatening aspect of the situation, it seems to me, is his indifference to the fact that his "gay blade" behavior "hurts" her and makes her "miserable." This suggests a disturbing disregard for her viewpoint and sensibilities. It suggests that he either doesn't know or doesn't care how she feels about things; or, perhaps, that he obstinately serves his personal pleasure ahead of their mutual happiness, when a choice must be made. And this you, must admit, is an unprepossessing and indeed an unnatural attitude on the part of a bridegroom. (She says, you remember, "we have been married only a few months.")

As all comfortably married couples know, a married man may indulge in an endless amount of so-called "harmless flirtation" at parties, without giving offense to his wife, IF his behavior reflects a shared philosophy of conduct, and IF he has the grace of feeling and manner to "look out for her" from time to time. However, a well-mannered man would never "completely ignore" his wife in company (as the bridegroom in this case is said to)—even though he might wish her in Coventry!

As a matter of fact, in formulating my reply to this bride's queries, I talked with a psychologist whose theories on enlightened behavior bear fruit in an extremely agreeable family life. I wanted a dependable masculine reaction to her complaints—not only a "good husband's" reaction; but that of a man of the world, as well. (And he stands for both). He was strongly of the opinion that her husband is behaving badly, if what she says is true.

Taking the bride's testimony at face value, he held the husband guilty of incipient disloyalty and bad manners to boot. He felt that the only way to prevent a bad situation from getting worse was to "talk things over," in a spirit of honest indignation on the wife's part, in order to acquaint her husband with the damage he is doing his marriage. And this—mark you, my dear!—is a man's and a husband's point of view! Isn't it comforting to know that men set some standards for themselves?

As for your observation that "people are not interested in couples, but in individuals"—don't you think that depends upon the circles in which one moves? It seems to me that most happily married couples prefer to surround themselves with other married couples; and that they incline to think of their married friends as pairs, rather than as "individuals." Usually the accent is on the "individual," when one partner "measures up" and the other doesn't.

Finally, I wish to say that the spectacle of married sweethearts holding hands is an affectional gesture that has never annoyed me. If they feel that way about each other, they have my blessing—and a great deal more admiration than I would involuntarily bestow upon those who fancy they are demonstrating savoir faire in publicly neglecting their own mate to pay party homage to somebody else's.

Formalizing the Sweater

Hollywood, Calif.—When Kay Francis attended the opera the other evening, she was wearing a startling stocking cap and cardigan sweater coat formalized for a most formal evening. Orry-Kelly, who designs all of Kay's clothes, designed this unusual two-some in black knit strewn with black sequins. Miss Francis wore them with a slim-skirted gown of black crepe and wool.

Don't Let War Get in Hair, Expert Warns; Nervous Strain Often Affects the Scalp

Massage, Relaxing, Proper Brushing Are Advised

By Carolyn Abbott.

IF HISTORY repeats itself—and it usually does—the present emergency will exact a heavy toll on both men's and women's hair. With experiences of World War I as her basis, Dr. Gladys Ogilvie, internationally known scalp specialist, points out that nervous strains cause falling, prematurely gray or excessively dry hair and loose dandruff.

One of seven famous sisters—all hair specialists—Dr. Ogilvie, who has traveled throughout the world, is in town for the opening today of the new salon that caters to men as well as women.

"In times of stress," said Dr. Ogilvie, "both men and women must take unusually good care of their hair to preserve its natural beauty. Scientific treatments that include correct brushing, massage and corrective diets are one way of counteracting scalp ills."

To combat nervous strain, this scientific beauty expert, advises relaxation of back and neck muscles through massage. To be effective massage should be accurate and gentle rather than vigorous.

According to Dr. Ogilvie men's bald heads may be attributed to any of the following causes:

Why Men Get Bald

Mastoid condition; which results in poor circulation; Tanumatic injury—shock from fall, accident, or bruise from diving that interferes with the nerve system which supplies the blood stream.

Contrary to general belief, tight bands on men's hats don't cause any serious damage to the scalp—they don't wear the hats long enough, according to Dr. Ogilvie. "However, frequent cold showers do," she pointed out. "The shock of cold water on the scalp is too great and therefore affects the nerves of the head, often hastening loss of hair."

When taking a cold shower, Dr. Ogilvie advises a cap for protection. Also, she suggests bending the head forward to permit the water to fall high on neck, so that it strikes between the shoulders, thus acting as a good nerve and stimulation tonic.

Brushing Technique

"Many men make the mistake of brushing their heads bald," said Dr. Ogilvie. "They get a short, stubby-bristled brush and rake across their heads vigorously. This often injuries and irritates the scalp and at the same time destroys the fine, new growth of hair.

To brush the hair correctly, Dr. Ogilvie advises using a long-bristled brush. Stroke from the side instead of end of bristles.

Don't destroy growth of fine, new hair by raking brush across scalp. Use side of long bristle brush, not short, stubby end. Following this advice, Peggy Diggins, Hollywood star (above), firmly but gently puts the finishing touch to her pompadour

Stand up. Bend from hips. Relax knee and throw head forward between and brush in such a way that you are virtually lifting the scalp.

If you keep the hair antiseptically clean (with a cleansing lotion) and daily brushing, a shampoo once every two or three weeks is sufficient. Otherwise, the hair should be washed once a week, according to Dr. Ogilvie "Be sure to use a lotion with very little alcohol," she cautioned.

"Steam-heated offices and houses have a tendency to dry out both men and women's hair," said Dr. Ogilvie. "Lack of sufficient oils in the diet also dries the hair." The specialist pointed out that women and men in Scandinavian countries and England have unusually luxuriant and beautiful hair, while those in hot climates have less and drier hair. This, she thinks, is due to the high oil (fish oil) diet in England and northern European countries.

Shaving or clipping the hair at back of neck and around temples destroys the sebaceous substances of that area, thus injuring the glands. And once the glands stop functioning or secreting the fluid, the hair becomes excessively dry and turns prematurely gray. It is better to cut the hair close rather than to clip or shave it, according to Dr. Ogilvie.

Rare and Costly Pelt

Hollywood, Calif.—Every girl in the world is pleased if she can "scoop" every other girl in something fashionably new. That's why Jane Wyman is so excited over a coat she will wear in "The Night Before Christmas." The trim on her swagger coat of green wool is snow leopard, which is really "rare and costly." Snow leopards, trapped only occasionally in the treacherous Himalaya Mountains, appear on hte fur market only once in a few blue moons. The skins are a snowy white splashed with brown.

A Daily Dozen For Defense Streamlining

By Ida Jean Kain

WITH THE current accent on fitness, it's just as well you can double up on your streamlining. The same exercises that put you in trim will also trim you down.

Stretching exercises make you supple and should be first on your daily defense dozen. Stretching is a natural exercise (you'll notice it is the way animals in captivity keep in condition) and you can depend on it to straighten your posture, lift your chest, and strengthen the all-important abdominal muscles.

In a standing stretch, relax the shoulders to avoid any strain or rigidity and center the pull at hips. To make your stretch triply effective, combine it with a twist and a bend as in this exercise: Stand erect with feet parallel and wide apart, arms stretched overhead without hunching shoulders, and your midriff pulled slim. Twist sharply sideward at the waist and very slowly—pulling up all the while with the lower abdominal muscles — bend sideward until hands touch floor at outer side of foot. Straighten up, stretch, twist and bend to other side.

If you are not on easy terms with exercise, take your stretching sitting down: Sit on floor with legs straight and wide apart, hands clasped high overhead. Keep spine perfectly straight and pull up with lower abdominal muscles. Twist sharply to one side, and slowly bend trunk until upstretched hands touch the outstretched ankle. Relax, stretch upward, and bend to other side. Continue pulling up with the abdominal muscles throughout.

For a good all-around conditioner that trims the hipline, practice the side-scissors. This exercise has long been a favorite with physical trainers. Here is the way you do it: Lie on side on floor, one hand out on floor chest-level as a brace, legs together and straighten down. Begin by elevating the legs slightly for clearance, then swing one leg forward as you swing the other back. Make the hip muscles do the work and keep swinging—hard! Rest and then work out on the other side. The "scissors" tones the muscles of hips, thighs and abdomen.

Remain in the same position to do an exercise that will put you in condition for the bicycling we may all be doing a little later on! This exercise consists only in flexing alternate knees to chest and straightening them vigorously. Perform 50 counts on each side.

What Men Think Of Women's Styles

By Roland Young

This is the first of a series on what men think of women's fashions. Men in varied fields—actors, authors, prizefighters, taxicab drivers, lawyers, psychiatrists, photographers, etc.—will air their views freely and courageously on this engrossing subject.

Roland Young, actor, who here discusses the feminine clothes scene

Modest, scholarly and short-sighted, I have never taken much notice of women's fashions, a fact that has got me in a good deal of trouble in the past, and no doubt will continue to do so in the future. As I look back, I can remember only one dress that really made an impression on me. This was a black evening dress worn by Miss Greta Garbo. It was cut very low in front and I strongly suspected the use of adhesive tape here and there.

So much for clothes. In my cursory way I have observed a tendency among women to make structural alterations of their features. I often say to myself, reconstructed eyebrows are not for highbrows. I cannot seem to agree either with the practice of redesigning the mouth with lipstick so the original feature is obscured, and the new one no improvement. The use, on the other hand, of false eyelashes of incredible length seems to me practical in that they serve as a form of protection from gnats, flies, wasps and other natural enemies of the human race.

While I consider a good expanse of black silk stocking quite alluringly shocking, I have frequently said to myself and others, girls with small brains wear ankle chains. It has been brought to my attention that women of late years have taken to wearing men's clothes. I have seen some examples of this fashion and have expressed myself in the following words. Women in slacks are frights, personally I prefer tights. My spies have told me that girls are wearing hats. It had not occurred to me that the things I had seen of late on women's heads were intended as hats, but merely some objects they had found around the house and placed somewhat precariously on their heads for convenience or possibly out of pure prankishness.

Transparent shoes may be fun. I usually reach for my gun.

I have great sympathy for frails in lovely lacquered fingernails.

One result of writing the foregoing has been to make me realize that I take more interest in women's fashions than I thought I did. In fact, I view with earnest passion almost all women in about any fashion.

Watch Measures Of Sweaters

Perhaps you like to wash your sweaters and hand knits, but the matte rof drying and reshaping is something that a good dry cleaning plant is much better able to handle. The professional uses either a special measuring chart or makes a pattern that exactly outlines the garment. In finishing allowance is made for stretching that has occurred during wear. For instance, the back of a skirt may have gotten baggy and shapeless. It can be shrunk back into line. Or wrists and waistbands may have stretched so that they will have to be returned to their original elasticity.

And here's a suggestion that will help both you and your dry cleaner. If you have any special instructions about your knitted things, write them out and attach them to the piece to be cleaned. Your cleaner can then file them with the pattern until the garment is returned from the cleaning and turn them over to the finisher.

Kennys Are Feted By Canadian Envoy

By Carolyn Bell

"But of course you will come back to Washington, everyone does"—said a guest to the retiring Air Commodore and Mrs. W. R. Kenny yesterday afternoon, at the delightful farewell party in their honor given by the Canadian Minister and Mrs. Leighton McCarthy. "Oh we are going to leave in about two weeks," said Mrs. Kenny with a twinkle in her eyes. "Two weeks is our stock answer," laughed her air-minded husband. But whether in two weeks or not, the popular couple will shake the dust of Washington from their feet shortly and be off for the South.

It was strictly a "dominion" gathering—yesterday's fete—with a few American officials sprinkled in. From 5 until 7 o'clock the spacious, but attractively furnished, rooms of the legation were pleasantly filled with guests there to bid farewell to the Kennys. Receiving just inside the drawing room, which is paneled in highly polished wood, were the hosts and their guests. Mrs. McCarthy wore a silver cloth blouse and a black crepe skirt. Having only arrived in Washington early this season, yesterday's party was by way of being one of Mrs. McCarthy's first official appearances. Mrs. Kenny wore a black skirted frock with a fitted bodice of white.

On hand to act as cohosts were the McCarthys' son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John McCarthy. "Oh, we hope to be in Washington a good deal of time now," said the young and pretty Mrs. McCarthy. She wore a tea-length frock of black velvet with touches of white. John McCarthy was busily engaged in finding Scotch and sodas, or martinis, for the guests. Autumn flowers were used about the rooms and plates of canapes were constantly being passed.

Brodeurs Will Host McCarthys

The Naval Attache of the Canadian Legation and Mrs. Victor C. Brodeur were on hand. They will entertain at a party on Saturday in honor of the Minister and Mrs. McCarthy. Mrs. Brodeur wore a black frock trimmed with touches of jet. Wearing a black frock with a turquoise insert, Mrs. Hume Wrong chatted with first one group and then another. Her husband, the Minister-Counselor of the Legation, was not far away.

Mrs. Merchant Mahoney was here, there and everywhere introducing people, seeing that they had refreshments and just chatting. She wore an attractive bottle green ensemble. Mrs. Mahoney reported that daughter Anne was hard at work at the British Embassy (where she works as a secretary) and unable to attend the party.

Wilkinsons Attend Party

"Very satisfactory," said H. J. Carmichael, speaking of the supplies that were coming from the U. S. A. Mr. Carmichael is the director general of munitions and supplies for Canada here. "Supply men are all over the place," laughed one person. Sir John Self, who is head of British supply, was in deep conversation with a group of men.

"Don't call her petite and please not vivacious," Jean Chapdelaine was instructing one scribe who was talking about his pretty, dark-eyed wife—of scarcely three months. Yesterday Mrs. Chapdelaine, who is petite and vivacious by the way, wore a black frock with touches of Chinese red on it and a hat tipped over one eye.

Admiral and Mrs. Theodore Wilkinson were in the throng yesterday, as was Mrs. Claude Pepper, who wore a mink hat to top off her all-black ensemble. Mrs. Adolph Berle, wife of the Assistant Secreary of State, attended the party as did E. P. Taylor, of the British Purchasing Commission, and Mrs. John MacCormick, who sported a black hat trimmed in red and blue flowers. Chester Bloom, of the Winnipeg Free Press, was in the throng.

Air Commodore George Walsh (who succeeds Kenny) reports that he has taken a house in Spring Valley. He also announced that, despite previous statements to the contrary, he has no wife. Judge and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin were there yesterday afternoon as were the Assistant Military Attache of the Canadian Legation Maj. C. M. Drury and his pretty, blond sister, Miss Diana Drury. She wore a smart beige outfit, with a large matching hat, and a short fur jacket.

"Oh, I have always wanted to know someone from Niagara Falls," laughed a young lady as she was introduced to Mrs. Harry Scott, of Niagara Falls. Admiral and Mrs. Royal Ingersoll were at the party yesterday as were Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Reading, Mrs. Ronald MacDonnell, in a jade green ensemble and the Brig. and Mrs. H. F. G. Letson, of the legation.

Mrs. Richard G. Casey was joined at the party by her husband, the Minister of Australia. Miss Pat Jarrett, wearing a lucious silver fox jacket, was there also. The Minister of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close were also there, as were Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck, Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris, Mrs. William Breese, Hector Allard, of the legation staff, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja and George Magann, attache of the legation who has recently leased a home in Georgetown.

Envoy Fetes Journalists From Brazil

Yesterday was the second activity-packed day for those visiting Brazilian journalists, M. and Mme. Paulo de Bettencourt. Their social schedule included a luncheon at the Brazilian Embassy given in their honor by the Ambassador and Mme. Martins and a dinner last night given by the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs and Mrs. Nelson Rockefeller in their home on Foxhall Road.

Houseguests at the Brazilian Embassy with their daughter, Sybil, both M. and Mme. de Bettencourt are Cabot Award winners. This honor is given for meritorious service in enhancing Latin-American understanding. M. de Bettencourt is publisher of the Correa de Manha in Rio de Janeiro.

Before going on to the small luncheon at the Embassy yesterday, at which the Undersecretary of State, Sumner Welles, and Walter Lippmann were present, the de Bettencourts were greeted at the Pan American Union by Director Leo S. Rowe.

Charles A. Thompson, chief of the State Department's division of cultural relations, will entertain today at a luncheon in their honor in the Pan-American room of the Mayflower. Tomorrow the visitors will be received at the White House.

Hurja Dinner Draws Writers And Publishers

Carlisle Bargeron, whose book, "Confusion on the Potomac," is published today, and Mrs. Bargeron shared honors with Mr. and Mrs. Roy Pinkerton, of Los Angeles, at a dinner given last night by Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja at their home on Forty-fourth Street.

A strong journalistic accent was noted in the gathering assembled by the Pathfinder publisher and Mrs. Hurja to meet Author Bargeron and his wife, and the West Coast publisher, Mr. Pinkerton, and his wife, who is also editor of a magazine.

Also among those present were Justice and Mrs. Justin Miller, the latter of whom is widely known as May Merrill Miller, author of "First the Blade." Representative Katherine Byron was ranking guest in the company of 14. Others there included Mr. and Mrs. A. Burks Summers, whom the Pinkertons are xisiting, and Capt. A. C. Andreasen, Mrs. Hurja's father.

Mr. and Mrs. Hurja will issue invitations soon to their annual Christmas Eve carol-sing, which, as usual, will get under way late on December 24 and last well into Christmas Day.

Mrs. D. Worth Clark Plans Luncheon

Mrs. D. Worth Clark, wife of Senator Clark, of Idaho, has issued invitations for a luncheon on Friday, December 12.

The party will take place at the Army-Navy town club at 1 o'clock.

For Shakespeare and His England

Underwood & Underwood.

These three are not unwary of the work that must be done before a play like the Bard of Avon's "Troilus and Cressida" can go on the boards. It takes more than acting, decided Mrs. James F. Holman, Mrs. James O'Grady and Miss Ruth Parker Dove, as they conscientiously typed out the guest list for the opening performance tomorrow night. The Washington Civic Theater is presenting the production for the benefit of Bundles for Britain

Mrs. Tyner's Tea for Bards Is Charming Dusk Affair

By Elizabeth Henney

It seems almost unbelievable that Washington, on December 3, would be warm enough to turn a tea into a terrace party, but it did happen here yesterday at the tea given by Mrs. Elonzo Tyner in her apartment at the Shoreham Hotel. Many of the guests congregated on the terrace off the dining room to chat in the warm, almost springlike air, and to look down at the twinkling lights in Rock Creek Park below.

Honoring the Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Ralph Bard, Mrs. Elonzo Tyner entertained from 4 to 7 o'clock yesterday afternoon, receiving in the drawing room. Mrs. Tyner was gowned in floor-length white crepe fashioned on flowing Grecian lines. At the throat of the gown were two large red roses. Mrs. Bard had chosen for the occasion a floor length frock of turquoise blue, accented with seed pearl pockets on the bodice of the gown.

Also receiving with the hostess and the guests of honor were Mrs. Frank Knox, the wife of the Secretary of the Navy, who wore floor length black velvet, a small flowered toque and an orchid corsage, and Mrs. Harry Gould Foote, who was in pastel blue with a turban to match and wore an orchid corsage also. Mrs. Foote, a former Chicagoan, as were the hostess and many of the guests yesterday, is in town for a few days with Col. Foote, en route to their winter home in Belair, Fla.

Presiding at the punch table in a corner of the drawing room was Mrs. Stanley Carr, daughter of the hostess. She was gowned in a pearl gray frock with a sweetheart neckline accented by two brilliant clips. Atop her blonde curls she wore a sugar-pink plumed hat. Generally assisting were Mrs. George Renchard, Mrs. John Reyburn and Mrs. Charles Bromwell.

Pouring during the afternoon were Mrs. Jesse Jones, Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, who accented her black costume with an ermine stole; Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, whose turquoise frock was trimmed with passementerie; Mrs. Consuleo Seone, in black accented by lingerie touches of white at the collar; Lady Chalkley, Mrs. Albert J. McCartney, Mrs. George Tait, Mrs. Wade H. Ellis and Mrs. George Barnett.

It was Mrs. Barnett who illustrated beautifully during the afternoon the adage "a truly great lady is never under any circumstances ruffled or confused." It was while she was pouring tea. On tipping the heavy silver hot water kettle forward to fill a cup, the top of the kettle suddenly bounced off and into her lap. Entirely unperturbed she finished pouring the tea as if nothing at all had happened, then with one hand calmly removed the kettle top from her lap and laid it on the table while she turned to another guest to ask—"and will you have cream or lemon with your tea?"

Noted during the afternoon were the former counselor of the Polish Embassy and Mme. Sokolowska; Count Fumasoni Biondi; Mrs. Ollie James, who was gowned in brown and stopped for a moment's chat with Mrs. William Laird Dunlop and Miss Alys Downing; Mrs. Charles McNary, who was gowned in black with a bodice of pale blue and wore with it a black felt hat accented with coq feathers of pale pink; George Abell, Miss Elizabeth Howry, Mrs. French Myer, Miss Emily French Myer, Col. Burdette Fitch, Mrs. Martin Vogel, Mrs. Emingham Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. William Jennings Price, Mrs. Peter Drury and many more.

Capital Whirl

By Hope Ridings Miller

Radu Irimescu, former Rumanian envoy here, has just become an American citizen . . . Since resigning from diplomatic service in October, 1940, he and his American-born wife have been across the country and back; have spent a summer in their lakeside cottage in New Hampshire, and are now in New York for a few days . . . Dorothy Green, Mme. Irimescu's daughter, will be in Washington this weekend; and meanwhile, the Rumanian Charge d'Affaires and Mme. Coste are planning "a musical evening" on Saturday . . . For the first time members of the Sulgrave Club will meet and make merry in the spacious clubhouse on New Year's Eve . . . I understand plans are full speed ahead for a bang-up party that night . . . Dinner, dancing and probably a floor show at midnight. How times do change . . . First thing we know cameras may be clicking there with the regularity party-going Washington now taken as a matter of course everywhere else.

Mrs. Gunther Coming to Town

Quite as attractive as her famous husband is Mrs. John Gunther, who is coming to town next week; is scheduled for a talk at the Raleigh Hotel on December 10, and will be feted later at a luncheon to be given by Mrs. Frank West . . . Mrs. Gunther is to be the house guest of Mrs. Courtlandt Barnes, the former Katrina McCormick . . . On a brief trip to Washington last year, shortly before Gunther took off to South America to get the "inside" story for his latest book, Mrs. Gunther told friends she thought it was high time she did a book about her husband. "It's title? Oh, that," she chuckled. "Well, what else could it be but 'Inside John Guther'?"

Party Patter: Mrs. Francis Whitten will be the guest of honor when Miss Carolyn Nash entertains at a 5-to-7 party at the Carlton on December 17 . . . The Seth Richardsons are planning a dinner for December 10 . . . Miss Bell Gurnee will gather in a few friends at teatime on Saturday; and Mrs. Gilbert M. Hitchcock will have a small company dining with her both tonight and Saturday night . . . Just back from a visit in Memphis, Tenn., Mrs. Hitchcock has as her guest, Mrs. F. M. Crump, of Memphis, who will be here until the latter part of next week . . . Arthur Bradley Campbell, now at the Ambassador Hotel, New York, is due to arrive in Washington December 16 to visit Clarence Hewes for a few days, then on to Palm Beach, for the remainder of the winter.

Mme. Bettencourt to Stay Here

Lovely and lively Mme. Paulo de Bettencourt is delighted with the prospect of staying on in this country after her husband returns home . . . She will have headquarters in New York for at least six months, but expects to travel widely, observe a great deal, and fill her South American newspaper column with impressions gleaned wherever she happens to go . . . Small, dark, and much too young looking to have a teen-age daughter, Mme. de Bettencourt has flashing dark eyes, black hair and a streamlined figure . . . She studied in England; starting writing her column ("just impressions") without thought of fame or fortune ("I wanted something to keep me busy"), and soon found, as she puts it, "Waves of love and affection sweeping in my direction from my readers." . . . And now she doubts she will ever be able to stop writing. . . .

How did her column happen to be called "Majoy"? I asked her that, and she told me, "Because it's a pretty name; sounds well, no matter how you pronounce it. 'Majoy' is an Indian word for 'swallow,' but that has no special connection with the column." . . .

Mme. de Bettencourt will answer almost any yestion; tell you almost anything, in fact, except her daughter's age . . . "That," she said with a twinkle, "is a secret between her and me. She is in her 'teens, so let it go at that." . . . Now guests at the Brazilian Embassy, the de Bettencourts will be in Washington until Saturday.

Mention of distinguished Brazilians reminds me that there's still another in town now—Gen. Newton Cavalcanti, of the Brazilian army, who arrived here several days ago and is staying at the Shoreham Hotel. Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Sherman Miles will entertain at a reception in his honor tomorrow afternoon . . . The party will go on the boards at the Officers Club from 5 to 7 o'clock.

Two Archdukes Entertain Small Group

With two archdukes and a prince present, royalty seemed to be all over the place yesterday when Archdukes Otto of Hapsburg, pretender to the non-existent throne of Austria, entertained at a 5 to 7 party.

Receiving with the Archduke was his brother Archduke Robert and the two greeted guests gayly and informally for well over two hours. A special center of attention among the guests was another member of a royal house, Prince Dom Joao de Orleans de Braganca, grandson of the last Emperor of Brazil.

The party took place in Archduke Otto's small apartment at the Broadmoor, and was one in a series that the host has planned for this season.

Among those present was Mme. Martins, wife of the Brazilian Ambassador, who accompanied Prince Dom Joao. The Polish Ambassador and Mme. Ciechanowska were there; also, Mrs. Eugene Roberts, who poured tea for the small company; Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, accompanied by Mrs. Lister Hill, dropped in for a cup of tea before going on the round of other parties. Mrs. Peter Gerry and Mrs. Warren Austin were there; also, Miss Vera Bloom, Mrs. Ray Atherton, Fahter Joseph Code, Lyle Kennedy and a few others.

Senora de Espil Hostess Tomorrow

Two parties are on tomorrow's calendar of entertaining for Senora de Espil, wife of the Argentine Ambassador.

She will be hostess at a debutante luncheon in honor of Miss Bella Hagner, daughter of Mrs. Randall Hagner; and later—from 4:30 to 6 p. m.—she will receive at tea.

Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward Entertains at Luncheon

Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, member of the Social Security Board, entertained at luncheon yesterday, honoring Mrs. Harry J. March and her sister, Mrs. Hortense Graves, of Los Angeles, Calif. The luncheon was given at the Women's National Democratic Club.

The guest list included Mrs. Pat Harrison, Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, Mrs. Oscar Chapman, Miss Harriet Elliott, Mrs. Jewell W. Swofford, Miss Eloise Davison, Mrs. Esther Van Wagoner Tufty, Mrs. Florence S. Kerr, Mrs. John A. Tyson, Miss Nell Tyson, Mrs. Brian Bell, Mrs. Mary E. Buford, Mrs. Kathleen Sexton Holmes, Mrs. E. H. Dutcher, Mrs. Hugh Clegg, Mrs. A. L. Jagoe, Mrs. Dan N. Swan and Mrs. Curtis Shears.

The Sergeant at Arms of the House of Representatives and Mrs. Kenneth Romney have as their guest at the Wardman Park, Mrs. Wallace McCrackin, of Hamilton, Mont.

Mr. and Mrs. Fentress Hill, of San Francisco, are at the Mayflower. They expect to be in Washington about a week.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Oliver Anderson have returned to their home in Ardmore, Pa., after a visit with Mrs. Anderson's brother and mother, Maj. Robert Jones Moulton and Mrs. James DuHamel Moulton, at their quarters in Fort Myer, Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Todd Martin, of Mobile, Ala., who have been the houseguests of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Lowrery during the past week, left yesterday for New York.

Mrs. William Gilman Low and her daughter, Miss Rhoda Low, of Bristol, R. I., have arrived at the Mayflower for a week's stay. They are on their way from Hot Springs, Va., to New York, where they will spend the holidays.

Mrs. L. L. Lapp, who has been spending a few days in New York, returned to her home on Devonshire Place yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh E. Phillips had as their guest recently Frank Davies, of Ottawa, Canada. Mr. Davies was a scientist with Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd on his first expedition to the South Pole. He has recently returned from Peru, and is now stationed at Ottawa, where he is doing scientific work for the Canadian government.

Mrs. Alex Dittler, of Atlanta, Ga., who has been spending several weeks in the Capital with her aunt, Mrs. Estelle Nordlinger, has returned to her home, accompanied by Mrs. Nordlinger.

Miss Benson Debuts Dec. 27

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Benson have issued invitations to a tea on Saturday, December 27, at which their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Polk Benson, will make her bow to society.

The party will take place at the Benson home, Birdwood, at 10 West Underwood Street, Chevy Chase, from 5 to 7 o'clock. Miss Benson is now studying at Wellesley College.

Mrs. Hagner Entertains At Cocktails

Mrs. Randall Hagner and her daughter, Miss Bella Hagner, entertained at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon "after 5:30." The fete was one in a series that Mrs. Hagner has planned this season. She will be hostess again on Friday—same hour, same place, her home.

Guests who dropped in for yesterday's informal party included a number of debutantes of this season and several others from the younger set group.

Miss Hagner will make her formal bow to society on December 20. The event will be a dinner-dance at the 1925 F Street Club. A number of other parties are also being planned in her honor.

Fenton Fadeley To Give Annual Hunt Tea Saturday

Invitation have been issued by Fenton Fadeley for his annual hunt tea this Saturday at 5 o'clock at his home, 5515 Moorland Lane, Edgemoor, Md. The event will follow the Potomac Hunt, which starts early in the afternoon.

Guests will be members of the Potomac Hunt, of which Mr. Fadeley is a member, and will be, as usual, a colorful affair, with the men guests in their pink hunting coats, and the feminine guests in formal hunting attire complete with white stocks, velvet caps, bowlers or veiled tophats.

Norwegian Yule Tea Is Planned in N. Y.

Crown Princess Martha of Norway will be guest of honor at a Norwegian Christmas tea tomorrow afternoon in New York, and receiving with her will be Mrs. J. Borden Harriman. Other guests will include Mrs. Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, wife of the Norwegian Minister, and Mrs. Rolf A. Christensen, wife of the Norwegian Consul General in New York.

The tea is to mark the formal opening of the New York headquarters of a new war relief organization, entitled American Friends of Norway. Aim of the organization is to supply the free Norwegian fighting forces in England, Iceland, Canada and elsewhere with medical equipment and other necessities.

Walter Chrysler Feted at Dinner By Mrs. Whitman

Entertaining at dinner at the Carlton, Mrs. Charles Whitman feted Walter P. Chrysler, of Warrenton and New York, last night. Mr. Chrysler recently purchased the North Wales Club near Warrenton, where he has been making his home most of this season.

Guests included the Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor and their niece, Miss Ann Grosvenor, of New York; Gen. John Fulmer Bright, Lieut. and Mrs. Barry Bingham and Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred Essary.

Engagement Announced

$3,236,327 Recommended For Promotion Act

Funds for the Ramspeck-Mead automatic promotion act cleared the highest hurdle yesterday when the House Appropriations Committee recommended an appropriation of $3,236,327 to make the plan effective as of October 1. An estimated 60,000 Federal and District employes will be given annual pay rises of from $60 to $250 under the act this fiscal year. The approximately 40,000 employes who were supposed to have been given their rises on October 1 will be given supplemental checks when the money becomes available, which will be around January 1.

Of the 60,000 affected, 40,210 will be given rises of $60 each; 14,300 will get $100 rises; $200 promotions will go to 4215, and 410 will get $250 rises. Employes in the legislative and judicial establishments are covered under the promotion plan.

To be eligible for a rise under the act, an employe paid less than $3800 must have an efficiency rating of good or better and have had no rise within the last 18 months. Employes paid more than $3800 must wait 30 months between automatic promotions. E. B. Young, Budget Bureau personnel director, estimated that 4 per cent of the eligibles wouldn't get the raises because their efficiency ratings were below "good." Incidentally, the efficiency rating system was damned by committee members, particularly Chairman Cannon; and Budget Bureau spokesmen didn't attempt to defend the oft-criticized system.

No serious opposition was expected as Congress approved the promotion plan unanimously and it was up to the committee to recommend funds to put the act into effect. However, Representative Ditter brought up the notion that paying Federal workers more money would add to the inflationary threat. He suggested the request be referred to the economy committee for action.

Sievert Rohwer Elevated

Sievert A. Rohwer, an assistant chief of the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, has been placed in charge of regulatory work of the bureau. He's succeeded by William L. Popham who has been assistant chief in charge of control operations . . . A red herring was tossed at David Lasser several months ago by Congress and a rider was attached to the WPA appropriation bill which prevented him from being employed by the relief agency. Yesterday the Appropriations Committee relented . . . suggested the rider be wiped off the statute books . . . admitted that it had been enacted without sufficient consideration."

OPM and OEM yesterday made public a list of their dollar-a-year appointees. In November, OPM had 248 men who worked for a dollar-a-year and OEM had 288 men and a woman (Alice Marble) at the same salary level. Neither agency could produce an accurate figure on the number of WOC's, people who don't even receive a dollar for their services. In August it was estimated that there were 1000 WOC's in both OPM and OEM. WOC, incidentally, means "without compensation." In August the agencies had 7000 employes. Now there are more than 10,000.

The Appropriations Committee yesterday recommended that $3,431,560 be appropriated to the Civil Service Commission to carry out the Ramspeck Act and generally to increase its staff to handle mounting defense work. It's estimated that the commission will add 1847 employes, many of them here. In July the commission had to fire that many employes when it failed to get additional defense funds.

It's planned to hire 100 more investigators to check up on the backgrounds and characters of prospective employes. Another 100 will be added to the examining division to speed up tests. The service records division will be increased by 33.8. In fact, the expansion will be all down the line. Most important is the fact that if the money recommended becomes available the 180,000 employes who will be brought under Civil Service by the Ramspeck Act will get reasonably quick action. The committee estimates that it'll take 18 months to finish up the Ramspeck job.

Frogs Wing Way to War

Two thousand live rana pipiens (grass frogs to you) are flying to England to do their bit in the war. The frogs, packed in moss and shipped in flannel-blanketed boxes, have been sent by the Red Cross and will be used at the University of London for experimental purposes in connection with certain types of war injuries.

Cheese for Christmas

Don't be surprised if a nice-looking man taps you on the shoulder and says, "Wouldn't you like to send two pounds of cheese to Col. Iverson B. Summers in London for Christmas?" He will be Capt. W. O. Clemens, of the District Defense Council. He is determined the colonel will have more than two pounds authorities permit one person to send.

School Board Head Flays Supt. Ballou

Dr. Gannon Warns No 'Rubber Stamp' Approval to Be Given Appointments

At o comparatively stormy session of the Board of Education yesterday, Dr. James A. Gannon, chairman of the finance committee, criticized what he called the board's policy of "rubber-stamping" Superintendent Ballou's recommendations for appointments within the District school system.

The discussion broke out over appointment of John H. Mockabee as public schools director of procurement. "Hereafter," Dr. Gannon asserted, "I will not approve any recommendation made by the superintendent in this respect, unless the board has had an opportunity to study the qualifications of at least the three highest applicants."

If the best man for the job is outside the school system, Dr. Gannon declared, and the second-best within the system, "my vote will go to the second-best every time." Dr. Frank W. Ballou, defending his recommendation, pointed out that in 1927 he formulated a policy, which the board adopted, that whenever two applicants were "equal" in their qualifications for a particular job, the one within the school setup would be recommended.

Won't Shift Responsibility

Dr. Ballou stated that he had given to the board not "merely two" persons' "essential qualifications," but those of all of the ten applicants. "I am willing to change the procedure," he said, "but I cannot shift my responsibility to the board to select one name. Under law the final selection rests on me and me alone."

Dr. Gannon said he had no objection to the individual but was speaking of the policy. The board moved unanimously to appoint Mockabee to the job. For the past year Mockabee has been on active duty with the Army, in the Office of the Quartermaster General.

The Gen. Ulysses Grant McAlexander Post, No. 38, of the American Legion, through J. W. Ninneman, commander, transmitted to the board a resolution it adopted "strongly disapproving the change in our nationally accepted method of pledging allegiance to the flag." It was requested that the board rescind its previous action calling for a military salute and return to the extended arm method, but this the board declined to do.

Dr. Ballou said that when the outstretched arm salute—which has been objected to by some officials because of its resemblance to the Nazi salute—was first adopted, military authorities wanted it that way so it would not be a true "military" salute.

However, he said, he has conferred with officers in the War Department, who now "uniformly indorse" the school children performing the military salute.

D. A. R. to Hold Contest

The District Chapter of the D. A. R. requested that it be authorized to hold its annual Good Citizenship Pilgrimage Contest among girls in local senior white high schools. Mrs. James W. William, chairman of the committee on student activities, only Negro woman on the board, asked to be registered as "not voting," because she was "conscientiously opposed" to any patriotic program of this sort that did not extend to both white and Negro schools.

John W. Wilson, Negro, chairman of the committee of complaints and appeals, said in appreciation for the board's support of various Negro programs in the past he would move this resolution be adopted. The board then moved to grant permission to the D. A. R. to hold the contest.

Among other actions of the board were the transfer of Miss Bertha E. Taylor from administrative principal, Addison-Curtis-Hyde School, to administrative principal, Health-West School, and the promotion of Mrs. F. S. Haas from teacher to administrative principal, Addison-Curtis-Hyde School. Mrs. Henry Gratton Doyle presided at the meeting held in the Franklin School.

Rent Boosts In Leases Held Invalid

Contracts Stand. However, If Made Before January 1 or Cover Improvements

Landlords who have required tenants to sign leases providing for rent boosts in recent months to beat the gun on enforcement of the new rent-control law are in for a surprise.

According to R. F. Camalier, counsel for the Senate District Committee, rent increases incorporated in leases have no more meaning than any other type of rent rises, provided they were made after January 1, 1941.

"I doubt if any lease would supersede an act of Congress," he said last night. "No matter what form the rent agreement takes, it was the intent of the law to supersede them by freezing the rents at January 1 levels."

The status of recent lease agreements has become a subject of concern to many tenants who have called The Post to learn how they will be affected by the law.

Some Increases Valid

Only valid rent increases are those made because of "substantial improvements" installed in "good faith," rather than for the purpose of increasing rents, Camalier stated.

He expressed the opinion that a new paint job, replacement of a worn-out kitchen stove, or other renovations "of a minor nature, would not justify any rent increase. But decisions on specific cases would be left to the rent administrator to be appointed under the law and to the District Commissioners.

Before renovations justifying rent increases can be made, plans for the changes must be submitted to the District Building Inspection Department and approved by the Commissioners. It is understood that the Commissioners plan to use discretion in applying their power to prevent the development of "hardship cases."

Although no arrangements to set up a legal staff to enforce the law have been made, it is generally believed that the job will fall to the office of the corporation counsel.

Regulations Up to Keech

Richmond B. Keech, corporation counsel, stated that the law is primarily a District regulation falling within the scope of his office, rather than the office of District Attorney Edward M. Curran. Curran said he was investigating the question of jurisdiction, but "assumed" that it was Keech's job to enforce the law.

Charles J. Rush, secretary of the Real Estate Board, said that organized real estate men in the District were prepared to cooperate with the rent administrator. Operation of the law will not materially affect board members who had been asked to avoid increases wherever possible, Rush said.

Further clarification of the act revealed that all parties renting to one or more persons will be considered landlords. No rooming house license will be required of landlords renting to less than three persons, however. The Post was in error yesterday in stating that the act defines a landlord as any person renting to three or more persons.

Police Jobs In Washington Go Begging

Officials Have Difficulty Obtaining 100 Men To Enlarge Force

One hundred jobs as metropolitan policemen, available to "healthy, intelligent men between 22 and 32," are virtually going begging in Washington.

Although Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of police, has Congressional approval to hire 100 more patrolmen, he can't get the men. And if he does, it is estimated it will be midsummer before the increased force begins serving the public.

Two major reasons—the Civil Service Commission and national defense program—plus probably a half-dozen lesser obstacles are preventing the enlagement of the police department, at least in the opinion of several high officers.

Personnel records showed 16 vacancies in the police department in addition to the 100 newly authorized posts. There are 38 rookies in the police school and at least another month will be needed to complete their training. The rookies are not included in the number of vacancies.

When the present school graduates, possibly 30 men will be ready to comprise a new school. These men will be chosen from the present eligibility list and will exhaust the roll.

Only 50 add names now appear on the Civil Service lists for appointment and, generally, 30 per cent of the eligibles are rejected because of physical or mental deficiencies.

Lieut. John J. Agnew, police liaison officer with the Civil Service, said it is difficult to find men because of the defense boom.

In order to take advantage of the generosity of the Congress in giving him an additional 100 patrolmen, Maj. Kelly must:

1. Arrange with the Civil Service Commission for an immediate examination to establish an eligibility list.

2. Enlarge the personnel investigative unit (now only one man) to check on the character of new appointees.

3. Enlarge the police training school, which now is made up of one lieutenant and one acting sergeant, who can train no more than 50 rookies effectively.

And then after he has surmounted these obstacles, Maj. Kelly must find a sufficient number of men interested in the police department to make it their life's work.

Sun Decks for 87

Government Girls to Get Dream Home

Government girls, numbering 250, selected by personal interviews from thousands of Washington's new defense workers, will be housed in a six-story hotel complete with pipe organ and "beaux parlors," the latter part of February, it was reported yesterday.

The structure, an answer to the Federal girls' prayer, is nearing completion about ten blocks northwest of the White House and will be just around the corner from 20 other buildings operated as rooming houses by Ralph S. Scott in the 1300 to 1500 blocks of Twenty-first Street and at 2024-2106 O Street Northwest.

For $7 a week, at which rate Scott hopes to make a profit, the girls lucky enough to be accepted will get a single "outside" room complete with running water, her own telephone, and own clothes cabinet, it was stated.

There will be four separate roof decks, one for sun-bathing, one for dancing, one for sports, and another—equipped with an outdoor fireplace—for picnicking.

The hotel is one of two buildings being erected with Government funds in the District to help solve the room shortage problem. A loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation made it possible.

Noyes Heads 'Oldest' Group For 34th Time

Theodore W. Noyes was reelected "with affectionate pride" for the thirty-fourth consecutive year president of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants last night at their meeting in the old Union Engine House, Nineteenth and H Streets Northwest.

NOYES

He was reelected unanimously, as were all present incumbents of the association. The 13 vice presidents, representing the 13 original States of the Union, are John Taggett Proctor, who presided at the meeting, also reelected chronicler; Christian Heurich, Charles A. Langley, Fred A. Emery, Joseph I. Keefer, John B. Dickman, also reelected recording secretary; Elra C. Palmer, Walter E. Allen, Jesse C. Suter, Anthony Denekas, L. E. Breuniger, Charles H. Bates and Maj. Ernest Brown, elected to fill the place of the late Dr. Hugh M. Smith.

Also elected were James F. Dunamel, corresponding secretary; Orrin J. Davy, treasurer, and Harry A. Burr, marshal.

Twelve new members were elected. They were Henry W. Draper, 1521 Thirty-fifth Street Northwest; Arthur Cowsill, 1818 Park Road Northwest; Edwin M. Lawton, 1143 Twenty-fourth Street Northwest; Elmore T. Burdette, 3710 Fulton Street Northwest; William E. Rink, 1011 Eighth Street Northeast; Samuel J. Gompers, 2517 North Capitol Street; John O. Allen, 1100 Eighth Street Northeast.

John J. Deviny, 3571 Brandywine Street Northwest; Fred L. Hawley, 6219 Piney Branch Road Northwest; Frank B. Lord, 4202 Fourteenth Street Northwest; Ernest F. Wenderoth, 1409 Montague Street Northwest, and Mark Lansburgh, 3111 Idaho Avenue Northwest.

The association will celebrate its seventy-sixth anniversary Monday with a banquet in the Raleigh Hotel at 7:30 p. m. with a reception at 7 p. m., it was announced. The meeting concluded with slides on Mexico shown by William D. Searle, a member of the group who made the pictures on a recent trip to that country.

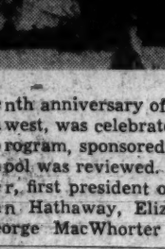
Third Concert Is Given by Music Guild

By Ray C. B. Brown

Chamber Music Guild presents its String Quartet (Frank Gittelson, Alexander Levin, Benjamin Sosner and Marcel Ancher) on Wednesday night in Almas Temple. Assisting artists: Reino Luoma, piano; Sara Feldman, viola; Mary Hill Doolittle, violoncello; Cathreen Carrico, soprano; Kathryn English, contralto; Irving Chandler, tenor; Abrasha Robofski, barytone. Program: Double Violin Concerto in D minor (Bach), "With All Thy Hearts" and "Hear, King of Angels" from "Christmas Oratorio" (Bach-Guzman), String Sextet, "Souvenir de Florence," Op. 70 (Chaikovski).

At the Chamber Music Guild's third concert of the season last evening in Almas Temple, the best performance was that of the Bach double violin concerto by Frank Gittelson and Alexander Levin, who played the familiar work with both clarity and zest. One missed the string accompaniment, for which the piano was a poor substitute, but the two were so eloquent and so technically at ease that their reading engrossed one's attention completely.



BROWN

The other compositions on the program were not so carefully and smoothly exhibited, but had the merit of being unusual. One which may have had its first performance although no such indication was given, was Luis Guzman's arrangement for string quartet and mixed vocal quartet of two excerpts from Bach's "Weihnachts Oratorium."

Randolph Bill Asks Off-Street Parking Ban

Representative Jennings Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee, yesterday introduced a bill prohibiting the parking of vehicles on public or private property, aside from the public streets, without the permission of the owner.

The bill provides that an auto may be impounded and an offending motorist required to deposit collateral of at least $25 to assure his appearance in court.

The Commissioners requested such a measure last week when they told Representative Randolph that there have been numerous complaints in the District of motorists parking their autos on parking lots, filling stations and school yards all night.

In a letter to the House District Committee chairman yesterday Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, requested that the off-street parking bill contain a provision requiring all purchase of property for parking lots be approved by his office.

Representative Randolph also said last night that a bill permitting the District Government to share in the funds of the Lanham Act for the improvement of local water and sewer facilities probably will be brought up for House action today.

Church Bazaar, Turkey Dinner Are Harbingers of Christmas

Church bazaars and turkey dinners—always harbingers of Christmas in Washington—were held in many parish halls yesterday, while similar affairs are planned for today and throughout the Advent season.

Highspot of last night's functions was the annual turkey dinner of the Shrine of the Sacred Heart Catholic Church at Sixteenth and Park Road Northwest. Church workers said they had ordered 4000 pounds of turkey, 20 sacks of potatoes, 100 gallons of sauerkraut, hundreds of pounds of peas, 200 gallons of ice cream, among other items. More than 300 people served the meal.

St. Mark's Episcopal Parish, Third and A Streets Northeast—once the Pro-Cathedral of Washington—served a turkey dinner last night under the Ladies' Aid Society auspices. Mrs. Blanche Cole was chairman. The meal and a bazaar will continue tonight from 5 to 7 p. m.

Chinese Goods Sold

Sold at the annual Chinese bazaar yesterday at the Chinese Community Church, 1011 L Street Northwest, were Chinese linens, embroideries, scrolls, dolls and other articles, with proceeds benefiting the Chinese Church building fund. The bazaar will continue today and tomorrow from 2 to 10 p. m. The Rev. Dr. C. C. Hung is pastor.

The annual Unitarian bazaar opened yesterday at All Souls' Unitarian Church, Sixteenth and Harvard Streets Northwest, under the sponsorship of the Women's Alliance and other church organizations. Mrs. Arthur Hachten is general chairman. The function will continue this afternoon.

The Church of Two Worlds' annual bazaar will take place Saturday from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. in the ballroom of the Hotel Continental. The parish fair of Holy Comforter Episcopal Church of St. Andrew's Parish will close with program from 2 to 11 p. m. today. The church is at Seventh and Oglethorpe Streets Northwest.

The women's organizations of Sixth Presbyterian Church will hold a turkey dinner tonight from 5 to 7 o'clock in the parish hall at Sixteenth and Kennedy Streets Northwest.

Turkey Dinner Today

The Rector's Aid Society of All Souls' Memorial Episcopal Church will have a Christmas bazaar and turkey diner today in the parish hall at Cathedral, near Connecticut Avenue Northwest. The bazaar will open at 11 a. m., and the meal will be served from 5:30 to 7:30 p. m. Mrs. Wayne Wirgman is general chairman of the day's activities.

The Huddle Class of St. Paul's Lutheran Church enjoyed its annual Christmas party and "pal banquet" last night in Epiphany Chapel, at Connecticut Avenue and Everett Street Northwest.

Universalist National Memorial Church's annual Yule bazaar and turkey dinner is set for tonight from 5 to 7 o'clock in the parish hall at Sixteenth and S Streets Northwest. Mrs. William H. McGlauflin and Mrs. Martin E. Jansson are bazaar and dinner chairmen, respectively.

The Woman's Society of Christian Service of Hamline Methodist Church sponsored its annual bazaar and turkey supper last night in the parish hall at Sixteenth and Allison Streets Northwest. It will continue today, with the dinner from 5 to 7 p. m. Mrs. G. R. Wilhelm is general chairman.

The Bethesda Methodist Woman's Society of Christian Service will hold its annual oyster and ham supper and bazaar tonight from 5 to 7 o'clock. It will aid the church building fund.

Coburn, Candy Kiss Salesman, Dies at 64

Bridgewater, Mass., Dec. 3 (AP).—Clyde G. Coburn, 64, known to thousands of Cape Cod tourists as the candy kiss salesman who in 1936 announced his candidacy for President of the United States on a peace platform and later withdrew, died today.

Coburn, who conducted a popcorn, peanut and candy kiss stand on the Cape highway, gained national attention during the last two years when as a member of various peace organizations in Washington he wrote to Hitler, Mussolini and Chamberlain in the hope of bringing about peace.

Burleith Civil Defense Meeting Set Tonight

A first aid unit for civilian defense in the Burleith area will be organized at 7:30 tonight at a special meeting in the Gordon Junior High School. All physicians, nurses and graduates of the Red Cross school are urged to attend.

Vincent Plumpton, graduate of the District air warden school and deputy warden, will hold the first class for air raid wardens.

TOGETHER AGAIN—Mrs. John Herman, who placed her infant son in a Kansas City foundling home on the death of her husband 28 years ago, embraced her grown son as they were reunited in New York Tuesday night on a radio program. Returning to the orphanage a year after leaving her son, she was unable to learn the whereabouts of the couple who adopted him. Recently, her son, known as Rowland Evans, sought a birth certificate and learned that his mother was living in Marshfield, Wis.

Census Expert To Take Post In Panama

Because of a brief notation on the Government's file of professional and scientific personnel that Thomas F. Corcoran, assistant chief of the employment statistics division of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, could speak Spanish and French, he will leave his present job to become director of the department of statistics and census for the Republic of Panama.

Corcoran, who is frequently confused with "Tommy the Cork," one-time Roosevelt brain-truster, but is no relation, believes he is going to Panama on a "good-neighbor assignment" which probably will take many other Americans to Latin America to fill advisory governmental positions.

Thirty-four, single, with the background of a year's graduate study in France and Spain as a Sterling fellow for Yale University, Corcoran said he will have the job of "reorganizing" the Panama statistical setup.

Turn to U. S. for Advice

From other sources it was learned that Panama statistical information setup needs reorganizing because it has run down at the heel during the administration of President Arias, who was under Nazi influence. Since Arias was ousted, the Panamanian government has turned away from the Axis and is looking to the United States more frequently for advice and assistance.

Calvert Dedrick, research chief of the Census Bureau, is now in Panama completing a survey of the statistical setup. His survey recommended the establishment of a division of statistics and census under an American.

Corcoran, a native of Springfield, Mass., has lived at 4130 Military Road for the last seven years. He was graduated from Yale in 1929 and secured an M. A. from Yale in 1932 after spending a year abroad.

Sees Big Possibilities

"I think that there are plenty of possibilities in the whole South American field," he said. "As things stand now, South America will be the only part of the world with money to spend after the war is over."

Although he has never been to Panama, Corcoran is sure that "a combination of circumstances" pointed him out for the job.

"My file card showed I was single, knew statistics, and could speak Spanish. I presume it just naturally came out of the hopper," he said.

Employes of the Bureau of Labor Statistics gave Corcoran a testimonial luncheon Monday. He will start work in Panama January 1 on a two-year contract.

Police Find Missing Girl at Her Office

Miss Lila Quick, 19-year-old Veterans' Administration employe, who was reported missing to police early yesterday morning, was found by police at her office yesterday.

Her disappearance had been reported by her roommate, Miss May Morris, of 1336 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest, who said Miss Quick did not return home from work and was still unheard from at 1 a. m.

Miss Quick told police she spent the night with a friend.

38,728 Added Acres Seen for A. P. Hill Post

The House Appropriations Committee approved yesterday War Department requests for funds to acquire an additional 38,728 acres of land at the A. P. Hill Military Reservation, Va., at a cost of $1,206,000.

Also approved were requests for $398,321 for construction projects at that reservation and at other Virginia posts.

Knox Hints U. S. Is Sinking Nazi U-Boats

By Milton Magruder
United Press Staff Writer

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox hinted yesterday that the sinking of the United States destroyer Reuben James by a U-boat with a loss of 100 American lives has been fully avenged and that expanding American and British naval forces dominate the Atlantic.

Hints that American and British naval forces are sweeping the Axis raiders out of the North Atlantic sea lanes were dropped by Knox during a press conference discussion of Allied ship losses.

He noted significantly that the losses had declined sharply after the German torpedo attack on the Reuben James the night of October 30-31 and said, "We'll let you make your own guess" as to the reasons for this.

Good Story for Digging

He declined to go further into the subject, but added:

"There's a good story for you if you dig it up. But you'll have to dig it up."

Asked if he felt "pretty good" about the situation, he replied with a broad smile:

"You'll find out."

Government officials never have revealed whether American warships have sunk any German submarines, but there have been numerous rumors to that effect.

Knox also expressed satisfaction with the Navy's vast shipbuilding program, asserting it is "continuing to beat all projected schedules."

5334 Vessels Ordered

He revealed that since January 1 the Navy has placed orders for a total of 5334 vessels of all types at a total cost of $7,351,497,905.

Meanwhile, an official Navy report to Congress said the United States destroyer Kearny battled a German submarine pack for nearly three hours before she was blasted by a torpedo which killed ten of her crew on the night of October 16-17.

The report was in the form of a letter from Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations, to Chairman David I. Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, who sought certain information on the incident.

Stark advised Walsh that the Kearny was on convoy duty and that "a number" of merchant ships were damaged "and some of them sunk" during the battle. He said that, although American vessels were in the convoy, "no United States flag merchant ship was sunk this time."

Fr. Donovan to Speak Before Laymen's Unit

The Rev. Vincent Donovan, O. P., of New York City, national director of the Catholic Thought Association, will address the First Friday luncheon of the Washington section, League of Laymen's Retreats, tomorrow at 12:30 p. m. at the Willard Hotel.

Father Donovan recently returned from an observation tour of England and Ireland with Dr. Everett R. Clinchy, president of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, and Rabbi Morris S. Lazaron, spiritual leader of the Baltimore Hebrew Congregation.

Two Armed Men Rob Truck Driver of $12.60

A truck driver stopped for a traffic light at Eighteenth and Q Streets Northwest, yesterday was held up and robbed of $12.60 by two armed men, he reported to police.

The driver, William McQueen, of 1723 New Jersey Avenue Northwest, employed by the Griffith Consumer's Coal Co., told police the men jumped on the running board and threatened him with revolvers. After taking the money, the bandits escaped on foot, he said.

Soldier, Clerk and Woman Kill Themselves Here in Day

Two young men and a young woman—a soldier, a Government clerk, and a housewife reported to have been separated from her husband — committed suicide in Washington yesterday, Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald reported.

FARMER

First of the deaths was reported to police by authorities at Walter Reed Hospital, where Private William C. Mangan, 27, died at 5:40 a. m. He was declared to have swallowed insect powder.

Mangan was discovered unconscious in a corridor of the north wing of the main building by Miss Louise Williams, a nurse. Police said two slips of paper scribbled by the soldier contained one word each—"sucker."

Hospital attaches said Mangan, an enlisted man and a native of Atlantic City, N. J., was serving his second enlistment in the Army, having joined originally in October, 1934. No one at the hospital could give any reason for his action. He was in charge of the hospital library.

Less than an hour after Mangan's death was reported, a doctor from Emergency Hospital pronounced Warren Price Farmer, 21, of 1328 Euclid Street Northwest, dead from the effects of inhaling illuminating gas.

The youth, an underclerk at the Civil Aeronautics Authority, was found with his head resting over the burners of the kitchen gas stove by Albert H. Rowe, a roomer at Farmer's home. Rowe called the Fire Rescue Squad, but efforts to revive the youth failed.

The boy's mother, Mrs. Ernestine Farmer, a night worker at the Government Printing Office, was notified by telephone. She was unable to give a reason for her son's action.

"He had a good job," Mrs. Farmer declared. "He did this for no apparent reason."

Chest Drive Speeded as Limit Nears

Encouraged by the more than 100 per cent of quota collected by the Metropolitan Unit of the Community Chest campaign, volunteer solicitors in Government departments and business firms are speeding up their work in an attempt to report a complete victory for the Chest at its final meeting next Monday.

The Federal Government Unit lacks 9.72 per cent of quota, or $82,250. Of the 930 Government divisions, about 280 have completed by 100 per cent their divisional quotas for the Chest.

Group Solicitation Unit is short 10.89 per cent of quota. More than $73,770 is needed from business firms and their employes in order to reach their $678,000 goal.

The District Government Unit lacks 17 per cent of quota, or about $2800.

Meanwhile, John A. Reilly, chairman of the "100 Per Cent Unit," sent a message to all volunteers reminding them that their job is not finished, no matter how high their percentage of achievement.

The Queen Elizabeth Chapter, Daughters of the British Empire, donated $50 to the Washington Community Chest at its monthly meeting Tuesday night at the Wardman Park Hotel. Mrs. Roy E. Lowe is president of the organization, whose membership is composed of women of British extraction.

Fordham Forced to Refuse Rose Bowl Bid

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

A legacy from the late John McGraw is the Giants' new manager, Mel Ott. The Little Napoleon of baseball, who piloted the Giants to ten pennants during his lifetime, never better demonstrated his baseball acumen than in his treatment of the 16-year-old schoolboy who has come to be Bill Terry's successor.

POVICH

Gruffness was a mild word for McGraw's usual dealings with the half-baked kids who came up to the Giants with letters of recommendation. McGraw all but chased Bucky Harris out of the Polo Grounds in 1917, when Harris sought a tryout. He didn't trifle much with kids. He knew the value of big league experience. But with little Mel Ott he was tolerant to a point that, for McGraw, was amazing.

Ott came to him as a lad who had been some shucks around the school lots of Gretna, La. In that spring of 1926, he had a tryout with the New Orleans team and had been turned away. Ott was catching for a lumber camp team owned by Harry Williams who traded on his longtime friendship with McGraw to send the lad to the Polo Grounds for a tryout despite his 16 years.

Ott said he was a catcher, but McGraw was interested chiefly in the funny but potent batting swing of the boy from the bayous, who lifted his right leg high in the air as he swung and crashed into the ball while standing on only one feet. He told Ott to throw away his catching mitt. "If you've got a future, it's in the outfield," said McGraw. Apparently McGraw thought he had a future, because he took Ott to training camp in the spring of 1927.

It was no immediate success story. McGraw put the boy into only 37 games that year. In the succeeding season, he played in 83. McGraw was showing an amazing patience with the boy. Among other things, he was keeping him out of the lineup against left-handed pitching. New York baseball writers asked him about that, and then it was that McGraw again displayed his wisdom. "This kid isn't hitting against left-handers, yet," he said, "because I don't want to ruin a boy who's going to be a great hitter. I don't want any of these slick left-handers fooling him with stuff he's never seen before, and giving him an inferiority complex. When he's ready to hit all kinds of pitching, he'll be in there all the time."

Approached Babe Ruth's Records

Ott learned to hit all kinds of pitching, as the records bear out. He was the only National Leaguer to approach Babe Ruth's home run records. They are still talking about a home run hit by the 168-pounder in Braves Field. Where he got his power is still an unanswered question. Washington fans know about that Ott power. It was his home run in the tenth inning of the fifth World Series game here in 1933 that won the series for the Giants.

The New York baseball press is already applauding Ott's selection as manager. Bill Terry was something less than popular with baseball writers from the outset, with his high independence of the press. His Saturday Evening Post story in which he lashed out at the injustices done him by baseball writers made the rift unbreachable. Terry accused the writers of taking sides against him in salary arguments with the Giants' owners early in his career. They resented his selection and his unavailability after baseball hours, and his refusal to disclose his private telephone number.

Terry could kiss off the baseball writers during his winning years of 1933, '36 and '37, but when his success faded thereafter he was an easy target. The demands that Terry get out gained in force, and when the Giants finished in the second division last season, Owner Horace Stoneham promised that he would take action. Terry's elevation to the general management has not entirely appeased his enemies, but they are settling for his removal from immediate direction of the club.

Case of Bucky Harris Recalled

Ott's appointment as manager, occurring as it did at a time when the outfielder was anticipating no such promotion, recalls Clark Griffith's selection of Bucky Harris to manage the Washington club in 1924. Harris was not as conspicuous a member of the playing ranks of the Nats, in fact, as Ott has been with the Giants. Stoneham relates that when he called Ott to his hotel in Jacksonville the other day, and told him he was to be the new manager of the Giants, Ott told him to "stop kidding." It took convincing.

Back in the winter of 1923-24, when Washington Second Baseman Bucky Harris was vacationing in Florida, he received a telephone call from Griffith. Over the telephone, he offered Harris the job as manager. The amazed Harris heard Griffith tell him "I've got to have your answer 'yes' or 'no' right away." Harris shouted a lusty yes into the phone only to discover that the connection was broken. For the moment he had the job in his lap and couldn't take it. He lived ten years in those next few minutes until he got another phone connection to Washington and all but blew off Griffith's ears with a gusty "I want that job."

Rams Closed Sugar Bowl Deal Earlier

New Yorkers Voted Lambert Trophy As the Outstanding Grid Team in East

By the United Press

New York, Dec. 3.—Fordham was officially recognized as football champion of the East tonight, but all the edge was taken off the good news when Ram spokesmen admitted for the first time that they were offered the Rose Bowl bid, but couldn't accept it because they had signed with the Sugar Bowl sponsors eight hours earlier.

Just a few minutes after the Rams were awarded the Lambert Trophy—which is emblematic of the Eastern title—Fordham Publicity Director Tom Deegan said Oregon State had tendered Fordham the Pasadena invitation at 8:30 Sunday morning. The Rams had closed their deal with New Orleans at 2 a. m. after waiting word from Corvallis, Oreg., most of Saturday night.

"The Oregon officials said they were very sorry that Fordham could not represent the East in the Rose Bowl," Deegan added. "Then the Beavers wished us the best of luck against Missouri in the Sugar Bowl."

Confirmed Rumors

Deegan did not amplify his brief statement but the announcement confirmed rumors that O. S. C. had negotiated with Fordham before awarding the coveted bid to the undefeated Blue Devils of Duke.

The awarding of the Lambert Trophy came as no surprise. The big cup was given Fordham despite a defeat by Pittsburgh. Navy, although beaten and tied, was ranked second over undefeated and untied Duquesne. The Lambert committee chose Boston College for the award last year when the Eagles finished a perfect season. Ratings are based on schedule strength and decisiveness of victories as well as games won and lost.

Rams Leave December 21

Meanwhile, Deegan said the Ram team would leave New York for the Sugar Bowl game on December 21 and arrive at camp in Bay St. Louis, Miss., on Monday, December 23 after a brief stopover in Atlanta. The Rams will encamp at St. Stanislaus School and will drill twice daily except on Christmas Day. The players will be given two holidays in New Orleans after the game and start back to New York January 3.

Sixty-four editors, sports writers and announcers were polled on the Lambert award. Out of the 51 who voted, 26 chose Fordham as the East's outstanding team while 16 ballots were cast for Navy to make the race the closest in the six-year history of the award. Duquesne, unbeaten and untied, placed third with seven, while Pennsylvania and Harvard polled one vote apiece.

Jimmy Dykes In Long Talk With Harris

Much Speculation At Minor League Meeting, But No Trading as Yet

By the Associated Press

Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 3.—Rumors rebounded through the crowded hotel lobbies today as the major league moguls tried to complete some sort of a trade to justify their presence at the convention of the minor leagues.

One of the hottest tidbits was that the Chicago Cubs might give Outfielder Hank Leiber to the New York Giants for a pitcher; another was that the St. Louis Cardinals might sell Outfielder Don Padgett to the Cubs; still another was that the Chicago White Sox would give Outfielder Mike Kreevich to the Washington Senators for Doc Cramer.

Undoubtedly there were some negotiations that were very close to being deals, but whether they might be closed before the magnates move to Chicago for the big league meetings next week was open to question.

This was especially true of the trade efforts of the White Sox. Manager Jimmy Dykes was in a long huddle with Bucky Harris, pilot of the Senators, today and also talked to Luke Sewell, of the St. Louis Browns. The latter confab was believed to concern Chicago's desire for Outfielder Chet Laabs in which case the bait would probably be one of the Sox' young catchers—George Dickey or Tom Turner.

Both Eager to Trade

The Sox were eager to make both trades, but became weary of the long wrangling and lack of action that has characterized the current meetings and disclosed that their entire delegation would board a train for home tomorrow.

The Cubs were trying to peddle Leiber and there was some possibility that the Giants, who had him originally for several seasons, might take him back.

Leiber did not get along with Bill Terry but since Mel Ott has been made New York's manager the prospects of the deal have improved. Ott has considerable respect for the big bomber's bat and might feel that he could get Leiber to work harder than Terry could.

Speculation over what pitcher the Giants might throw into such a swap was endless.

As for a deal on Padgett, the best evidence of such a prospect was the presence of the husky slugger here at the meetings. It was understood that General Manager Branch Rickey, of the Cardinals, had suggested that Padgett come here. He improved his sales value by showing up a trim 225 pounds, 15 pounds slimmer than last summer. He said he had taken off the weight by hunting.

Besides the Cubs, it was thought the Cincinnati Reds might still be interested in Padgett in spite of

Lions' Hockey Team Defeats New Haven, 7-3

By Jack Munhall

The Washington Lions proved their hockey class last night as they opened a promising bid for the Eastern section lead of the American League with a 7-3 rout over the New Haven Eagles, present pace setters.

In leading the Eagles from start to finish in a fast, well played match before 2974 paying fans at Uline's Arena, the Lions accomplished a couple of important things. First of all they put together their second straight victory for the first time this season, and secondly they helped Louis Trudel to the individual scoring lead of the circuit.

It was Trudel, a star last year with New Haven, who led the assault on his old teammates with three goals and two assists, bringing to 23 his total points for 14 matches.

Ousted from the scoring lead by Trudel's high-powered attack was Ken Kilrea, former Indianapolis ace who is now with the Detroit Red Wings. Kilrea has 21 points, while Adam Brown, of Indianapolis, is third with 19.

Outclassed was the word for the Eagles, who were taking their eighth setback against seven victories and a tie in the torrid Eastern section race, in which there is no standout team.

Washington, continuing the high scoring pace begun Sunday in its 9-2 trouncing of Pittsburgh, pulled to within one point of a tie for second place with Springfield and in the next four days the Lions will be given a grand opportunity for vaulting to the top. Tonight they invade Buffalo and Saturday they'll be in the hive of the Pittsburgh Hornets before returning here Sunday to meet Springfield.

Trudel, member of Chicago Black Hawks, Stanley Cup teams in 1933-34 and 1937-38, was in top form as he led his fast-breaking mates to a victory that never was in doubt after the first period. With the score tied at 2-2, Trudel established the Lions in a lead they didn't relinquish with a shot set up by Peggy O'Neil, another bright figure in the Lions' offense, and Stu Smith. O'Neil recorded two goals and two assists. Washington's

Sports World Goes to Bat Against a Disease

Washington, Dec. 3.—To battle a disease about which medical science knows so little that it has never been able to back one of the germs in a corner and grab it by the vest, another vast sports program will be launched throughout the country.

CONSIDINE

When and if infantile paralysis is ever licked, the sports world can take a bow, and we don't especially mean the sports world of the headliner. A lot of guys named Joe were the beneficiaries of the paralysis work last year, and they will be again this year, when an increase in the size of the program might well produce a million dollars for this noble work.

You may ask why the Government doesn't raise the money. The fact remains that it doesn't, except in a routine public health appropriation; and somebody must. With cruel perversity, infantile paralysis has made gains over the past few years. It will crop out in one city, won't touch the city next to it, yet will hit a town a thousand miles away on the same day, leaving in its wake a terrible percentage of cripples. It's clumsy hand reached far into the sports field this year, causing woe and game cancellations.

President Roosevelt told us here yesterday, when he received a group of State chairman of the Birthday Ball from all over the country, that there had been a tendency in some quarters to scoff at the small number of infantile paralytics, as compared with the number of those suffering from heart trouble and other failings. He said it was a false premise to suppose that this work should not continue, for the number of men, women and children left helpless for life after an attack eventually becomes a tremendous public problem. He pointed out soberly that it was a crippling rather than a killing disease.

The President Backs a Worthy Program

The President himself is one who fought his way back to health, but only because he had at his command facilities fit to restore him and which to this day keep him fit and healthy, though he is under tremendous strain. No matter how busy he is, he still gets in his daily swim and a bruising rubdown that has developed great strength in his arms, hands and shoulders. His desire to extend those aids and others to Americans who have no means, is the purpose behind the annual drive for funds at the time of his birthday anniversary.

Preliminary plans for the sports end of the annual program were formulated here yesterday when Mayor Cornelius Scully, of Pittsburgh, contacted "unbeaten, untied and uninvited" Duquesne to meet Santa Clara in San Francisco later this month. Clark Griffith, president of the Nats, indorsed an all-star rookie game, to be played in Miami during spring training by rookies from adjacent American and National League camps.

A Texas delegate has opened negotiations through Congress for a Texas-Navy football game. Ned Irish, the country's No. 1 basketball promoter, will stage a local tournament. Mike Jacobs, who heads the boxing promoters committee, is attempting to line up a card for Madison Square Garden for Friday, January 30, the President's Birthday, and will urge promoters throughout the country to run shows the same night for the benefit of this work.

But it will be sports people whose names never will appear on sports pages who'll provide the bulk of this work. For instance, 1500 sports editors are members of the sports committee, with 10,000 high school coaches and athletic directors. The bowling group, headed by Joe Falcaro, will contact millions of players—actually millions—for the extent of this sport is incredible.

College Grid Teams Boost Total Scoring

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 3.—Aided chiefly by two pieces of helpful legislation, the Nation's college football teams this season went on their biggest scoring spree since 1930.

The twentieth annual Associated Press analysis of scoring figures revealed today that 243 teams playing 1947 games averaged 14.51 points—slightly better than two touchdowns—per game. This was an increase of 1.13 points over 1940, and less than a point and a half under the 1930 peak of an even 16 points.

Sub Rule Helped

Highest-scoring of the six major geographical gridiron sections, just as it was a year ago, was the Southwest. But the biggest jump was noted in the Middle West, where the average scoring per game was 17.97 points compared to 14.94 in 1940. That increase boosted the Midwest into second place ahead of the South.

With the help of the unlimited substitution rule and an increase in forward passing inside the 20-yard line, the average total points for each of the 243 teams in the survey also showed a marked rise, from 110.71 a year ago to 116.25. This figure was the highest since 1935, when the average per team was 120.9 but the average per game only 13.24.

Each of the six sectors showed a rise in game average—the Southwest moving from 15.93 to 18.24, the South from 15.38 to 16.79; the far West from 11.93 to 14.36, to climb from fifth place to fourth; the East from 12.29 to 12.58, to drop a notch, and the Rocky Mountains from 11.18 to 12.33.

Duke Top Scorer

The East showed the lowest figure for team average for the season, 94.01 points, a drop of nearly a point and a half from 1940. The Southwest, on the other hand, rose from 150.44 to 172.67; the Midwest, from 127.52 to 150.05; the far West, from 106.80 to 124.07; the South, from 143.00 to 154.64, and the Rockies, from 93.17 to 97.58.

Of all the teams in the survey, Duke's undefeated and untied Blue Devils compiled the highest total

Record Number In Golden Gloves

While two examining physicians, five Boxing Commission inspectors and three representatives of the District Amateur Athletic Union labored overtime, over 100 novice boxers reported for weighing in and physical examinations last night at the District of Columbia Boxing Commission's offices in final preparation for the opening of the annual Golden Gloves Tournament at Uline's Arena tomorrow night at 8 o'clock.

The entry list was the largest in the history of Golden Gloves warfare, a total of 99 warriors, 27 over last year's previous high enrollment.

Three-Finger Brown, Old-Time Pitcher, Returns to Terre Haute

65-Year-Old Former Star Buys Interest In Club With Which He Started in 1901

By the Associated Press

Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 3.—Mordecai (Three-Finger) Brown, who started his baseball career with Terre Haute, of the Three-I League, in 1901 and who pitched the Chicago Cubs to 186 victories between 1904 and 1912, will be back in baseball next spring—with Terre Haute.

The big fellow, now 65, disclosed today he had acquired an interest in the Terre Haute club and would be actively associated in the club's operation. Terre Haute, a former member, returned to the league today in place of Moline, Ill.

"I'm just like a hunter who has lost his way in the North Woods," Brown said with a happy grin. "I've been wandering around in a circle for 40 years. Now I'm back where I started and the circle is complete."

Brown played for Cincinnati, St. Louis and Brooklyn after starring with the Cubs, returned to Chicago in 1915 and 1916, then went to Columbus in the American Association. Terre Haute, Indianapolis, and finally Terre Haute again before retiring from the game in 1[illegible].

He later became proprietor of a large service station in Terre Haute which he still operates.

Between 1906 and 1910, the great Cub pitcher participated in nine World Series games, winning five and losing four. His National League record was 239 wins against 130 defeats. His nickname came from a crippled right hand, on which his fore finger is missing.

Duke Leads Nation's Teams On Offense

By the Associated Press

Seattle, Dec. 3.—Bowl choices and undefeated teams generally did all right in this year's statistical chase over the gridiron yardage lines.

The Duke Devils, who play Oregon State in the Rose Bowl, concluded their season with the highest offensive average since Whizzer White led the 1937 Colorado team to a 375.2 yard per game average. Duke finished with 372.2.

Duke was second in rushing offensive, behind Missouri, which plays Fordham in the Sugar Bowl. The Missourians averaged 307.7 yards per game on the ground, the American Football Statistical Bureau reported.

Georgia Fourth

Georgia, which will play Texas Christian in the Orange Bowl, finished fourth in total offensive with a 351.8-yard average, with its final game against Georgia Tech still unreported. Fordham, the other Sugar Bowler, finished eighth in total offense with a 327-yard average.

Uninvited Duquesne was the total defensive leader, holding enemy ground and air efforts to 110.6 yards per game. The Iron Dukes also led in rushing defense, allowing but 56 ground yards per game.

Among Sun Bowl possibilities, Arizona, which plays undefeated but twice tied Utah Saturday, ranked second in total offense with a 360.2-yard average, principally because the Arizonans are the leading forward passing team with a 173.3-yard average. Utah ranks third in total offense at 354.6, so the Arizona-Utah affair should see plenty of yards compiled. Utah is third in rushing offense with 263.1.

Texas Tech, also talked of for the Sun Bowl, is second in total defense, allowing 126.3 yards per game, and fourth in rushing defense, allowing 63.2 yards. One game is unreported.

There's a queer coincidence in the passing figures of Texas A. and M.,

Ernie Dusek, Singh Wrestle At Turner's

A couple of slugging behemoths of the mat—Ernie Dusek, the wild Nebraskan, and Nanjo Singh, the "Cobra Clutch" king—will battle tonight at Turner's Arena in the feature bout. It's not the first meeting between the two grapplers, for only six weeks ago they clashed at the Arena and wound up in a one-hour stalemate.

Tonight they return for another one-hour time limit brawl, with both Dusek and Singh snorting out remarks that it'll be over early this time.

Singh's "cobra" is greatly respected by the Dusek. In their first session the Hindu clamped his powerful lock on Ernest no less than seven times, but in each instance Dusek cleverly maneuvered outside the ropes or got a break from Referee Casey Berger.

Sailor Sammy Simms, 225-pound, 6-foot-2 Norfolk, Va., speedboat tester who is acclaimed the champion of the Navy, will make his bow in a 30-minute battle against Herbie Freeman. Managing the big tar is Bill (Bluebeard) Lewis, ye old Richmond promoter.

Semiwindup honors will be turned over to Pat Fraley and Leo Numa, a couple of Coast boys. Numa once started in University of Washington's backfield.

Other bouts show George (K. O.) Koverly against Fred Grobmier and Milo Steinborn against Emil Dusek. First bout goes on at 8:45.

Minnesota Places 2 on Cunningham's Choice Grid Team

By Bill Cunningham

Minnesota's uncrowned national champions are awarded two places on the 1941 All-American team. Harvard has a representative for the first time since the halcyon days of Barry Wood, and eight other colleges representing every gridiron except the Pacific Northwest furnish the top riders of the wars just behind us. Virginia is represented with a brilliant native product, marking the first time in football history that the Old Dominion has produced a star that blazed as brightly as the best.

Undefeated and untied Duquesne is another new institution in the real inner circle.

It was a terrific year. More than 12,000 college players on more than 700 teams began the season approximately two months ago. Only four of any size concluded their schedules without a defeat. These were Minnesota, Duquesne, Duke and Notre Dame, and Notre Dame, although undefeated for the first time in 11 years, suffered the semidemerit of a scoreless tie with Army.

It was a big year, with the offense definitely ahead of the defense, with backs shining by dozens, but with standout linemen, and especially standout guards and ends unusually scarce.

There were few really great centers, no especial plentitude of tackles, but every section of the country had its platoon of great backs. Calling the best of them was both harder and easier than it usually is. It was harder because there were fewer standouts up forward and easier because coaches, scouts, sports writers and qualified critics contacted in all sections were almost unanimous concerning at least the top 22 names. Sorting them after that is a matter of personal judgment, but that judgment has the basis of personal observation in a great many cases and personal contact with coaches and authorities in the players' home sections, both their own coaches and, what's more

Midlands, South Dominate U. P.'s All-American Team

By Jack Guenther

United Press Sports Writer.

New York, Dec. 3.—A mobile line with the speed to belie its 202-pound average from end to end and a compact backfield which combines straight power with a blend of passing good enough to bewilder any type of defense—that's the United Press All-American football team for 1941.

It is a team chosen by sports editors and football writers who have seen every important player from one coast to the other and it is a team dominated by the midlands and the South. Between them these two sections provided nine players to one for the East and one for the Pacific Coast.

As well, it is a team without a standout star. The absence of another Harmon or Kimbrough was reflected in the voting, which was so close that every new sackful of ballots turned the trend a different way. Bill Dudley, the Nation's leading scorer, drew the greatest number of votes with 598, while Endicott Peabody 2d, led the linemen with 540.

Minnesota, generally considered the mythical national champion, was the only squad to place two men on the first team although Notre Dame and Michigan each placed one on the first team and another on the second—a line-up topped by the East. Here is the team by position:

END—Holt Rast, of Alabama, a thoroughly rounded player who calls his team's signals and rated by Frank Thomas as the "best end I ever have coached." He is comparatively light but he plays a slashing game on defense and ranks as one of the best blockers in the South. On the offensive he has scored only three touchdowns this year—because he is so modest he doesn't like to call his own signal—but one of them defeated Tulane.

END—Bob Dove, of Notre Dame, a willowy youth at his best when he

Tommy Thompson, Eagle Passer, Is Threat to Redskins

Ex-Tulsa U. Back Second To Isbell

Redskins Resume Workouts After Two Day Rest; Sam Baugh Leads All Punters

Sammy Baugh, who met his match for a day last Sunday, in Cecil Isbell's fine passing for the Green Bay Packers, will have his hands full again Sunday when the Philadelphia Eagles bring Tommy Thompson to town in the final game of the National Pro League season.

Thompson, who played halfback for Tulsa University through 1938 and at the same position for the Pittsburgh Steelers in 1939-40, is passing from the quarterback position in the Eagles' "T" formation, his first year at that spot.

The three-time all-Missouri Valley Conference back has the second best percentage in the league, trailing Isbell and leading Baugh by just one point. Thompson has attempted 138 compared to 168 by Baugh, completed 75 to Sammy's 91 for 844 yards. Each have completed seven touchdown passes, but Thompson has had eight fewer intercepted.

Ex-Richmond Star Third

The University of Richmond's star end of last year, Dick Humbert, is the third leading pass catcher of the league in the number of passes caught with 25, while Bob Krieger, a pro-league rookie from Dartmouth, is also among the league leaders.

Other than Thompson and the two ends the Eagles have only two players among the nine statistical department leaders of the entire league. Jack Banta, who went to the Eagles from the Redskins by the waiver route after the second game of the season, is the fifth leading punter, with a 45-yard average for nine boots. Len Barnum has booted two field goals, one for 43 yards.

Sammy Baugh looms as the only Redskin offensive leader for the season. The Texan is just shy of averaging 50 yards per kick for 28 punts, the longest of which traveled 75 yards against the Giants in the opening game of the season. It is a season record.

Baugh Second

Baugh is second in passing, Frank Filchock fifth in ball carrying and tenth in passing, Wayne Millner seventh and Bob McChesney eleventh in pass catching, and Bob Masterson fourth in field goal kicking with three.

Coach Ray Flaherty gave the boys an extra day off this week and they worked out for the first time since the Packer game yesterday morning at Griffith Stadium. They will work against the "T" formation for the remainder of the week.

Having played the Eagles once this season the Redskins are not working against any new offense. Flaherty is fully aware of Thompson's ability as a passer and he also has respect for Jim Castiglia, the Georgetown University fullback who has developed into the leading ball carrier of the Philadalphians.

The Redskin rookies will draw the principal assignments against the Eagles as Flaherty wants a last look before attending the draft meeting and planning on replacements for next year.

The Redskins who do not live in Washington will leave the first part of the week for their homes. Flaherty will remain in town two or three days before leaving for the meeting in Chicago.

Lucille Young Leads Ladies' League Bowlers

Lucille Young paced Ice Palace into the Ladies' District League lead last night with a 374 set as the Chevy Chase quintet won all three from King Pin.

Lorraine Gulli had the only set over the 350 mark in the seven matches, a 377 which was Hi-Skor's big reason for a shutout over Convention Hall.

The other matches were all decided by 2-to-1 margins: Arcadia over Brookland; Lafyette over Rendezvous; Arlington over Clarendan; Red Circle over Spillway and Rosslyn over Del Ray.

Jake Powell Sold To Indianapolis

Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 3 (AP).—The Indianapolis Indians of the American Association tonight bought two players from Montreal and the International League—Outfielder Jake Powell, once of the New York Yankees, and Pitcher Steve Rachunok, who was one of the players Commissioner Kenesaw Landis freed from the Detroit Tigers a couple of years ago.

How to Figure Skate: Lesson VI

Norval Baptie Describes the Outside Forward Three—Lillian Tribby Is the Demonstrator

1. In the center of the semicircle Lillian Tribby, Chevy Chase Ice Palace instructress, is doing a right outside forward edge

2. Miss Tribby moves smoothly into the turn . . .

3. . . . and here is shown just after completing the turn, doing a right inside backward edge

By Norval Baptie

Skating the outside forward three turn: In skating there are various classes of turns, and the novice should first acquire facility in the ouside forward three's, practiced to a center. These are natural turns and the curve after the turn is a natural continuation of the curve before the turn; for this reason it is the easiest to acquire.

All the various forward turns are made slightly toward the front part of the skate and all the back turns toward the heel of the skate. The outside forward three comprises a forward outside half circle, the turn and a back inside half circle, the turn and a back inside half circle, all skated on one foot. The skater commences the right outside edge forward for the three in the same manner as when skating the outside forward edge to an eight form, and from the beginning the arms and shoulders rotate with the curve, but keeps the balance foot (with open hip) in the back, as shown in the above photo, No. 1.

In executing the turn to the inside backward edge the balance foot has been lowered close to the heel of the skating foot, and at the moment of the turn the head, arms and shoulders should rotate to the left of the body, completing the turn of the skate so the unemployed shoulder (left), arm, foot and hip are directly over the tracing or print. The balance foot has now moved away from the skating foot with toe pointed out, as in Photo No. 3.

Martha Heflin Is Clarendon Pin Leader

Martha Heflin, of Emma Lee's Beauty Salon, was the best pins-woman in the Ladies' Major League at Clarendon with her totals of 135-342 to lead a three-game win over the C. & P. Clerks. Rite-Way Contractors garnered the team laurels with totals of 550-1585.

AIR CORPS

The Air Corps League at Northeast Temple was led by E. Danneman, of the Cruisers quintet, when he chalked up a record 143 single and 401 set, the latter also a season high. The Cruisers team, sparked by Danneman's fine bowling, also wrote new records in the book for teams when they totaled 577-1590.

OASI LEAGUE

Grover Sheppard, Recovery, topped the OASI League at the Ice Palace when he banged out totals of 141-373 to help win two games from Mechanical and post high team set of 1564. Adjudication No. 6 rolled a 545 game to lead for the night, and Administration No. 9 won three in a row from Coverage.

PREMIER CAB LEAGUE

Johnny Ressa, District League star, took the spotlight in Premier Cab League at Petworth when he posted highs of 149-392 for his Burlington boys. The Potomac team took the highs for quintets with a 583 game and 1605 set, to help win all three from Eighth & East Capitol, while the Cavaliers went into the lead-off spot with a sweep over Tilden.

SILVER SPRING

Armand Cyr, Georgia Tavern, and Johnny Burger, Elms Builders, topped the American League at Silver Spring with respective totals of 169 and 399 with the first named team taking three from Willis Builders and totaling 654 for a season record game as the Elms boys won high set with a 1791 total. The State Loan team whitewashed Cornelius Printing.

MD.-D.C. LADIES

Alma Mehler's 140 game for the Kopy Kats and Doris Leizear's 349 set for the Howard Hairdressers topped the Maryland-District Ladies League at Silver Spring but Sandford's won the odd game from the Howard girls when they posted team highs of 569-1586.

LUTHERAN

Lou Hoover, St. Paul No. 1, topped the Lutheran Men's League at Arcadia for game with his 149 total while Frank Pietiela, Luther Place, boosted his team to highs of 584-1673 with his own highs set of 382.

NAVY YARD

A record 165 game by Ernest Cole of Optical No. 1 and Harry Mertz's 403 set for Tool No. 1 led the Navy Yard League at Fort Davis with both teams [illegible] in the highs for the play; the former totaling 627 for h[illegible]me and the letter 1725 for top set.

HEBREW

Jack Schwartz, Stevens All Stars, with 159-404 and scores of 164-396 by Abe Roffeld, York Liquors, topped the Hebrew League at Penn Recreation with the former team taking two from the York boys, the league leaders. Nathan Freishtat's 124-345 sparked a three game win by Rosenblatt's over the Jewelers and Julie Singer's 139-381 for Youdie's Men's Shop led to the odd game over Milton's Service, the team also posting high team game of 625 while a 1789 score won the set honors for the Stevens quintet.

Three Games Listed For Soccermen Sunday

The Washington Soccer League will hold forth on three fronts Sunday when Marlboro, leaders last year, battles the current favorite, Regal Clothiers, on the Gonzaga Field, Washington British meets Sandy Spring at Rosedale and Maryland Sports Club faces Waldorf at Benning. All games are at 2:30 p. m.

Eagles, Lions Appear Ready To Top Leagues

Now that we've seen all of the Eastern Amateur League teams in action, we'll string along with the Washington Eagles to retain their title, after a close fight with Johnstown, Boston and possibly New York . . . Without appearing too much of a "homer," we'd also like to point out that the Washington Lions should have a lot to say in the settling of Eastern Division title honors in the American League . . . The eastern section seems much weaker this year than the western section where Cleveland, Hershey and Indianapolis so far appear the top three clubs of the whole circuit.

Why some referees, such as Mel Harwood, of the EAHL, call the fouls too closely to suit some fans, can be appreciated after seeing the fight that followed last Tuesday's match between the Eagles and the Atlantic City Sea Gulls here . . . Appeared to us as if Referee Fred Stevenson might have forestalled that riot if he had cracked down on the players during the match or before Burrage was slashed . . . Whenever the referee allows one team to get away with clear and deliberate fouls, then he is inviting the other . . . Thus are born the wild mass fights, and cruel high sticking and tripping.

In Springfield of the American League all Sunday matches must be halted promptly at 11 p. m., and the team having the most points is declared the winner, regardless of whether the regulation period or overtime period has been completed. . . . Many people have asked about the salaries, etc., of the Eastern Amateur and the American Hockey League. . . . The Eastern Amateur is supposed to have a weekly salary maximum of $42.50, but, of course, it is impossible for league officials to enforce such a rule. . . . They have no way of knowing or proving—if they did suspect it—that a club is giving its players bonuses of cash or other gifts. . . . The American League's average salary is about one-third more than the Eastern Amateur's, with some of the American League's stars drawing down as much as $3000 for the four-month season. . . . The Washington Lions have several players in the $3000-per-year class and many more in the $2500 and $2000 brackets. JACK MUNHALL.

Hockey Eagles Meet Orioles

Colorful George Koivuniemi and bald-pated Frank Gresnick, early season favorites with the Washington Lions recently released to the Baltimore Orioles, will be included in the visiting line-up tomorrow night when the Washington Eagles entertain the Orioles in the second game of their fiery intercity ice hockey rivalry at Riverside Stadium at 8:30 o'clock.

Indications are that the largest crowd of the season thus far will turn out for this Eastern Hockey League natural which donates 10 per cent of its gross receipts to the Christmas toy fund.

Koivuniemi and Gresnick, recently reinstated as amateurs, and another new player signed by the Orioles last weekend will bring Baltimore up to full strength locally for the first time. These newcomers teamed with the Orioles in their best performance of the season last Sunday night as they turned back the Atlantic City Sea Gulls, twice conqueror of the Eagles, 8 to 5.

Wide open hockey as the cash customers like it will be featured by these high scoring teams tomorrow night. In their last meeting both team and individual scoring records were smashed as the Eagles outscored Baltimore, 14 to 7. On that occasion Ab McDougall, Oriole winger, set a new scoring mark for Riverside Stadium with five goals, while Kenny Ullyot turned in four goals and an assist and Len Burrage three goals and two assists for the champions.

The Orioles, strengthened by the acquisition of new players and confident of their ability to turn the tables, admittedly will be pointing for revenge tomorrow night. That holds particularly true in the case of Roy Roche, acrobatic 140-pound goalie, who has turned in some really fine net tending this season.

Touch-Football Standings Topped By Solicitors

Solicitor's Office heads Section 1 of the District Recreation touch-football standings with a clean record of five games won, one tied and none lost. Alien Registration No. 1 is second with two won, three tied and none lost. War Department Sabers have won two, lost three and tied two.

In Section 2, the Flyers head the list with three won, none lost and one deadlock over Civil Service with three won, none lost and two tied.

Sunday's games, all set for the Reflecting Pool fields, will be FBI against Alexandria Torpedoes, at 10 a. m.; Terrors versus Flyers on the No. 1 field and Navy Department versus Surplus Marketing on the No. 2 field, both at 11 a. m.

American Pro Court League List Approved

The Washington Brewers, tied with the Philadelphia Sphas for leadership in the American Professional Basketball League, yesterday received the official list of players for the five league teams.

Phil Rabin, member of last year's team, is still on the Washington roster, meaning that Coach Mack Posnack would have him available in the event he is able to play. Brewer players whose contracts have been approved by John J. O'Brien, league president, are Ben Kramer, Pete Berenson, Ben Goldfaden, Herman Knupple, Whitey Wilson, Georgie Slott, Moe Dublier, Nat Frankel, Irving Rizzi, and Jim Kiernan.

Six-foot-five Ed Sadowsky, who made the All-Tournament team in Chicago last year as a member of the National Champion Detroit Eagles, is named on the Wilmington Blue Bombers, who lost in the opener last week to the Brewers, 43-42, as is Chuck Reiser, outstanding pro player. The champion Sphas have their same team intact. The New York Jewels' team is composed of former N. Y. U., City College and Long Island U. stars.

The Brewers meanwhile are awaiting, with interest, the appearance of Tarzan Cooper and his Crescent shooters tomorrow at the Arena starting at 9 o'clock. Besides John Isaacs, who with Cooper played with the Renaissance, the Crescents boast of such colored experts as Len Badger, Ben Garrett, Johnny Wright and Bill Coffey.

Matty Begovich, former member of the St. John's wonder team, will referee the game.

Music of Russian Band Brings Sad News to Army Grid Rooters

Kuibyshev, Russia, Dec. 3.—Days after the United States Army-Navy football game, when Americans here still don't know the result, the band at a Kuibyshev hotel suddenly struck up a strangely familiar tune.

"What's that tune," asked Capt. Dick Park, former West Pointer.

"I'm afraid I recognize it," gasped Capt. Bob McCabe, also from the heights of the Hudson.

All listened intently. The tune the band was blaring was a Russianized version of Navy's "Anchors Aweigh."

Anxiously, the Army men asked the band leader, through an interpreter, whether he played the tune on inside information that Navy had won.

No, he didn't know the score. For that matter, he didn't know the name of the tune. Someone sent the music from Moscow, he said, so he played it.

(The Russian band was right: Navy won, 14 to 6.)

D. C. Women Golfers Install Officers Today

Members of thme District Women's Golf Association will install officers and hear the 1941 committee reports at the annual luncheon-meeting today at the Army War College, starting at 12:30 p. m.

Mrs. Walter L. Welble will be installed as president for a second term along with Vice President Mrs. Frank H. Kramer and Mrs. Dickinson Letts. Mrs. E. A. Swing and Mrs. Gorham Freer will go in for first terms as treasurer and secretary, espectively.

Ms. P. W. Rutledge, tournament chairman, has accepted 86 reservations for the luncheon at 12:30, while more than 100 are expected to attend the election and business meeting to follow. The annual event, scheduled the first Thursday in December, is being held at the War College for the first time.

McFarland Paces Lino Bowlers to Set Record

Claude McFarland led the Lino bowlers in smashing team record set of 1602 yesterday in The Washington Post League when he rolled 132-356. The Linos went into a three-way tie for top honors by beating Street Sales three games.

The last-place Proof team supplied the fireworks by taking a clean sweep from the Engravers, forcing the latter team into the three-way tie with Lino and Mailers.

The Mailers took three from Replates. Mason rolled a 336 set.

Cameron Is Named Captain of Middies' Eleven for 1942

Werner Is Awarded Navy Sword

Chewning and Blue Share Thompson Cup; Trophies to Be Given Eve of Graduation

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 3.—Navy's 1942 football eleven will be captained by Alan R. Cameron, a sophomore fullback of San Gabriel, Calif., Naval Academy athletic officials announced today.

They also said Sherry Werner of Reading, Pa., an outstanding football and baseball player, would receive the Navy Athletic Association sword for personal excellence in athletics and that the Col. Robert M. Thompson trophy cup would go to Bill Chewning of Richmond, Va., and Don Blue of Wichita, Kan. for their promotion of academy athletics.

Election of a backfield man to lead the 1942 gridiron team broke a custom established in 1928. Since that time Navy captains have been linemen. This year's captain was Bob Froude, an end, of San Bernardino, Calif.

Cameron, a strong, rugged ball carrier, weighs 185 pounds and is 6 feet tall. He played in every varsity game this fall and will receive an "N" star for participating in the recent 14-6 victory over Army.

The new captain was a member of the 1939 plebe gridiron team and last year's varsity but because of academic difficulties was turned back from the class of 1943 to the class of 1944.

Fastest Lineman

The football team's new manager is Howard W. Dawson, of Marked Tree, Ark.

The Navy Athletic Association sword and the Thompson cup will be awarded December 18, the eve of the graduation of Werner, Chewning and Blue.

Werner, an ace punter and line bucker, played fullback on Navy's second team this fall. He won three "N" stars in football and major awards in 1940 and 1941 as a first baseman on the baseball nine.

Chewning and Blue will be the first two midshipmen to share the Thompson Cup since 1935, when it was jointly awarded to W. C. Clark and R. E. Dornin.

Chewning, a winner of three "N" stars in football, was one of the academy's outstanding tackles and is a candidate for All-America honors. He was the fastest lineman on the squad.

Blue was a regular welterweight on the 1940 and 1941 wrestling teams and was awarded "N" stars as a shortstop during the past two baseball seasons. He also was an outstanding member of the junior varsity football eleven.

Greenkeepers Elect Officers Monday

The Midatlantic Association of Greenkeepers will elect officers for the 1942 season Monday night, December 8, at J. S. Connolly's, 4715 Miller Avenue, Bethesda.

Connolly, proprietor of a greenkeeping supplies business at that address and owner of the Fairfax Country Club, will be host to dinner at 5:30 p. m. and the meeting at 7 o'clock.

Frick Predicts Critical Period For Baseball

By the Associated Press

Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 3.—Ford C. Frick, president of the National League, predicted tonight that professional baseball would face critical difficulties in the next six months.

"Baseball in the next six months will face as stern a test as at any time in its 100-year history," he told a gathering of the National Federation of Baseball Writers. "Certainly the Army draft will catch up with us. We now have priorities on Australian wool, horsehide and other materials. We may be playing with willow baseballs before we get through.

"During the next six months and the next year we must work with our eyes open and our heads up. All forms of athletic competion in this country will be affected."

Frick, a former sports writer, urged members of the federation to keep faith with their readers, and added:

"Unless what you write is fair, is accurate, and is truthful, you are not doing so. Remember, your closest readers are youngsters of 10, 12 and 16 years, who believe it's the gospel truth because you write it. You must recognize that responsibility. Ridicule for the sake of a funny phrase, comedy at the expense of somebody's pride, never pays."

North Adds Four Players for Game With South Dec. 27

By the Associated Press

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 3.—Four additional players, one from undefeated Duquesne and three from the Midwest, were added today to the Northern squad which will compete in the fourth all-star Blue and Gray game here December 27.

Acceptances were announced by the Blue and Gray Association from George Gonda, Duquesne fullback; Jim Rimble, Indiana tackle; Ed Lechnor, Minnesota tackle, and Bill Friedland, Michigan State end.

Today's additions brought to 16 the number chosen by the Blue coaches, Lynn Waldorf and Bert Ingwersen, of Northwestern, and Carl Snavely, of Cornell. They plan to complete selections this week.

The Southern squad, meanwhile, had its full 22-member quota.

Rosslyn Pin Team Scores In D. C. League

Rosslyn, by winning two games from Penn Recreation, picked up a game on the leading Arlington Aces last night in the Men's District League and now is but two games out of first place. Sparked by Brad Mandley's 155 single and high set for the night of 439, the Rosslyn Racers won the first and last skirmishes and posted a set of 1837 to 1749 for the losers.

Arlington dropped the first two tilts to Oscar Hiser's Hyattsville hustlers with Wally Burton leading the winners with 140-393 and Warren Johnson tossing in 372 set.

Convention Hall, lost twice to Brookland with Abe Povich being high with a 370 set and George Allen next with 343.

Spillway, picked up a game on the leaders by taking the odd tilt from Del Ray. Ed Nash had high single of the night with 162, which he turned into a 423 set.

Arcadia, in taking three from the luckless Lafayette team, jumped up among the front runners. Young Al Cissell's 141-410 and Eddie Keith's 150-409 led the 1914 team high set. Georgetown went into a fourth place tie by taking the odd game from Lucky Strike. Dick Lee supplying the main punch with his 142-400 and ably aided by Milton Walker's 146-393. "Bub" Guethler was high for the Luckies with his 130-380.

The Bethesda boys pulled a surprise by posting top team game of the night, a fine 671, with Captain Frank Riley leading with 154-416 and Bob Miller next with 158-382. The Bethesdans, however, dropped the odd game to Hi-Skor, mainly because of Andy Gleeson's 148-404. The Ice Palace boys took two from King Pin with Johnny Ressa showing the way with 145-387 even though Bob Miciotto had 159-410 for the losers.

Paternoster, Blozis Not to Play In Shrine Game

Al Blozis and Angelo Paternoster, Georgetown University linemen, will not play in the East-West Shrine game, at San Francisco January 1, Coach Jack Hagerty announced yesterday. Blozis and Paternoster had been listed as players that Colgate's Andy Kerr, coach of the Eastern squad, would invite.

But Hagerty said that as of yesterday neither player actually had received an invitation and they would not accept if they did.

Belloise May Get Mamakos Fight Here

Steve Mamakos, local boy who fought two great fights against Middleweight Boxing Champion Tony Zale, will be sought as an opponent for Sailor Steve Belloise in the event Belloise defeats Phil Furr in their scheduled ten-round main event at Uline's Arena next Wednesday night.

Matchmaker John Attell was authority for this announcement yesterday following his return from New York, where he has been shopping for future big name bouts for Uline's.

Mamakos, who has enjoyed a long rest since campaigning in New York and Chicago rings, definitely plans a comeback to the ring wars after the New Year, and is convinced that he has a good chance of placing high in a division that recently has graduated such ranking boys as Billy Soose, Ken Overlin and Al Hostak to the light-heavyweight class.

Matt Twomey, manager of Mamakos, is convinced that Steve is one of the few legitimate middleweights worthy of being classed as an outstanding contender in that popular, wide-open division at this time, and predicts that the local Greek will come back stronger than ever following a six-month lay-off.

Twomey is also anxious to match his fighter with Tony Zale, who recently beat Georgie Abrams for the undisputed middleweight championship of the world. Twomey said yesterday that he plans to contact Zale's managers in order to get the fight for Washington. In two fights in Chicago the pair fought before full houses. Twomey also stated he is receptive to the Belloise match.

Mamakos was a principal in one of the best bouts in local boxing history last winter when he outpointed Ernie Vigh in one of the finest toe to toe exchanges within the memory of local fans. The Golden Greek made his reputation and crashed the big money, however, when he lost a hairline decision to Zale and came back in a return title bout to floor the champion in the fifth round of a return bout before losing.

The bell saved Zale on that occasion and Mamakos reportedly was enjoying a slight margin when Tony put over a fourteenth round knockout.

Attell, sensing a natural in the matching of the two Steves in the event Belloise comes through, will open negotiations with Twomey and hopes to report some headway shortly.

Zivic to Fight McCoy in Garden

New York, Dec. 3 (INS). Former Welterweight Champion Fritzie Zivic will replace the current champion, Red Cochrane, as an opponent for Young Kid McCoy, of Detroit, in a 10-round battle in Madison Square Garden December 12, Promoter Mike Jacobs announced today.

Cochrane notified Jacobs he needed more time for training.

D. C. Angler Hooks 41-Pound Kingfish

Special Dispatch to The Post

Clearwater, Fla., Dec. 3.—Mrs. John Farra, of Washington, D. C., who is visiting her parents, Col. and Mrs. E. K. Sterling, here, had the thrill of landing a 41-pound kingfish Friday to set a record catch for this season.

The catch took 25 minutes and the entire fishing party relinquished their rods and reels to cheer her on to victory.

Mrs. Farra had the fish iced and shipped west to her husband, Maj. John Farra, who is stationed at Fort Leavenworth, Kans. Seven other smaller kings were caught by the same party. The kingfish and other deep-sea fish are providing plenty of early season sport to visitors here this year.

Terrapin Five Relies Heavily On Sophomores

University of Maryland's starting basketball team this season will be four-fifths sophomores, if the tentative line-up may be taken as a criterion.

Mearle DuVall, letterman of 1939-40, who did not play last season due to an operation, appears to be the only nonsophomore likely to make the team. DuVall will play at one forward. At the other, as things stand now, is Tommy Mont. At the guards are Heckert Horn and Don Schuerholz, and at center is Ernie Travis.

What is more, the No. 6 player of the squad is also a sophomore, Bob James, who plays both guard and center. Irving Gordy, forward, and Bob Fetters, guard, both lettermen holdovers, are next in line. Then come Leib McDonald, another letter holder; Jack Brenner, Bob Knepley, Carlton Steiner, Eddie Baitz and Tom Murphy, all sophomores.

The squad lost its tallest candidate when Kenneth Daniels, a 6-foot 5-inch sophomore from Hagerstown who played end on the football team, decided to forego basketball and hit the schoolbooks.

American Net Duo Win in Chile Tennis

Santiago, Chile, Dec. 3 (AP).—Two of the United States' touring tennis team won matches in a special tournament today. Dorothy May Bundy defeated Pupy Osorio, 6—1, 6—1, and Don McNeill beat Tomas Facondi, 6—3, 6—1. They paired in the mixed doubles to conquer Efrain Gonzales and Loreta Lizana, 6—2, 6—3.

Red Wrack Wins Easily at Charles Town With Stretch Rush

Bletzacker Drives Home 5-to-1 Shot

Has Five-Length Margin in Feature; Aldridge, Clay Hill Pay $27 in Double

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 3.—Just as the Skyline Purse was developing into a thrilling horse race, Mrs. Mary Knieriem's Red Wrack came to the outside, circled the leaders and jogged off with the chief money. This son of By Pass II and Auburn finished five lengths in advance of J. L. Friedman's Imperial Impy and an additional two lengths in front of Capt. Ewart Johnston's Royal Business. The event, featuring the midweek program, was at 7 furlongs and Red Wrack turned in the excellent time of 1:24, only four-fifths of a second over the track record for the route held by Soldierette.

One of the best days experienced here during a December meeting, a warm sun and a springlike balm in the air served to lure 7000 fans to this 6-furlong track. After the crowd seemed undecided on a favorite, B. F. Christmas' Here Goes finally was installed the public choice. After Red Wrack had sealed the victory, his backers stepped up to the cashier windows to collect at the rate of $12.60 for each $2 wager.

Winner Rated Back

Jockey Martin Bletzacker refused to take part in a battle for first position that went on as the field dashed toward the clubhouse turn. Instead he rated Red Wrack while Imperial Impy, Vendor's Lien, Rough Time and Here Goes ran as a team at this stage. On the backstretch, Imperial Impy became a definite leader, shaking off Vender's Lien.

Rough Time then moved on to challenge but, after being guided to the outside, Red Wrack gathered momentum and broke up this duel by going to the front with a bold rush. From that point to the wire it was simply a case of how long would be Red Wrack's margin of victory. Imperial Impy closed well, however, and held Royal Business safe as far as second money was concerned.

Cheer Me Equals Record

A track record was equalled in the seventh race. B. F. Christmas' Cheer Me forged to the front at the start and stayed there, running the mile and a quarter in 2:05 3-5 to join Dun Lucky and Belle d'Armour which registered that time in previous efforts.

A small army of customers gathered in $27 in the daily double. J. E. Irvine's Aldridge won by a head in the third race while paying a $7.60 to complete the twin bet. Capt. Ewart Johnston's Clay Hill, a $4.60 shot, had paved the way for the combination.

†Mrs. C. L. Larkin-Mrs. J. W. Boteler entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TOP TRANSIT (entry), $3.60, $2.40, $2.20; PETE'S GOLD, $3.00, $2.20; MYRTLE M., $2.20.

TOP TRANSIT sprinted to the front of MYRTLE M., opened a long lead, but had to be roused to stave off PETE'S GOLD. The latter worked his way to contention on the outside, moved up menacingly in the stretch drive and closed with good energy. MYRTLE M., first away, was hard ridden and tired in the closing sixteenth. AFTER ORCHIDS, off sluggishly, was held safe after improving his position.

SECOND RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:07. Off at 2:09. Winner, E. Johnston's ch. g. (3), by Mud—Pretty Business. Trained by O. F. Kent. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:18⅘.

VANTRYST	(Wright)	109	2	8	8	8	8	8	3.60

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CLAY HILL, $4.20, $3.40, $2.40; CHIDE, $9.80, $4.80; GARDEN GAL, $3.20.

CLAY HILL came through on the inside to take command going to the backstretch, drew out gradually and was shaken up in the final stages. CHIDE was in the thick of forward contention from the start and held on gamely while under punishment. GARDEN GAL broke in a tangle and went evenly thereafter. WEB FOOT ran with the leaders on the outside in the early stages and weakened gradually after 3 furlongs.

THIRD RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:38. Off at 2:38½. Winner, J. E. Irvine's b. g. (4), by Playtime—Another Day. Trained by C. R. Ryan. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:26.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALDRIDGE, $7.60, $3.80, $2.80; McHENRY, $4.20, $3.00; WELSH LAD, $3.60.

ALDRIDGE was sent to contention early, alternated in setting and pressing the pace with McHENRY and closed under punishment. McHENRY saved ground, was placed to a hard drive in the stretch and fought it out with good courage. WELSH LAD was off poorly, came wide to improve his position and hung in the final stages. STORMINESS dropped out of it early and failed to rally.

Daily Double—CLAY HILL and ALDRIDGE Paid $27.00.

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:09½. Off at 3:10. Winner, V. S. McClintock's ch. g. (4), by Groucher—London Charm. Trained by R. Harris. Value to winner, $420; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:20.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ENGLE'S CHARM, $10.60, $5.20, $3.80; SARAN, $5.60, $3.80; ADOLF, $3.40.

ENGLE'S CHARM, first away, set a good pace, saved ground and was under a hard drive at the close. SARAN was impeded at the first turn, worked his way to contention and came willingly in the final test. ADOLF was a forward factor from the start and weakened in the final test. REMOLEE could not keep up after the opening quarter.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:37. Off at 3:37½. Winner, H. Little's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOOSEBERRY, $5.20, $4.00, $3.00; ALSELEDA, $11.40, $5.80; BAR SHIP, $4.40.

GOOSEBERRY, steadied in the early running, came out for racing room, responded to punishment and wore down ALSELEDA in the final drive. ALSELEDA went to the front at once, drew out and held on with good courage. BAR SHIP moved between horses to better his position, ducked to the inside when entering the stretch and hung in the final stages. ORINOCO rallied mildly.

SIXTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $800; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place easily. Went to post at 4:06. Off at 4:09. Winner, Mrs. Mary Knieriem's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RED WRACK, $12.60, $6.40, $4.20; IMPERIAL IMPY, $8.00, $4.20; ROYAL BUSINESS, $3.60.

RED WRACK, steadied for 3 furlongs, came wide to improve his position with a bold rush, took command leaving the backstretch and drew out to win handily. IMPERIAL IMPY lost ground early, shook off VENDOR'S LIEN and ROUGH TIME, but was no match for the winner. ROYAL BUSINESS was slow to begin, saved ground and closed with good energy. ROUGH TIME was a keen forward factor early and weakened in the final test.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place easily. Went to post at 4:37. Off at 4:38. Winner, B. F. Christmas' b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHEER ME, $4.60, $3.00, $2.40; CLAPAIR, $3.60, $2.80; ERIN'S GIRL, $3.60.

CHEER ME was sent to the front at once without being extended, just breezed along on the head end and won as her rider pleased. CLAPAIR was always within striking distance but was no match for the winner. ERIN'S GIRL lacked speed in the opening half and then came with good courage. YELLOW DRAGON forced the winner's pace for three-quarters and then faltered.

their avowal earlier this week that they had turned him down.

Padgett was not the only ball player, who came around to find which way the wind was blowing. Jimmy Foxx, the veteran first baseman of the Boston Red Sox, also was on hand—presumably to investigate reports he might be traded. However, the Red Sox made no attempts at deals and Manager Joe Cronin said he had nothing in mind for the near future. Manager Joe McCarthy of the New York Yankees, also disdained trade talks.

Paul Derringer and Elmer Riddle, of the Cincinnati Reds; Paul Waner, of the Boston Braves; Kirby Higbee and Hugh Casey, of Brooklyn, and Gerald Walker, of the Cleveland Indians, were among other major league players here today. Zeke Bonura, a former big league first baseman, more recently of the United States Army, was stationed prominently in the headquarters lobby.

Derringer signed a new contract today after a few minutes conference with General Manager Warren Giles.

Lions Defeat New Haven, 7-3

last five goals came in uninterrupted succession.

The game's scoring was opened at 4:55 of the first period as Leo Lamoureux, the Lions' surprisingly high scoring defenseman, shot a rapid-fire marker after a pass from George Mantha and Rod Lorrain.

New Haven tied it up at 11:31 as Joe Shack beat Goalie Paul Gauthier from close in after passes by Joe Catlin and Earl Robinson, their player-coach.

Shack's tying goal came at 10:11, but little more than a minute later Trudel, with his first goal, sent the Lions ahead for the second time. This one was a successful follow-up of a shot missed by O'Neil on a pass from Smith and the time was 11:21.

But Newhaven was in there battling at this juncture and at 14:52 Earl Roche deadlocked the count again, tallying on a great shot following an equally good, long pass from Don Wilson, who had taken the puck from George Patterson near the blue line and then laid it right on Roche's stick as he flew in for his shot.

Business Faces Period of Risk, Bankers Told

By the Associated Press

Hollywood Beach, Fla., Dec. 3.—America's investment bankers were told today that business must risk money to build new business if our economic system is to survive the impact of post-war conditions.

Reporting to the bankers' 30th annual convention, the association's industrial securities committee said that only by venturing capital to establish new industries could this Nation rehabilitate its peacetime economy.

Otherwise, said Albert H. Gordon of Kidder, Peabody and Co., New York, the committee chairman, "the country will eventually again be faced with the problems of economic stagnation, leading to further governmental regimentation, deficit financing and a complete breakdown of confidence in the capitalistic system."

Must Balance Taxes

To make the post-war transition a sound one, Gordon told the delegates that "it is essential that the tax structure be balanced . . . That nonessential Government expenditures be reduced in order that the accumulated deficit will not reach gigantic figures, that small business be preserved, that labor relations be improved and that the folly of world-wide tariff barriers be recognized."

Gordon's committee report touched heavily on this Government activity in finance. He reported that only about 33 per cent of industrial financing had been privately placed in 1941, in contrast to 36 per cent last year, 51 per cent in 1939 and 48 per cent in 1938.

This the committee attributed to the Federal Government's financing of the defense industrial program, asserting that four billion dollars of new plant construction was financed from Washington in the 15 months ending with September.

"The business man of 1941," Gordon said, "cannot espace the conviction that the seizure of additional powers by the present Government has become too habitual to be reversed readily after the expiration of the emergency."

U. S. 'Invasion' Cited

Gordon said the Government financed four billion dollars of new plant construction in the 15-month period ending Sept. 30, while in the first 10 months of 1941 private industrial financing was only 693 million dollars against 950 million dollars in the similar period of 1940.

"The acceleration of the Government's invasion of the normal functions of private enterprise during the emergency has been watched with growing anxiety by the business world," said the committee chairman.

Thus, he said, the investment banker is being "by-passed" and is receiving only a small fraction of the new plant expansion financing.

The problem also was discussed by Malcolm Muir, publisher of the magazine Newsweek, who called for the intelligent use of propaganda, "stressing the necessity for saving and thrift, the importance of paying one's bills and keeping out of debt, and of providing for the future through individual savings as against leaving it entirely to Government plans and programs."

Seamen Will Get $150 Bonuses on Trips to Britain

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 3 (AP).—One of the last obstacles to the dispatch of United States ships to belligerent ports has been settled with an agreement on war bonuses between the National Maritime Union and members of the American Merchant Marine Institute.

The agreement reached last night provided for a bonus of $125 for voyages to the Russian ports of Archangel and Murmansk and $150 for calls at ports in Britain and Eire. These payments would be in addition to the regular $80 a month paid for all deep-sea voyages.

A statement issued by the union said:

"The National Maritime Union and representatives of the companies having labor contracts with this body have speedily concluded these agreements in order that the lend-lease program and aid to Britain and Russia be expedited as much as possible.

"It is felt that a standard will be set for other operators in these areas, working under agreements with other seamen's unions."

A. T. & T. Reports Gain Of 102,100 Telephones

New York, Dec. 3 (AP).—American Telephone & Telegraph Co. today reported a gain of about 102,000 telephones in service in principal subsidiaries included in the Bell System during November, compared with an increase of 120,900 in the previous month and 90,800 in the like 1940 period.

The net gain for 11 months this year was 1,230,900 against 838,700 for the comparable 1940 period.

C. & N. W. Plans Issue

Chicago, Dec. 3 (AP).—Charles M. Thomson, trustee of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway Co., announced today the road would request bids on December 8 for equipment trust certificates totaling $3,800,000 to cover about 75 per cent of the cost of iron ore and boxcars. Total cost was estimated at more than $5,100,000.

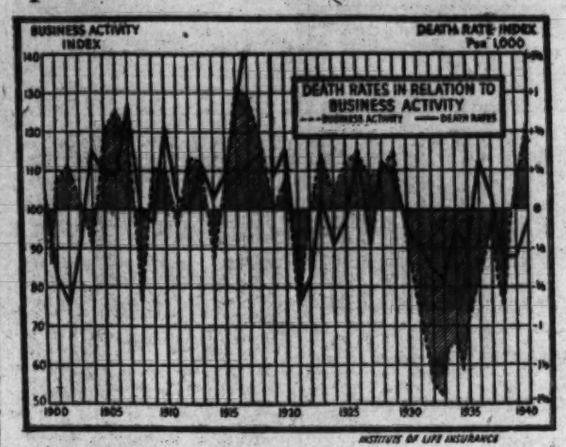
Business Boom Foreshadows Upturn in U. S. Death Rate



In the case of each of 12 dips in business activity and the 12 upswings during the past 40 years, the death index has similarly declined or increased within a year's time

The sharp increase in business activity this year as a result of the defense boom may foreshadow an upswing in national mortality rates, if the trend of deaths in relation to business activity repeats the experience of the booms and depressions in this country since 1900, the Institute of Life Insurance declared yesterday.

During the past 40 years there have been 12 periods of increasing mortality and 12 periods of relatively important increases in business activity. These upswings in the two fields have followed the same general pattern, the institute shows, in most cases the change coming in the same year in both fields.

In the early days after 1900, the change in trend of death rates usually trailed by a year or two the change in trend of business activity, but in most cases since 1910, the parellel has been even closer, often seeing the turn of both in the same year.

"While this is not a prediction of an increase in the death rate for the coming year, it is a warning signal that emphasizes the need for devoting increasing attention to nutrition, hygienics, medical check-ups and special precautions to prevent accidents," the institute stated.

Although the overall trend of mortality rates has been downward over the last 40 years, with current death rates nearly 40 per cent lower than the average of 1900, the year-by-year variations from this trend taken as normal have followed a pattern which strikingly parallels the trend of business activity.

"There is no positive explanation for this seeming phenomenon of relationship between business activity and mortality, though some life insurance medical men suggest that there may be two factors involved," the institute commented. "First, the increased tempo of living in good times may result in both increased accidens and increased illness from overexertion, overeating and overliving. Second, there may be some after effect from the malnutrition of depression periods."

Power Production Rebounds in Week

New York, Dec. 3 (AP).—The amount of electrical energy distributed by the electric light and power industry for the week ended November 29 rebounded 2.7 per cent to 3,293,415,000 kilowatt hours from 3,205,034,000 in the preceding week and gained 12.3 per cent over 2,931,877,000 in the comparable period a year ago, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

Despite the marked improvement following the holiday, the lift in output did not measure up to seasonal expectations, and the Associated Press index of electric power production declined to 147.8 from 149 the previous year. A year ago the figure was 135.9. The index, adjusted for seasonal and long-term trend, is based on 1929-30 production as 100.

New York Cotton

New York, Dec. 3 (AP).—Vigorous buying lifted cotton futures $1.25 to $1.65 a bale today.

Demand stemmed from four factors:

An anticipated advance in the ceiling price of cotton gray goods, which was expected in turn to result in larger sales of cloth.

A strong spot market in the South, where talk was heard that the supply situation might grow acute later this season.

Heavy mill consumption.

The sharp advance in the mid-November parity price.

Large purchases of futures were credited to Southern mill accounts and Wall Street commission houses. Hedging appeared in sizable volume, but exerted little pressure against the rising quotations.

40-Cent Dividend For Peoples Drug

Directors of Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., have declared a dividend of 40 cents a share on common stock, Treasurer W. H. Churchill announced yesterday. The dividend, same amount as in the three previous quarters this year, is payable December 29 to holders of record December 18.

Dividends declared this year total $1.60 as compared with $1.62½ last year, the slight difference being attributed to a change in stock. Declaration of the final dividend was delayed several weeks, an official said, in order to obtain a clearer picture of the earnings trend in the current quarter.

Inflation Certain, Loan League Told At Convention

Coral Gables, Fla., Dec. 3 (AP).—Roy Wenzlick, president of the Real Estate Analysts, Inc., of St. Louis, told the United States Savings & Loan League today that inflation is certain to come.

Wenzlick, addressing the thirty-ninth annual convention, said:

"As long as Washington refuses to put ceilings on wages and farm prices we cannot avoid inflation. It's possible to control inflation, but I'm betting we don't.

"As long as the farmers and labor have Congress intimidated, prices will continue to chase each other upward."

Wenzlick declared that every threatened strike has been forestalled by a wage increase.

Preston A. Delano, comptroller of the currency, said that in the present tumultuous period "it seems to me our greatest job is to fight pessimism."

"It is inconceivable," he added, "we will have anything but a democratic victory."

Insurance Firms Buy U. S. Bonds Heavily

New York, Dec. 3 (AP).—Life insurance company purchases of United States Government bonds far outweighed purchases of other securities in October, the Institute of Life Insurance disclosed today.

October acquisitions, the institute, said, totaled 455 million dollars of United States bonds and 198 million dollars of securities of business and industry.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Dec. 3 (AP).—Increased demand for cash from and flour helped to lift wheat futures prices here almost 2 cents a bushel today to the highest level since early October.

Strength of securities and cotton and a statement of Price Administrator Henderson predicting a further rise in the cost of living also were bullish factors.

Vultee Earns $1.70 a Share In 10 Months

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Dec. 3.—Registration of Vultee stock in connection with the Vultee-Consolidated Aircraft merger disclosed at the Securities and Exchange Commission office here that Vultee Aircraft Co. made $1,790,145 net profit in the first ten months of this year.

That amounted to $1.70 a share on the 1,052,168 common shares outstanding. Sales ran up to $21,743,342.

Consolidated Aircraft Corporation made $5,242,761 net profit in the first nine months of this year, or $4.08 each on the 1,284,244 outstanding shares. Sales boomed to $68,523,858.

Figures for corresponding periods last year were not available from either company.

Ultimate extent of merger operations, the registration indicated had not been decided beyond coordination of production.

Vultee will control the consolidated setup. Vultee will be under control of aviation corporation, which owns 752,168 shares of Vultee common, and will purchase an additional 150,000. Aviation corporation will thus own ⅝ of the Vultee common stock.

The registration covers 240,000 shares of cumulative preferred stock.

Proceeds of the sale will be used to purchase for $10,945,000 the 440,000 shares of Consolidated Aircraft stock held by Maj. R. H. Fleet, president of Consolidated, and others for whom he acts as agent.

The holdings of Maj. Fleet and his group, the commission said, constitute about 34 per cent of the outstanding Consolidated Aircraft Co. stock.

Purchase of the Consolidated stock will include the dividend of $2 a share payable December 7. Hence net price for the stock alone will be $10,065,000.

The registration of the convertible preferred carried with it a statement that 650,000 shares of common stock had been reserved for conversion.

A. C. & F. Net Skyrockets

New York, Dec. 3 (AP).—American Car and Foundry Co. reported today consolidated net earnings for the six months ended Oct. 31 were $4,810,521, equal to $6.34 a common share after preferred dividend requirements, compared with $823,655 or $2.85 a preferred share in the corresponding part of 1940.

Provision for Federal taxes in the 1941 half-year were $13,319,848, company President Charles J. Hardy reported to stockholders.

The company's backlog of orders on Oct. 31 totaled $186,443,749, of which 131 million dollars was termed "war work."

Nazi-Owned Bank In Guatemala Closes

Guatemala City, Guatemala, Dec. 3 (AP).—The richest German-owned concern in Central America, and Nottebohm Banking Co. and its subsidiaries, closed operations December 1 because of its inclusion in the American blacklist.

The company operated large banking and coffee interests throughout Guatemala and in other Central American countries.

Federal Taxes Near Maximum, Says Sen. George

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, said yesterday he was convinced that Federal taxes had reached near-maximum levels and that the cost of the defense program would have to be spread over two or more generations by borrowing which might boost the national debt to 150 billion dollars.

George said he believed a majority of the Senate Finance Committee, of which he is chairman, agreed with him that Federal taxes already were so high as to be only a little under the maximum amount that could be drained out of the national income "without tremendously weakening our whole economy."

While the Georgia Senator told reporters he was willing to support reasonable increases in levies and to make readjustments in rates, he declared the public ought to be informed that present defense outlays could only be financed by large-scale borrowing which would have to be paid back over a long period of years.

"We can't forsee the limit of the debt that is likely to be incurred before this defense program is completed," he said. "The national debt may go anywhere from 110 to 150 billion dollars and it will have to be amortized over the life of the present, the next and maybe the third generation.

"We are certainly far up the scale now of the revenue that may be realized from taxes."

While the Georgia Senator said there undoubtedly would be some increase in Federal revenues through the tapping of new sources, he indicated this was not likely to be anything like the $4,800,000,000 boost suggested to the House Ways and Means Committee recently by Treasury officials.

Nor, he added, was the Treasury's former goal of meeting two-thirds of expenditures by taxation and one-third by borrowing likely to be attained. More likely, George said, less than half of the money spent would be raised by immediate taxes.

He said he was informed that Federal expenditures for the calendar year beginning next January 1 probably would aggregate 36 billion dollars. For the same period, he said, tax receipts were not expected to exceed 16 billion dollars.

He did not rule out the possibility that some substantial reduction could be made in the approximately six billion dollars in ordinary Government expenditures contemplated during that time—a question now under study by a joint economy committee headed by Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia.

Congress Asked to Approve RFC Utility Purchases

Jesse Jones, federal loan administrator, asked the House banking committee yesterday to approve legislation to authorize 150 million dollars in Reconstruction Finance Corporation loans for purchase of utility property affected by Securities Commission orders.

He said the object was to offer financial aid to localities and co-operatives which want to acquire scattered properties ordered by the SEC to be divorced from affiliates or parent companies.

For example, Jones said, "Secretary Ickes asked us to assist in acquiring the Puget Sound property in the Bonneville Dam area."

"We want to be in a position to do that for anybody," Jones testified.

He said that the bill would permit the RFC to make a 30 million dollar loan to Seattle for the purchase of the Puget Sound Company.

After saying that "we might have to come back up here for more authority" if the new plan worked, Jones asserted:

"I don't want overall authority to lend all the money in the world."

Treasury Offers Record 1½ Billion Issue

The Treasury last night offered for sale to the investing public $1,500,000,000 of bonds in the largest single cash borrowing operation since the World War.

The bonds, going on sale today, will be one billion dollars of 2½ per cent bonds maturing between 1967 and 1972 and 500 million dollars of 2 per cent bonds maturing between 1951 and 1955.

These bonds will be of the usual type sold by the Treasury on large-scale financing, but the Treasury announced new rules designed to limit the subscriptions of investors to amounts that they reasonably can afford to buy and discourage speculation. Similar rules have been applied previously by the Federal Reserve banks as fiscal agents of the Treasury, but a new set of uniform rules was set up.

In spite of the near-record size of the financing, it represented only about the cost of one month's defense expenditure.

To encourage small investors to buy the bonds, the Treasury offered to supply in full subscriptions up to $5000 if the subscriber will wait 90 days to get the bonds. This delay is intended to prevent speculation through quick sale. Other subscribers will be sold a proportionate amount of the bonds they ask for, depending on how much the subscriptions exceed the offering.

Dividends and Earnings

Beatrice Creamery Co. declared an extra dividend of $1 a share in addition to the regular quarterly payment of 25 cents a share on the common stock. All dividends are payable January 2, 1942, to stockholders of record December 12.

Owens-Illinois Glass Co. voted an extra dividend of 50 cents a share on the 2,661,204 shares of stock outstanding, payable Dec. 29 to stockholders of record Dec. 13. The extra is in addition to the four, regular quarterly payments of 50 cents each paid this year, the last one Nov. 15. It caries to $2.50 per share the total payment this year as compared to $2 last year.

Burlington Mills Corporation (textiles) declared an extra dividend of 20 cents a share on the common stock, payable December 23 to holders of record December 8, bringing payments for the year to $1.50 a share against $1.25 a share in 1940.

South Penn Oil Co. declared an extra dividend of $1.25 and a regular dividend of 37½ cents. Both are payable December 22 to stockholders of record December 8. The dividends make a total of $2.75 a share paid for the year, against $2.50 for 1940.

Aluminum Goods Manufacturing Co. directors declared a dividend of 40 cents a share, payable December 20 to holders of record December 5, and a further dividend of 15 cents a share, payable April 1, 1942, to holders of record March 16, 1942. The December payment will bring 1941 disbursements to $1 a share, also the total disbursed in 1940.

Timken-Detroit Axle Co. directors voted a dividend of $1.25 a common share, making total 1941 payments $4.25 a share against $3.25 in 1940. The dividend is payable December 20 to holders of record December 10.

Merck & Co., manufacturing chemists, reported net income for the nine months ended September 30 of $2,439,868 after all charges including provision of $4,398,561 for income and excess profits taxes. This was equal after preferred dividend requirements to $2.23 a common share. Comparable figures were not available. For the full year 1940 the company earned $2,463,683, equal to $7.29 a share.

Pennsylvania Glass Sand Corporation and ubsidiaries reported net profit for the 12 months ended October 31 was $722,694, equal to $1.75 a common shore. For the year ended December 31, 1940, consolidated net profit was $808,837 or $1.97 a common share.

American Zinc, Lead and Smelting Co. and wholly-owned subsidiaries reported net profit for the September quarter was $54,129, equal to 79 cents a share on the $5 prior preferred, compared with $153,864 or 10 cents a common share in the September quarter of 1940.

Southern Pacific Transportation System and controlled affiliated companies, excluding the Southern Pacific Railroad of Mexico, reported net income for the ten months ended October 31 was $33,777,623, equal to $8.95 a share, compared with net income of $1,619,749 or 43 cents a share in the corresponding period of 1940. October net income was $6,292,552 against $3,467,928 in October of 1940.

Stocks Ignore Profit Taking, Push Upward

By Bernard S. O'Hara

Associated Press Financial Writer

New York, Dec. 3—Although irresolute at times the stock market today mustered enough late rallying power to record its second consecutive rise.

It had to plough through a good amount of profit selling to achieve at the finish a substantial number of gains ranging from fractions to around a point. In a few instances the advances ran to 2 or more points. Once more volume topped one million shares.

The urge to cash profits was heightened by the fact that Tuesday's upturn had been the sharpest since July 7 and the further fact that certain of the influences associated with the improvement in values were rated as possibly of transitory character.

Rails First to Slip

Some of the good feeling generated the previous day by the termination of the rail-wage dispute remained but the rails were one of the first group to slip a little in arrears after a generally higher opening. The steels, also prominent the day before, were given only mediocre support. Credit for keeping the recovery in motion went to an assortment of coppers, aircraft oils and industrial specialties in which bidding became fairly active near the end.

Helping to stimulate buying in the favored divisions were recent dividend actions and 1941 earnings forecasts. As general factors, the brighter advices from Russia and Libya again stirred favorable comment in speculative quarters but the foreign picture as a whole remained clouded by the Far-Eastern crisis.

The Associated Press 60-stock average recorded a net rise of .4 of a point at 39.8. Prior to Tuesday this index had registered no gain since Nov. 21. Dealings of 1,090,790 shares compared with 1,182,240 the day before.

Commodities Strong

Stocks closing well ahead included American Can, Dupont, Union Carbide, Johns-Manville, Eastman Kodak, Sperry, United Aircraft, Kennecott, American Smelting, Standard Oil (N. J.) and U. S. Rubber. Slightly down were Montgomery Ward, American Telephone, Southern Pacific, and Santa Fe.

Bonds were uneven and commodities generally higher. Chicago wheat had a final gain of ⅞ to 1½ cents a bushel and corn improved ⅛ to ¾. Hogs ranged to 15 cents up. Cotton futures moved up $1.25 to $1.65 a bale.

Edging higher in the curb were American Gas & Electric, Republic Aviation and Wright Hargreaves. Dipping a little were N. J. Zinc and Humble Oil. Transfers here were around 252,000 shares against 239,000 Tuesday.

Midlands and South Provide United Press' Choice Team

is picking the passes of Angelo Bertelli out of the air and sprinting for great gains through the enemy secondary. He started the drives which defeated Carnegie Tech and Northwestern and his work on the receiving end of the Irish aerial circus led to the routs of Arizona and Indiana. He has started every game for two years, although just a junior now.

TACKLE—Dick Wildung, of Minnesota, another junior who has been a regular starter for two years despite Bernie Bierman's well known aversion to unseasoned men. An almost unanimous choice as the top lineaman in the Big Ten and a boy whose mind is as alert as his legs. His diagnosis of enemy plays is virtually perfect, he can charge or float with equal ability, and is hailed as the equal of Ed Widseth—the Gopher great of 1935.

TACKLE—Ernie Blandin, of Tulane, the biggest man on the squad and one who actually combines speed with his 251 pounds. Seven different pro teams are dickering with him—the big reason being he is equally good on both offense and defense. His best showing was against Alabama, which could gain only 55 yards until he left the game. As for speed, he was fast enough to give Jimmy Nelson plenty of trouble all day.

GUARD—Endicott Peabody, of Harvard, the player whom Swede Larson said kept Navy from scoring all by himself. He isn't very big, but he was rated as the best lineman on the field no matter whom Harvard played. A perfect man for Dick Harlow's famed defensive traps, but a good blocker on the offensive as well. Harvard men don't usually turn professional, but Peabody probably could get a job with any team in the National League.

GUARD—Ray Frankowski, of Washington, a low-slung bulldog who is the heavyweight wrestling champion of the northern half of the Pacific Coast Conference. He is fast enough to guard against passes, recover fumbles and lead his mates down field under punts. One of the big defensive factors on the Washington team and is 'exceptionally hard to knock off his feet. His best game was played against Washington State.

CENTER—Darold Jenkins, of Missouri, a driving offensive center with a flair for down-field blocking which makes many of the Tigers' long runs possible. A superior student, inspirational leader, and the outstanding man in the Nebraska and Oklahoma games. He calls defensive signals, backs up the line, makes half the tackles and is one of the major reasons why Missouri was invited to the Sugar Bowl.

QUARTERBACK—Bill Dudley, of Virginia, one of the great offensive backs to rise from a small college. He averaged 6 yards a play on rushing, 8½ on passing and gained 2439 yards in nine games. Plunges, sprints, passes, punts, place-kicks and plays safety on defense. The Nation's high scorer with 134 points, threw 12 touchdown passes and averaged better than 50 per cent on completions. Directly responsible for Virginia's eight triumphs.

HALFBACK—Frank Sinkwich, of Georgia, who gained 1102 yards rushing to miss the all-time record by only 20 yards, and added 713 more by throwing 52 completed passes. Starred in every game although he played with a brace on his broken jaw most of the season and spent several weeks on liquid diets. A hard runner, he bounces into tacklers, knocks them away and keeps right on going. When he is stopped on the ground, he goes to the air with equal success—and no defense can hold him.

HALFBACK—Bruce Smith, of Minnesota, who, although hampered by injuries, finished fourth among the offensive men of the Big Ten. Sparked his team's only touchdown against Michigan, routed Iowa and Wisconsin and in general was the difference between a good Minnesota squad and an outstanding one. He averaged 105.2 yards per game although he played only one-half against Michigan and 5 minutes against Northwestern. Key man in the Gopher cut-back plays which were employed particularly for him.

FULLBACK—Bob Westfall, of Michigan, who can spin better than any fullback in America and through this trait laid the groundwork for many of Harmon's runs last year by keeping the defense bunched. He didn't play a single bad game in three years and is praised by Fritz Crisler as a fullback who can do everything a man of his position is supposed to. An excellent man on pass defense despite his lack of height, and plays halfback when the opposition has the ball.

Minister Describes Stirring Game—50 Request Final Score

Dubuque, Ia.—Dr. Max Strang, of the First Congregational Church, driving home a point in a sermon, related how the memory of a dead coach inspired the Lubbbock (Tex.) High School football team.

The sermon mounted toward a stirring climax with Lubbock trailing Waco, 7 to 6, at the half, but the minister forgot to give the final score.

Within an hour more than 50 parishioners telephoned Dr. Strang to learn how the game came out. (Lubbock won, 13 to 7).

Weather Man Is Bewildered, So's Weather

The Weather Man is a little bewildered at it all and no wonder. Its December and roses are budding, dogs and cats shedding instead of growing winter coats. There are blossoms in place of blizzards, with usually reliable air masses playing hide-and-go-seek all over the place.

The "dust-bowl" and the Eastern United States have switched positions this year, grumbles the forecaster. "The Middle West had a lot more rain than we have so far," he says. It is the driest fall since 1930 and quotes figures to back up his contention.

By the end of November, according to past-year performances, Washington should have had a rainfall of 2.37 inches, but last month only a mere .81 inch pattered down, he said. And it's been warm, too, as you may have noticed. The normal mean temperature here for November is 45 degrees, while last month in the District the thermometer averaged out 50.2 degrees.

The reason for this seasonal mixup, according to the weather man, is that "stagnation exists" in normal air movements. In other words, he says, during the fall of the year cold air movements move down from the polar regions bringing with it anti-freeze temperatures. However, this year something has gone askew in the meteorological mechanics. A southerly drift of warm air continues to bring balmy weather.

Although anything can happen now and Santa Claus may make his appearance in red swimming shorts, the weather man says he won't guess farther than Saturday. Today will continue cloudy and warm with summertime temperatures hitting around 63 degrees. The thermometer is expected to stay above normal with perhaps a little rain tomorrow or Saturday.

Oh, yes—he also thinks it might get a little colder by Saturday.

The Rugged Type

Be Yourself, Son! Here's A Few Tips

By Gladwin Hill.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Chicago, Dec. 3.—This week's gallery of rugged individualists, the five-star winners in the be-yourself sweepstakes:

The Rev. Benney Benson of Brooklyn—he proposed to fly to Germany to talk peace terms with Hitler.

A soldier at Camp Shelby, Miss., he got put in the guardhouse so often that he outfitted his room there with curtains and a rug.

A farmer in Sedan, Kans.—He walked into a seed store and ordered 72 beans, no more, no less.

A Kenansville, N. C., man—Angry at being sentenced to jail for destroying property, he pulled out a handful of razor blades, chewed them up and swallowed them.

Joseph Skorupski of Berlin, Conn.—Ordered to report for Army service, he told his draft board that he was "too busy"—and got an extension.

William H. Schofield of Forest Hills, N. Y.—He asked to be excused from jury duty on the ground that he did not believe in the jury system.

A Perry, N. Y., man—asked by a judge why he got drunk every weekend, he explained, "It's my hobby."

A man in St. Louis—undergoing a physical examination, he disclosed on his abdomen the tattoo: "Hello, doctor."

State Police Supt. Charley Pray, of Oregon—he gave away his uniform after eight years, explaining "I couldn't adjust myself to wearing it."

Contract Bridge

It would require 3,000,000,000,000,000,000 years — five quintillion — or more simply, five billion billion years to exhaust every possible combination of contract bridge hands, a bridge mathematician once computed. This was based on the assumption that ten billion contract bridge hands were dealt a year in the United States.

"Scientists have estimated that the age of the earth to date is about two billion years," our auditor explained. "Then our number is 2½ billion times the number of years since the earth broke off from the sun. It is an understatement to say the least, to call this a long time."

Maybe you feel like checking the figures, but for our part we're plain awestruck. Let us make a quick change to the tiny details of life and struggle with the problem of managing this hand:

1. Sitting South, you hold these cards:

♠ A 9 6 3
♡ Q 8 4 2
◇ A 7 6 5

The bidding has gone:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	?

What call do you make?

2. Sitting West, as dealer, you hold these cards:

♠ A K 7 3
♡ A 9 5 3 2

LEGAL NOTICES 4

THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED States for the District of Columbia. Catherine L. Weaver and others, 2101 Wisconsin Avenue, N.W., Washington, D. C., plaintiffs, vs. the unknown heirs at law, devisees, alienees, and assignees of the Reverend Stephen B. Balch, Charlotte Fields, James A. Masruder, Charles King, Daniel Renner, Daniel Bussard, Thomas Hyde, James Mosher, Jr., John T. Mason, John M. Gantt, James Cook, Arthur Shaaf, Roger Nelson, Ninian Masruder, Elisha M. Williams, Thomas Jennings, John M. Beatty, Charles A. Beatty and Thomas J. Beatty, all deceased, and Others, Addresses Unknown, defendants. Civil Action No. 13428. Order of publication. The object of this suit is to obtain a final decree declaring complete in fee simple by adverse possession the title of plaintiffs Catherine L. Weaver and Maurice E. Weaver, children and only heirs at law and devisees of Robert D. Weaver, deceased, to certain real estate the most of which is situate in Square 129 in that part of the District of Columbia formerly known as Beatty and Hawkins Addition to Georgetown and a moiety of which is situate in a tract of land contiguous thereto known in Colonial Days as "Pretty Prospect" and also as "Rock of Dunbarton," which real estate now constitutes a part of Square 1299, in said District, and is more fully described in the paragraphs next following designated by the reference numerals "1," "2," and "3," respectively, and the subparagraphs designated by the reference letters "a" and "b" indented under said paragraph "2," namely: 1. All of the land in said Square 129 (now 1299) in that part of the District of Columbia formerly known as Beatty and Hawkins Addition to Georgetown and in a tract of land contiguous thereto formerly known as "Pretty Prospect" embraced or included within the lines of what was formerly called Wilberforce Street, the said street as described in old deeds of record being approximately 25 feet in width and extending N.61°-2'E. from Wisconsin Avenue (formerly High Street, Continued) across the North boundary line of Lot 252, in said Square, for a distance of 128 feet to Congo Lane (a point at the Westerly end of the Southerly line of said Wilberforce Street measured along the East side of High Street, Continued, being 146 feet 8 inches from the Northwest corner of Lot 251; thence 20 feet across Congo Lane; thence 159 feet to the East line of Beatty and Hawkins Addition to Georgetown; thence 60 feet, more or less, to "Pretty Prospect," totaling approximately 359.50 feet for the entire length of Wilberforce Street, saving and except therefrom so much thereof as was acquired by the proceeding in this Court entitled, "Condemnation of Land for the Widening of Wisconsin Avenue" (Case No. 2638); and so much of the land in said Square as was embraced or included within the lines of what was formerly called Congo Lane by old deeds of record as lies to the East, North, and South of the following lines: (a) Easterly of and contiguous to the Easterly boundary lines of those parcels of land forming a part of Lot 253, in said Square, which parcels of land were formerly owned and used by Rebecca Weaver by her will dated March 23, 1897, and recorded in Will Book No. 45, at page 48, in the Office of the Register of Wills for said District; (b) Northerly of the Southerly boundary line of that parcel of land partitioned to Catherine L. Weaver and Maurice E. Weaver by Margaret R. Weaver et al., by deed of partition dated December 30, 1939, recorded in the Office of the Recorder of Deeds for said District in Liber No. 7428, at folio 293, the same being one of the land records of said District, the said Southerly boundary line being described in accordance with a plat of survey of said parcel recorded in Survey Book No. 133, at page 164, of the records of the Office of the Surveyor for said District, as a Beginning for the same at a peg on the Easterly line of Wisconsin Avenue distant S.33°37'30"E. 52.51 feet from the Northwest corner of Lot 231, in said Square, and running N.67°36'E. 234.70 feet to a peg; and (c) Southerly of the Southerly boundary lines of the lands conveyed to Theodore Barnes by Henry Weaver et ux., by deed dated June 29, 1870, recorded October 15, 1870, in Liber No. 626, at folio 462, of said land records, the said Southerly boundary lines being more particularly described in a quit-claim deed by Robert D. Weaver et al. to Bessie A. Barnes et al., dated June 21, 1921, recorded May 31, 1923, in Liber No. 626, at folio 462, of said land records, as the Southern boundary line of the first parcel of land described in and conveyed by the said deed from Henry Weaver et ux. to Theodore Barnes and to the Southern boundary line of the third parcel of land described in and conveyed by the same deed, and to a line running from the beginning point of the one line to the beginning point of the other line, which connecting line would be the Northerly boundary line of that part of Congo Lane involved herein, the said Congo Lane being approximately 20 feet in width and extending for its entire length S.33°41'E., as described in old deeds of record, parallel with High Street, Continued, points on the Westerly line of said lane measured along the Northerly lines of Lots 251 and 252 being 140 feet from the Easterly boundary line of High Street, Continued; it being intended and hereby declared that these descriptions include all of the lands within the lines of Wilberforce Street and Congo Lane (within the boundaries of the property of plaintiffs Catherine L. Weaver and Maurice E. Weaver derived by them from, under, and through their said father, Robert D. Weaver, deceased, and as included within the boundaries of the property formerly owned by the said Robert D. Weaver, and now owned by said plaintiffs), as indicated on a map or plat of a survey of the same entitled, "Plat of Survey, R. D. Weaver's property, East Side 32nd. Street, Extended, as Per Present Inclosures, Georgetown and Rockville Road," which said map was made by Henry B. Looker, Surveyor for the District of Columbia, on June 13, 1901, and a certified copy of which has been filed with the Complaint in this cause, as "Plaintiffs' Exhibit No. 1"; 2. Two parcels of land, the same being portions of Lot 252, in said Square 129 (now 1299), in that part of the District of Columbia formerly known as Beatty and Hawkins Addition to Georgetown, being the same parcels which were conveyed by Catherine Weaver et al. (the then heirs-at-law of said Joseph Weaver) to the said Robert D Weaver, by deed in fee, dated July 13, 1886, recorded July 13, 1886, in Liber No. 1190, at folio 354, the same being one of said land records, and the said parcels being more particularly described as follows: (a) The first parcel being Tract No. 1 conveyed by the aforesaid deed from Catherine Weaver et al. to Robert D. Weaver described as "A piece of ground in Beatty and Hawkins Addition to Georgetown, on High Street, Continued, beginning for the same at a point where Lot 252 begins on High Street, Continued, and running East 140 feet on Congo Lane; thence North with the line of said lane 32 feet; thence West to High Street, Continued; thence with the line of said street to the beginning", the said parcel also being the same land conveyed by William Quabbs to John Lipscomb, by deed in trust, dated April 4, 1811, recorded April 5, 1811, in Liber No. AA, at folio 6, the same being one of said land records; and (b) The second parcel being a part of Tract No. 2 conveyed by the aforesaid deed from Catherine Weaver et al. to Robert D. Weaver and described as "Beginning on the East side of High Street, Continued, at the end of 72 feet from the Southwest corner of said Lot 252 and running thence Northerly from and with the East side of High Street, Continued, 30 feet, thence Easterly 140 feet to Congo Lane, intersecting said lane at the end of 99 feet 6 inches from the Southwest intersection of Congo Lane with Wilberforce Street; thence Southerly with the West side of Congo Lane 30 feet; thence to the beginning", the said parcel also being the same land conveyed by Samuel Pauley to Andrew Pauley, by deed in fee, dated February 13, 1824, recorded on the same day in Liber No. WB 10, at folio 362, the same being one of said land records; saving and except from each of the aforesaid two parcels of land described in the preceding paragraphs designated by the reference letters "a" and "b" so much thereof as was acquired by the District of Columbia by the proceeding in this Court entitled "Condemnation of Land for the Widening of Wisconsin Avenue" (Case No. 2638); and 3. All that part of Lot 256, in said Square 129 (now 1299) in that part of the District of Columbia formerly known as Beatty and Hawkins Addition to Georgetown, conveyed by Erastus N. Chapin et ux. to Robert D. Weaver, by deed in fee, dated January 17, 1885, recorded January 23, 1885, in Liber No. 1109, at folio 381, the same being one of said land records, said part of said lot being described as follows: The Southerly part of Lot 256 in Beatty and Hawkins Addition to Georgetown fronting 135 feet on the East side of High Street, Continued, and running back from said High Street of the same width the whole depth of said lot, it being the same lands constituting Robert D. Weaver's Subdivision in said Square as recorded in Book No. 24, at page 25, in the Office of the Surveyor for said District; subject to conditions, easements, and rights-of-way of record, and saving and except therefrom so much thereof as was conveyed by the said Robert D. Weaver by the following two conveyances, to-wit: (1) Robert D. Weaver et ux. to the United States of America, and now occupied by the Naval Observatory, deed in fee, dated May 15, 1901, recorded July 3, 1901, in Liber No. 2573, at folio 462, the same being one of said land records; and (2) Robert D. Weaver et ux. to Catherine L. Weaver, deed in fee, dated November 28, 1908, recorded December 8, 1908, in Liber No. 3196, at folio 62, the same being one of said land records; and also saving and except therefrom so much thereof as was (3) acquired by the District of Columbia by the proceeding in this Court entitled, "Condemnation of Land for the Widening of Wisconsin Avenue" (Case No. 2638); A further object of this suit is to obtain a final decree declaring complete in fee simple by adverse possession the title of said plaintiff Catherine L. Weaver to the following described real estate, namely: Lot No. 299, in Robert D. Weaver's Subdivision of lots in Square 1299, in the District of Columbia, as per plat in Book 24, at page 25, of the records of the Office of the Surveyor for said District, improved by house and premises 2503 Wisconsin Avenue, with right of way over the South 10 feet front by depth thereof of Lot 298 of said subdivision for alley purposes, the said premises being a part of Lot 256 in what was formerly known as Beatty and Hawkins Addition to Georgetown, and being the same premises conveyed to the said Catherine L. Weaver by Robert D. Weaver, by deed dated November 28, 1908, recorded December 8, 1908, in Liber No. 3196, at folio 62, the same being one of the land records for said District saving and except therefrom so much thereof as was acquired by the District of Columbia by the proceedings in this Court entitled, "Condemnation of Lands for the Widening of Wisconsin Avenue" (Case No. 2638); A further object of this suit is to obtain a final decree removing clouds caused by the record to the title of said plaintiffs Catherine L. Weaver and Maurice E. Weaver to a part of Lot 252, in said Square, caused by the two following conveyances, viz: (1) George Riffle to James A. Masruder, deed of trust, dated December 13, 1820, recorded February 8, 1821, in Liber No. WB 1, at folio 216, the same being one of the land records for the District of Columbia, and (2) James A. Masruder, Trustee, to Charles King, deed in fee, dated November 4, 1822, recorded February 28, 1823, in Liber No. WB 6, at folio 487, the same also being one of said land records. A further object of this suit is to obtain a final decree removing clouds caused by the record to the title of plaintiffs Catherine L. Weaver, Maurice E. Weaver, Joseph W. Freeman, William Edmund Freeman, James Louis Freeman, Margaret Weaver, Joseph C. Weaver, and Henry E. Weaver, Jr., being all of the heirs-at-law of William M. Weaver, deceased, to a part of Lot 253, in said Square, caused by the two following conveyances, viz: Jacob Mounts, Collector of Taxes for the Corporation of Georgetown, to Daniel Renner and Daniel Bussard, tax deed, dated October 23, 1809, recorded December 14, 1809, in Liber No. X, at folio 289, the same also being one of said land records, and (2) Murray Barker to Thomas Hyde, mortgage deed, dated June 8, 1812, recorded July 21, 1812, in Liber No. AD, at folio 129, the same also being one of said land records. Plaintiffs claim abandonment of so-called Wilberforce Street and so much of so-called Congo Lane as is involved in this suit as streets, alleys, highways, or thoroughfares. On motion of the plaintiffs, by Conder C. Henry, their attorney, it is this 24th day of November, A. D. 1941, ordered that the following defendants: 1. The unknown heirs-at-law, devisees, alienees, and assignees of the Reverend Stephen B. Balch, John Lipscomb, William Quabbs (Squabbs), Charlotte Fields, James A. Grin and Bear It

By Lichty

"I suppose I'm a medical mystery—I've been to five doctors already and they can't find a thing wrong with me!"

Listen! with Glynn

Clinton Winant, brother of John G. Winant, United States Ambassador to England, has been appointed the Columbia Broadcasting System correspondent in Vichy, France, and you'll be hearing him over WJSV on the 8 a. m. and 6:45 p. m. "The World Today" programs.

Axis-Petain government negotiations for greater collaboration make the post an important assignment at the present moment in Columbia's globe-girdling news service.

Clinton Winant prepared for college at St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H.—the State which his brother, the Ambassador, served as Governor. He then attended Princeton University and, upon graduation, studied further at Columbus Law School.

He served overseas with distinction during the first World War, as a captain of infantry in the Eighteenth Division. At the close of the war, Winant decided to remain in Europe. He became a traveling investigator for prominent American industrial concerns which wanted detailed information on foreign patents offered for use in this country.

In recent years he has delved into the voluminous reports of the League of Nations in Geneva, striving to find the reasons for the breakdown of world peace machinery. The results were published in Switzerland as "Notes on World Unity." It should make good reading today!

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Kin Sin — BY MILTON CANIFF

NOW, CALM DOWN, BABY! YOU DIDN'T THINK I WOULD HAUL YOU IN HERE DURING A BLACKOUT DRILL, ASK YOU TO GIVE ME FLYING SCHEDULES ON GOLD SHIPMENTS FROM CHUNGKING, AND ALL THAT, JUST AS A FAVOR, DID YOU?
I'M NOT THINKIN' ANYTHING AT ALL! I'M JUST IGNORING YOU, MR. SAMMY THE TAPPER—OR WHATEVER YOUR NAME IS!
YOU'LL THINK ABOUT THIS, SISTER! RECOGNIZE THE PHOTOSTAT SIGNATURE?
WHY THAT'S DILLON—MY BRO—I'M NOT SAYIN' ANOTHER WORD!
HEH! OUR LITTLE DOUBLE SPACE QUEEN IS GETTIN' FROSTY! TAKE A GANDER AT WHAT'S ABOVE THE JOHN HANCOCK...
WHY—IT'S A CONFESSION, SIGNED BY MY BROTHER—SAYING HE STOLE MONEY FROM HIS FIRM IN INDIA! OH, GLORY! I—I DON'T BELIEVE IT!
IF IT MAKES YOU THAT PALE—YOU DO BELIEVE IT! NOW, I GUESS WE CAN TALK BUSINESS, EH, CHICKEN?

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — BY DALE ALLEN

PARDON ME FOR BEING FOOLISH, MISS VARDEN—BUT IT SOUNDED JUST LIKE YOU SAID YOU WERE IN LOVE WITH THAT KANE YAP!
I STARTED OUT TO MAKE A CHUMP OF HIM—BUT THE GAG BACKFIRED, I GUESS!
ANGEL! BE YOURSELF! YOU'RE A BIG STAR! HE'S A HAYSEED EDITOR!
HE'S—DIFFERENT, GABE!
DIFFERENT! SURE! THEY'VE ALL BEEN DIFFERENT!... THAT JOCKEY AT SANTA ANITA! THAT RENO COWBOY! AND THE WELTER-WEIGHT PUG...!
THOSE WERE ONLY PROLOGUES, GABE! THIS IS THE FEATURE ATTRACTION!
TOMMY'S SWEET—AND HE'S GOT TALENT! I'M GOING TO TAKE HIM BACK TO HOLLYWOOD AND MAKE A SCRIPT WRITER OUT OF HIM!
THAT'LL BE GREAT! ...TILL YOU GET TIRED OF HIM! ANGEL, DEAR... WHAT IS THE FEMININE OF "RAT"?

MICKEY FINN — On Record! — BY LANK LEONARD

THAT'S RIGHT, MICHAEL! I KNOW IT SOUNDS IMPOSSIBLE—BUT I SAW THE TELEGRAM MYSELF!
WHERE IS HE NOW?
YOU SHOULD KNOW WHERE HE'D BE—AND YOU'D BETTER GO DOWN AFTER HIM—HE'LL HAVE TO REPORT TO THE BOARD IN THE MORNING!
AND GENNELMEN—I WANT TO GO ON RECORD RIGHT NOW—I'LL MAKE MY OWN DECISIONS—AN' STICK TO 'EM! I'VE NEVER HAD TO LEAN ON ANYBODY FOR SUPPORT—AND NEVER WILL!
ALL RIGHT, UNCLE PHIL! —ONE MORE STEP!

MR. AND MRS. — A Mean Trick to Play — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL and ELLISON HOOVER

SEE WHAT I FOUND! BILL-FOLD SOMEBODY ONCE GAVE ME FOR CHRISTMAS. JUST AS GOOD AS NEW WELL, AND WHAT OF IT?
BE ONE LESS PRESENT TO BUY THIS YEAR. WHO CAN I GIVE IT TO?
I DON'T KNOW. LET ME SEE IT
YOU DIDN'T EXAMINE IT VERY CAREFULLY
NO? WHY? WHAT'S WRONG?
NOTHING, ONLY HERE ARE YOUR INITIALS, J. G., ON THE INSIDE
CONFOUND IT, WHY DO PEOPLE SPOIL CHRISTMAS PRESENTS THAT WAY!

DIXIE DUGAN — "Headed for a Precipice" — BY J. P. McEVOY AND H. J. STRIEBEL

DIXIE ACCIDENTALLY TOOK OFF!!
OOPS!
I HOPE SHE TAKES A TUMBLE NOW BEFORE IT'S TOO LATE!
TOO LATE?!!
YEAH! THERE'S A 3000 FOOT DROP OVER A PRECIPICE SHE'S HEADING FOR!
I'LL TRY TO HEAD HER OFF!
OH GEE—PLEASE HURRY!

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — "Pick-Packet" — BY FRANK MARTINEK

SOMEONE COMING! IF HE REPORTS ME LOITERING OUTSIDE THE CAPTAIN'S QUARTERS..!!
HI, MATE. BEAR A HAND HERE, WILL YOU?
UH-SURE, WH-WHAT'S ALL THIS STUFF, BUDDY?
PERSONNEL RECORDS OF THE SHIPS TURRET CREWS. IT'S A RUSH ORDER FROM THE CAPTAIN PERSONNEL RECORDS?? TURRET CREWS?
JUST A MINUTE—I'M—ER-SORTING 'EM FOR YOU
NEVER MIND THAT. JUST LOAD ME UP QUICK
OKAY, PAL, COMING UP. EVERYTHING'S UNDER CONTROL

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — BY SAUNDERS AND WOGGON

UGH! EVER'BODY LOOK AT MESSAGE THEN ACT LIKE HE EATUM LOCO WEED! WAHOO GONNA GET MAD PRETTY SOON! HERE, CINDY LOU!—READ!
V-VERY WELL, CHIEF—IF THAT'S WHAT YOU (SOB)—WANT!
THE TELEGRAM IS FROM YOUR SWEETHEART, MINNIE-HA-CHA—IT SAYS: "STEVE AND I ON OUR WAY TO HIS PARENTS' WINTER HOME AT MOON VALLEY—STOP—"
"WILL BE—MARRIED—THERE UPON ARRIVAL—STOP—"
"P-PLEASE FORGIVE US BOTH—!"
STOP!

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

YOU LITTLE DOUBLE-CROSSER! TO THINK I WAS CHUMP ENOUGH TO MAKE YOU AN OFFER ANY CLEVER WOMAN WOULD HAVE JUMPED AT!
BUT I HAVE DONE NOTHING! YOU CAN SEE KING GLEEPS SOUNDLY—AND HE—HE WILL LEAVE TOMORROW, HATING ME! I-I-I WAS ONLY—
BAH! I WAS JUST IN TIME OR YOU WOULD HAVE TOLD EVERYTHING!
FROM NOW ON, I'M MAKING SURE THAT YOUR CHANGE OF HEART DOES NOT CHANGE MY FUTURE PLANS!

DONALD DUCK — First Love! — BY WALT DISNEY

YEP, PENNY'S A ONE-MAN PENGUIN... WON'T HAVE ANYTHING TO DO WITH ANYONE BUT ME!
